Ford, Brezhnev To Hold Siberia Summit Parley

For The First Time, Westerners Will Be Allowed In Bolshevik Site

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev will meet and talk for the first time Nov. 23 and 24 near Vladivostok in Siberia, the White House said today.

A joint U.S.-Soviet announcement issued by the White House said Ford and the Soviet Communist Party general secretary will "exchange views on matters of mutual interest."

It will mark the first time an American president has visited Asian Russia and one of the rare times the Soviets have allowed westerners to visit the area near the area since the Bolshevik revolution.

The Brezhnev meeting will be Ford's debut in face-to-face major power politics.

Diplomats said the Russians are anxious to get the feel of Ford as the late Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev measured President John F. Kennedy in Vienna and Brezhnev sized up former President Nixon in Moscow.

Ford will go to Siberia following a Nov. 19-22 visit to Japan and a Nov. 22-23 visit in Korea.

The joint announcement said: "It has been agreed that a working meeting between General Secretary of the Central Committee of the U.S.S.R. Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Ford wwill take place on Nov. 23-24, 1974, in the vicinity of Vladivostok to exchange views on matters of mutual interest.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger currently is in Moscow and made the final arrangements for the announcement. His work on pushing nuclear disarmament perhaps could figure in the Siberian summit.

The Kremlin has been anxious about Ford since the resignation of Nixon. Brezhnev designed his part of the East-West detente based on meetings with Nixon.

Diplomats say Brezhnev apparently wants to know, despite intelligence reports he receives, the stand of Ford on major issues such as disarmament.

In recent speeches Ford has stressed the priority of defeating inflation. But at the same time has stressed the need to continue a foreign policy drive aimed at what he again and again called in speeches "world peace."

Meanwhile, held a fifth meeting with Brezhnev before his scheduled departure for India tomorrow morning. U.S. officials said a joint communique on the results of four days of negotiations was expected tomorrow.

U.S. officials said both sides were still far apart on the Middle East, question, with the United States promoting talks between Israel and Egypt and Jordan on military disengagement and the Soviet Union calling for an early Geneva conference on the Middle East with the participation of Palestinian representatives.

$5 Billion In Utilities Hikes Ahead

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Americans may be facing more than $5 billion in hikes in phone, gas, electric and water bills.

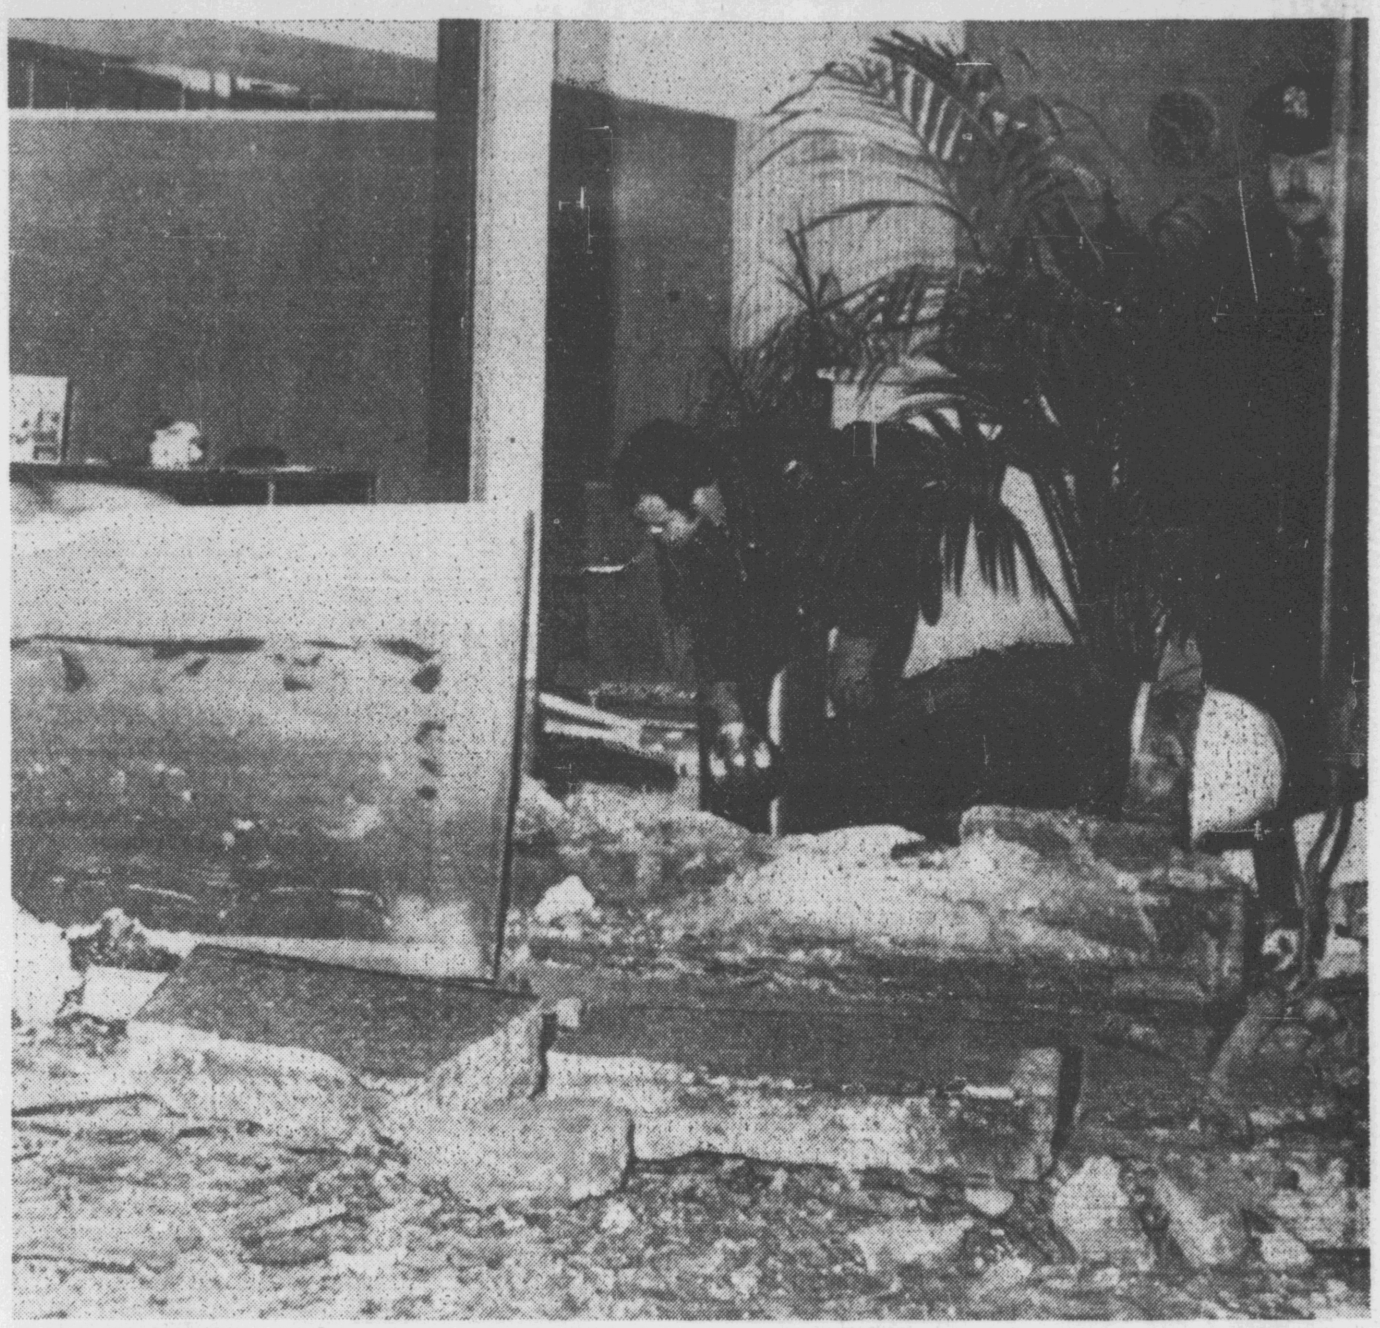
On a yearly basis that's more than $40 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

A UPI state-by-state survey of rate increase requests under consideration by public utility commissions shows that the $5 billion figure is a very conservative estimate. For example, Texas does not regulate public utilities. Other states could not furnish dollar figures on requested price increases.

What's more, many of the requested hikes are already in effect, pending official approval. In many states, earlier rate hikes have been pumping up monthly bills, and millions in other increases are being passed on to the consumer in the form of automatic adjustments to the cost of oil and gas.

In California, the state Public Utilities Commission is faced with a whopping $946.9 million in rate increase requests from electric, gas, telephone and water companies. New York state's rate hike bids total $446 million, Illinois' $400 million, New Jersey's $426 million, Pennsylvania's $350 million, Michigan's $276 million, and Ohio's $205 million.

Utility companies around the country are claiming that the price increases are absolutely necessary.



AFTERMATH — Policemen and bomb squad members search the debris-filled entrance to the Eastern Airlines building in New York City after a bomb explosion early this morning. Bombs rocked midtown and lower Manhattan every ten minutes for half an hour early today, shattering glass windows in large corporations and banks. (UPI Telephoto)

New York Wakes Up To Series Of Bombings; No One Is Hurt

NEW YORK (UPI) — Five bombs, apparently set by Puerto Rican nationalists protesting the "murderous policies of the Yankee government," exploded minutes apart in Manhattan today, shattering windows of banks and large corporations.

The Armed Forces of Puerto Rican National Liberation, who claimed credit for the blasts, demanded the release of five Puerto Ricans, including Oscar Collazo, convicted of an assassination attempt on President Truman in 1950.

No injuries were reported. Most of the damage consisted of broken windows, except in a midtown blast where the explosion ripped a steel door from its hinges.

"It sounded like the world was coming to an end," said Connon Washington, who works near the site of one of the explosions.

At 3:40 a.m., a man called the Associated Press offices in Rockefeller Center and said "listen carefully."

A woman took the phone and —in a thick Spanish accent — said she was a member of the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puerto Ricana (the Armed forces of Puerto Rican National Liberation) and "we have just bombed Yankee imperialist banks. Free all Puerto Rican political prisoners."

In a statement left for the newsman in a telephone booth on Broadway, the group said, in part:

OSCAR COLLAZO
Release is demanded

"These actions have been taken in memory of the Oct. 30, 1950, actions in Puerto Rico against Yankee colonial domination.

"These bombings are also to accentuate the seriousness of our demands to release five Puerto Rican political prisoners, the longest held political prisoners in this hemisphere and the immediate and unconditional independence of Puerto Rico.

"These corporations are responsible for the robbery and exploitation of the Third World" and for the "murderous policies of the Yankee government in Puerto Rico and Latin America."

In a nationalist uprising Oct. 30, 1950 in Puerto Rico, 27 persons were killed and 51 wounded.

At 9:25 a.m., a man with a thick Puerto Rican accent telephoned the offices of United Press International and announced: "I want to tell the people of the United States, I'm going to blow up all of Washington and New York unless the five political prisoners are released in 30 days."

"There's going to be trouble," the man said. "All the banks, all the big businesses in Washington and New York. I got a lot of people."

Two days later, Collazo and another man tried to shoot their way into Blair House next door to the White House where then President Truman was living while the White House was under renovation.

A White House guard was killed and two other persons were injured. Collazo's companion also was killed.

Collazowas sentenced to die on Aug. 1, 1952, but his sentence was commuted to life in prison.

After the initial explosion, blasts followed at 3:10 am. in a

Arms Race Heating Up After Test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arms control specialists say the Air Force's test launching of an intercontinental ballistic missile from an airplane may mean the nuclear arms race will be harder to control.

The Pentagon announced yesterday that a Minuteman missile —the kind now installed in underground silos — was rolled out of the back door of a C5A cargo plane off the California coast and then ignited and launched in midair.

Pentagon strategists have been concerned for some years that the Soviet Union's even larger and more powerful missiles could be targeted on American missiles buried on silos across the plains states.

"Mobile" missiles carried in trucks, railway cars or planes would always be in different positions, so the Soviets would never know where they were and hence be unable to destroy them in a first strike.

Offficals of the Arms Control Association, a private a group pressing for weapons limits, said yesterday that any move to deploy air-launched missiles would rapidly make meaningless the Soviet-American limits

VA Hospitals Said Inadequate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Veterans Administration said today that a former servicemen is "taking a chance" by seeking emergency treatment at a VA hospital because critical staff and space shortages have compromised the agency's ability to offer medical care.

In a report as thick as a telephone book, the VA asked Congress for an immediate $190 million increase in this year's badget and a $236 million hike next year so it can attract more staff and retain the medical personnel it now has.

The money would also be used to improve the physical facilities of the nation's 171 VA hospitals.

Dr. John D. Chase, chief VA medical director, told a news conference the most urgent need "unquestionably" was to provide more staffing so a veteran could get adequate emergency care at any hour of the day or night.

"In some situations it's our feeling that he's taking a chance of getting it now," he said, identifying nights, weekends and holiday periods as the times when the problem was at its worst. Asked if any patient's life had been jeopardized by the situation, Case replied: "No. What we are addressing ourselves to in the report is the assurance that quality care can be given."

In at least one hospital, he said, a single registered nurse had been required to care for four wards during the night shift.

"Many of the deficiencies that have been identified in this study are of this type and represent a clear compromise of that hospital's ability to guarantee high quality and timely care to every patient," the report said.

Former President Richard M. Nixon ordered the VA to survey the conditions of its hospitals last March in the wake of widespread reports about inadequate facilities and care.

Chase said President Ford had seen the report and "recog-

Cong Claims U.S. Ordered 'Heavy Raid'

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong said South Vietnamese bombers raided its headquarters north of Saigon today on instructions froo the United States, causing "very heavy" damages and casualties.

The South Vietnamese command was unavailable for comment.

Viet Cong press officer Maj. Phuong Nam said there were "many air raids" during a 30-minute period this morning on Loc Ninh, 75 miles north of Saigon.

"The Nguyen Van Thieu regime and the United States which controls the air raids and issue the commands to carry them out will bear full responsibility for every result of this brutality they caused," am said.

TURN BACK THOSE HANDS OF TIME . . .

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten straight months of Daylight Saving Time will end tomorrow when the nation goes on standard time for the four winter months.

The nation will set back its clocks one hour at 2 a.m. tomorrow, the result of congressional action that ended the nation's experiment with year-round daylight time.

Under the new legislation, the nation will stay on standard time until 2 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, 1975.

The year-round daylight time experiment was designed to save fuel during the country's energy shortage. The Senate Commerce Committee reported the experiment resulted in about 100,000 barrels of oil per day being saved during the first four months of 1974.

The change will not affect eastern Indiana, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa, all of which remained on standard time during the experiment.

Ford Flayed On Freedom Bill Stance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has sent Congress his suggestions for changes in a bill extending the Freedom of Information Act, but his effort was promptly denounced as an outright attempt to kill the bill.

Ford vetoed the measure last week but promised he would send Congress a list of changes that would make it acceptable to him. An effort to override the veto will take place as scheduled when Congress returns Nov. 18, according to congressional sources.

In a letter to the leader of each house, Ford said the bill he vetoed would have the effect of "depriving a defendant of a right to a fair trial, invading personal privacy, compromising our law enforcement operations and endangering the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel."

The bill would have reduced the number of investigatory files and other materials that government agencies could keep secret. The agencies also would have had to prove disclosure of their files would have cut their effectiveness.

A congressional staffer said Ford proposed technical changes that would gut the purpose of that section of the bill and in effect retain the current secretiveness of the law enforcement and other investigatory agencies.

Ford also suggested that Congress change its bill to increase the time limit for agencies to respond for requests for information from 10 to 30 days. He would expand the time limit from 10 to 15 days for those cases which involve "unusual circumstances."

The bill sent to Ford by voice vote in the Senate and 349-2 in the House would have required the government to offer proof in court that release od certain files would damage national security or law enforcement effectiveness and would allow a judge to decide without limitations whether the material had been justifiably classified.

Brown, Flournoy Exchange Charges, Court Black Voters

Democrat Brown told a Watts rally yesterday that the Ronald Reagan administration has failed to keep its promises to curb crime in California. Flournoy is more of the same, Brown added.

Republican Flournoy told black ministers in San Francisco that his record of public support for civil rights dates back to 1964, when it was not popular for a Republican to favor open housing laws.

Both candidates ranged over a score of other issues yesterday — breaking little new ground on either side.

Although they are slated to address the same audience today — an editors conference sponsored by United Press International — Brown and Flournoy are separated by several hours. Democratic U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston and his Republican rival, state Sen. H. L. Richardson, are also on agenda of the UPI editors.

Flournoy told businessmen at San Francisco's Commonwealth Club that development of land use planning at the state level would be one of the top priorities of a Flournoy administration.

He said he supported leaving planning in the hands of local government, but added: "The state must have the tools — injunctions or otherwise — to protect its overall land plan from non-conforming uses at the local level."

Flournoy also repeated his promise to regularly set time aside as governor to meet with citizens and hear their complaints and suggestions.

Brown emphasized the law and order issue in his Watts appearance.

"Are the streets any safer after eight years of Ronald Reagan?" he asked.

"No," the predominantly black audience replied in unison.

Later, in an interview at his $70,000 home in the Laurel Canyon district of Los Angeles, the 36-year-old secretary of state said he has made no final decision on who he would appoint to any state post if elected governor, and that he might form a committee to screen and recruit prospective candidates.

"I've given it some very tentative, tentative thought," Brown said. But he wouldn't take it any further than that.

"It's presumptious, it's just not the right time to do it before the election," Brown said. But, he added, "at 10 p.m. or 11 p.m. election night, come back and I will elaborate my thinking on this issue."

Dean Ends Testimony After Nine-Day Stint

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Dean III concluded nine days of testimony yesterday in the Watergate cover-up trial, during which he cited names, times, places and discussions allegedly linking the five defendants to the early stages of the cover-up.

Dean's testimony offered no new "bombshells" in the complex case of political conspiracy, and defense lawyers could do little but sit and listen as Dean — his voice unwavering and his composure never failing —went over and over the charges that have made him the star prosecution witness.

When it was their turn to question Dean, defense lawyers didn't really seek to refute his evidence but instead tried to discredit Dean as a witness — bringing up his own crimes for which he is now in prison and attempting to convince the jury that his clear memory was part of a deal with the prosecution for a lighter sentence.

Tempers flared during Dean's stint on the stand, prompting Judge John J. Sirica continually to interrupt the proceedings to confer with lawyers in private bench conferences and often lecture the attorneys on proper courtroom procedure.

When yesterday's session ended and before the jury was ushered from the courtroom, Sirica asked Dean how long he had been on the witness stand. "Nine days," replied Dean.

That was a slip of the tongue by Dean, who was on the stand three days last week and five days this week.

"My advice to you is this — you get off this stand as fast as you can and get out of this courtroom before some other lawyer thinks of another question to ask you," Sirica told Dean.

The defendants in the case are former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, who headed Richard Nixon's re-election effort at the time of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters; former White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, and former Nixon campaign aides Kenneth Wells Parkinson and Robert Mardian.

The second witness, who will take the stand on Monday morning, will be convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

Driving Cases Not Hampered

Approximately 50 drunken driving cases in Marin Municipal Court will not be hampered by a California Supreme Court decision on chemical alcohol tests, Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said yesterday.

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Thursday that the decision could result in dismissal of the cases because it ordered the chemical test results excluded as evidence.

Bales said the court actually ruled that Marin and other counties now must save breath samples of persons who select the "breathalyzer" machine test when arrested for drunken driving.

But the ruling will apply only in the future and not to past cases, he said.

Marin has not used the breathalyzer machine for more than a yar, Bales said.

Ford Pay Cut Proposal Aired

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — President Ford should set an example for Congress and the nation by taking a $25,000 salary cut, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said yesterday.

Symington told a news conference that such a move might inspire members of Congress to vote themselves a 10 per cent salary cut to help curb inflation and hold down the cost of running the government.

'Toy' Explodes Killing Child

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 7-year-old girl Thursday found what she thought was a toy wrapped in newspapers, brought it home and hid it beneath her bed.

The toy was a bomb.

It exploded yesterday, killing her and injuring her mother and two sisters.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Vault Guard Charged

CHICAGO (UPI) — An Armored Express Corp. guard with alleged crime syndicate contacts yesterday was charged by the FBI with taking part in the $4.3 million looting of the company's vault last weekend.

Marrera

Richard Held, special agent in charge of the Chicago FBI office, said Ralph Marrera, who was the guard the night the vault was looted, was being sought on charges of burglary, larceny and theuse of explosive devices.

The FBI issued a nationwide bulletin for Marrera, and said he was considered armed and extremely dangerous.

The filing of charges against Marrera, 31, was the first big break in the effort to solve the heist of cash exceeding any previous burglary or robbery in U. S. history. The haul was second only to the $7 million take in England's Great Train Robbery.

Chicago police last night read a bulletin quoting the latest loss estimate in the burglary as $4.3 million — up about $400,000 from the previous estimate.

'Financial Deal'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Confessed assassin James Earl Ray testified yesterday he incriminated himself in the murder of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. "for a few dollars" and was forced to plead guilty in a financial deal with his attorneys.

Conclave Ends

The bishops voted last night on the final text of their recommendations for evangelization in the modern world to be presented to Pope Paul VI, who will deliver the closing address.

Protesters To Parade

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Leaders of an antitextbook crusade which rought violence, mine strikes and school boycotts to this region are planning a parade for Monday in an effort to gain sympathy for their cause.

The Rev. Marvin Horan, a spokesman for protesters against "dirty" textbooks in Kanawha County schools, said yesterday he expected hundreds of parents to march.

Horan called on "all industry in the Kanawha Valley" to close down so employees could join the parade.

Fanfani Quits

ROME (UPI) — The center-left coalition that ruled Italy for 12 years is dead and the dominant Christian Democrats will have to choose between their feuding partners, politicians said today.

Christian Democratic leader Amintore Fanfani yesterday gave up trying to get the Socialists and Social Democrats back together in another government and resigned as premier designate.

Mercy Slaying

READING, England (UPI) — Mrs. Elizabeth Wise, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth, has been given a year's probation for the mercy killing of her blind and deaf 10-month-old daughter.

Mrs. Wise, 37, granddaughter of Princess Alice of Athlone, the Queen's aunt, yesterday pleaded innocent to murdering her daughter, Emma Charlotte Abel Wise, last June, but admitted manslaughter on the grounds of diminished responsibility.

The defense told the court the daughter developed a virus shortly after birth, causing blindness and loss of hearing.

When the baby was 10 months old, doctors told the mother there was no more hope.

Plans Still On

ST. PETER PORT, Guernsey, Channel Islands (UPI) — Michael Wilson, 29-year-old son of a Welsh miner, said today the publicity will not stop him from marrying Pennsylvania millionairess Rachel Fitler, 76-year-old aunt by marriage to Vice President-designate Nelson Rockefeller.

Wilson told newsmen, "I'm not calling off any marriage. The publicity doesn't worry me."

Crisis In Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, accused of amassing an enormous fortune while inflation rocked Japan, today faced his worst political crisis since coming to power more than two years ago.

Sources close to the prime minister said the dismissal of parliament or even the resignation of the Tanaka cabinet is possible.

Blacks Assured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has assured black civil rights leaders that the Justice Department will prosecute persons illegally resisting school integration in racially troubled South Boston.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP's Washington office, told reporters Ford "made it abundantly clear that federal power would be used against people who unlawfully interfere with school busing in Boston. . ."

Ford met with eight civil rights leaders for 70 minutes yesterday.

Pair Arrested

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Two men were arrested by police yesterday in connection with the abduction of a prominent businessman who was forced to pay a $20,000 ransom for his release. Police recovered $19,788 of the $20,000 ransom.

Teen Gunned Down

BELFAST (UPI) — Six months ago a Roman Catholic family fled the predominantly Protestant Rathcoole suburb of Belfast after Protestant extremists hurled a gasoline bomb into their home and threatened to murder the children.

Last night the family's 18-year-old boy slipped back to Rathcoole to visit the girlfriend he left behind.

He lay in critical condition in a hospital today, gunned down in the street by an assassination squad, police said.

Nixon Said Bleeding From Gums

LONG BEACH (UPI)–Former president Richard Nixon, suffering from phlebitis, bleeds from the gums and "looks like hell," it was reported today, but his doctors have not decided yet whether to operate.

Nixon went into his fourth day today in Long Beach Memorial Hospital, under treatment for the condition in his left leg that has grown steadily worse over the past four months.

Nixon's physician, Dr. John Lungren, said yesterday that he and a consultant "are satisfied with the progress former President Nixon is now exhibiting,"but that "the potential for surgery is still a possibility."

Nixon is being given anticoagulant drugs to thin his blood, combatting the clots that have formed throughout the veins of his left leg.

"A minor side effect consists of a small amount of bleeding from the gums," Lungren said in a statement to newsmen. The bleeding is not serious enough to halt use of anticoagulant drugs that cause it as long as the drug therapy is "closely monitored," he said.

The Los Angeles Times today quoted an unidentified person who had seen Nixon in the hospital as describing him as pale and drawn.

Nixon had "the look of a man in pain. Frankly, he looked like hell," the observer said.

Mrs. Nixon visited her husband for three hours at the hospital yesterday and was expected to return today. He spoke by telephone to his daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox.

Nixon, who entered the hospital unexpectedly Wednesday night, is undergoing tests to determine whether he is among the approximately 9 per cent of phlebitis patients who cannot be helped by drug therapy.

The phlebitis is a disorder of the veins which causes clots to form. The danger is that a large clot can break loose and drift through the vein to lodge in a vessel feeding blood to a vital organ, such as the brain, heart or lung, cutting off circulation and causing death.

Nixon spent 11 days in the hospital for phlebitis treatment, and was released Oct. 4 to return to his estate at San Clemente.

Even before the most recent flareup, Lungren had said that Nixon would not be well enough to appear as a witness at the Watergate coverup trial for at least a month, and perhaps three months.

Master Plan Review Set

The Novato City Council will hold a hearing on a proposed neighborhood shopping center when it meets at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House.

Councilmen will review a master plan for the 5.4 acre shopping center at the northeast corner of South Novato and Redwood boulevards.

The council also must select a meeting place for future council meetings since the council chambers in the community house are being remodeled.

TIME MACHINE — Colette Pratt of Strawberry, a publicist for Western Airlines, took a trip in a "time machine" this week. It took her from San Francisco to Anchorage, Alaska in only two hours, three minutes.

Space Scientists Find A 'Still' In The Skies

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A scientist reported yesterday that alcohol has been identified in space.

It turned out to be ethanol, or ethyl alcohol, the kind made on earth from grain.

Palmer called the discovery a "milestone," saying scientists have been searching for four years to find ethyl alcohol in space. The 12-man research team, working with newly installed instruments that made the observatory's radio telescope 10 times more sensitive, discovered alcohol in clouds of hydrogen near the center of the Milky Way.

Alcohol is formed in space by a complicated chemical process far different from the fermentation employed to make alcoholic drinks on earth, Palmer said.

The research team included scientists from the University of Chicago, the University of Maryland, the Center for Astrophysics at Cambridge, England, the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization of Australia, the National Bureau of Standards and the observatory.

Horse Rules To Be Studied

Staff members from the Marin County Planning Department will discuss a new ordinance aimed at regulating the keeping of horses Monday at 8 p.m. at the Civic Center.

The proposed ordinance, an amendment to the county zoning code, would require a county use permit for the grazing, breeding, boarding or training of more than one horse per acre or more than 25 horses.

Following Monday's discussion, the ordinance will be forwarded to the county planning commission for its consideration.

3 Minutes To Anchorage

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Actually, is is a machine that saves time in large chunks by gobbling formidable distances with a speed faster than sound. Twice as fast.

It is the current state of the art in the commercial aircraft industry: The Concorde Supersonic Transport.

Consider: Miss Pratt, a publicist for Western Airlines, left her apartment in Strawberry Wednesday morning for San Francisco airport. After coffee, juice and champagne, she boarded the needle-nosed jet at 9:30 a.m. At 9:33 a.m., she and the other 31 passengers were in Anchorage, Alaska, a distance of 2,700 miles.

(There is a two-hour time difference between San Francisco and Anchorage. When the plane left the Bay Area, it was 9 a.m. but only 7 a.m. in Alaska. The trip took two hours and three minutes.)

"Had we been on business in Anchorage, we could have left home after breakfast, boarded the Concorde, worked six hours in Anchorage and been home for late dinner in either San Francisco or Los Angeles," Miss Pratt said.

"The fare, according to estimates, would have been the same as first class on a conventional airliner, between $400 and $450. No overnight hotel at $40 per night, no extras, yet a day's work done.

Impressive, to be sure. But, according to Miss Pratt, the actual flight was nothing unusual, and that's the beauty of it. "You expect to be flattened against your seat by the G forces," she said yesterday morning over coffee at her home. "When you land, you expect to be thrown out of your seat by the braking action. In reality, you cannot feel a thing. I didn't even know I had landed."

To her, comparing the $50 million Concorde with present commercial planes, say the 747, is like comparing apples and oranges. For one thing, the Concorde is relatively small, "almost dainty and very feminine," she said. "Everyone referred to the plane as 'she.' "

Built jointly by British Aircraft Corp. and Aerospatiale, a French firm, the plane is 204 feet long and 40 feet high at the rear fin, with a wingspan of 84 feet.

The inside is tubular and a little cramped. There certainly isn't the space to stroll or hang out at the piano bar, as on the 747. But seats are leather and plush and the interior appears to have been designed by a French courturier, she says.

The main difference, though, is speed. The 747 cruises at about 570 miles per hour, considerably below the speed of sound. The Concorde, powered by four Rolls Royce engines capable of 38,050 pounds of thrust each, cruises at 1,400 miles per hour, roughly twice the speed of sound or, in pilot's jargon, Mach 2. It gathers this incredible swiftness within 20 minutes of takeoff.

Because of the thunderclap it creates when smashing the sound barrier, it is permitted to reach supersonic speeds only over the ocean. It is expected to be in service on trans-Atlantic flights, carrying about 100 passengers, in 1976.

Miss Pratt, 40, is an experienced air traveler, having logged more than a million miles on planes. And like most other long-distance flyers, she suffers from the almost paralyzing physical and mental malaise known as jet lag. The supersonic transport cuts in half the duration of long-distance travel, she says, permitting its passengers to arrive with a minimum of discomfort.

"On a conventional jet, it takes about six hours from New York to Paris," she explained. "That's 12 hours on the clock. So if you leave New York at midnight, you arrive in Paris for lunch. The Concorde can make the same flight in about three hours. In its case, you would arrive in Paris for breakfast, about 9 a.m. That's one of the beauties, you can eat meals at approximately their proper time."

Earlier this week, the Concorde hustled from Mexico City to San Francisco in two hours on its introductory West Coast flight. After a brief stopover in Anchorage on Wednesday, it headed for Los Angeles and then for Acapulco.

"As a postscript to my trip," she wrote in an article for Travel Agent magazine, "I left Anchorage after lunch at 3 p.m. on the fastest direct flight back to San Francisco. . .I was home at 11:30 p.m. With the two-hour time change included, the Concorde would have had me back in San Francisco at 7 p.m., home at 8 for dinner."

Victimless Crime Bill Is Proposed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Board of Supervisors Monday will receive a proposal that local police cite — instead of arrest — persons charged with possession of small amounts of marijuana or with certain sex offenses.

A committee Thursday approved the plan, under which cited persons would still face prosecution.

Reinecke Flays 'Whitewash'

PLACERVILLE (UPI) — Former California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, a Republican who lost his office in the Watergate scandal, says the pardon of former President Richard Nixon was a "whitewash" and he wouldn't accept one if offered.

Reinecke, convicted of lying to a Senate investigating committee, told a high school class Thursday that Nixon "hasn't any more rights as an individual in breaking the law than you or I do. It was wrong to whitewash it."

After the Nixon pardon, Reinecke said he called a friend at the White House and said, "I don't know what else you've got in mind, but I don't want one."

Reinecke, who had been Gov. Roald Reagan's pick to succeed him in the governor's mansion, was forced to resign his post after conviction of lying to the committee about an ITT offer to help bankroll the last GOP convention originally planned for San Diego.

Shoreline instead of property line.

When you own a condominium home at Shelter Bay, your front yard changes with the tide. Because the homes are down over the water on the edge of Richardson Bay in Southern Marin. A pretty nifty feature.

There are some other nifty features to owning a home at Shelter Bay.

One. No sky-high rents to pay, or a landlord to raise them sky-higher.

Two. You own your own home with all its Marin County potential for appreciation.

Three. Every monthly mortgage payment builds up your equity in your home, and the interest payments on your home loan can be a tax deduction for you.

Four. No fuss, no bother—all grounds and landscaping are kept shipshape for you.

Five. The heated swimming pool.

Six. The tennis court.

Come take a look at the stunning condominium homes now for sale at Shelter Bay. (From $43,000 to over $70,000.)

Our shoreline is a pretty beautiful property line.

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Electrical power was expected to be restored during the weekend through lines damaged in the recent bombing of 11 towers, a Bonneville Power Administration spokesman said yesterday.

HE FLEW TOURIST

Wornum's Wife Used Air Ticket

By ERIK INGRAM

Marin County Superviosr Michael Wornum did not use a first class ticket he bought to fly to Washington, D.C. on county business in August.

Wornum, a candidate for the state Assembly, earlier this month drew sharp criticism over use of the first class ticket from his Republican opponent, A. Alan Hill charged Wornum with wasting taxpayers' money by traveling first cabin instead of Tourist.

Wornum responded by saying it was the practice of the Board of Supervisors to fly first class.

He said he thought it was worth an extra $100 to arrive rested and refreshed.

Yesterday, however, he acknowledged that his wife, who had decided to go along at the last minute, had used the more expensive seat.

Wornum said that originally only he, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. and Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino were planning to go to Washingto to talk about proposed expansion of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Then Arrigoni decided to take his wife along at his own expense. Wornum's wife and son decided to go too.

There were no more seats available on the first flight, so Wornum said he tried to get three tourist class seats on another non-stop flight, but found only two available.

He said he decided he and his son would take the second flight, while Mrs. Wornum would accompany the Arrigonis and Godino in the first class seats.

The second flight was scratched because of mechanical problems. Wornum and his son hopped a "milk run" which stopped in Kansas City and Cleveland before touching down in Baltimore.

From there, the supervisor traveled to Washington by taxi to meet his wife who had arrived five hours earlier.

Burton's Record On Voting Told

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — John L. Burton, D-Sixth District, voted for a bill appropriating $4.5 billion this fiscal year for public works and water power development by the Army Corps of Engineers, Atomic Energy Commission, and various Interior Department agencies.

Burton also voted for a bill authorizing $1.7 billion over two years for health revenue sharing, family planning, community mental health centers, and migrant health.

He voted for a bill appropriating $3.29 billion this fiscal year for the Department of Transportation and related agencies.

He voted for a bill increasing detention benefits for American civilians interned during the Vietnam War.

All these bills passed the House.

However, Burton voted against an amendment making the auto seat belt interlock system optional rather than mandatory. This bill, with the amendment, also passed.

John Burton's votes on these roll calls, as tabulated by Government Research Corp., were identical with those of his brother, Philip Burton, who represents the Fifth District in San Francisco.

Austin Seeks LBJ Play Funds

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Austn's parks and recreation department is seeking $4,650 from the National Endowment for the Arts to produce a play about the early life of Lyndon B. Johnson as part of the bicentennial celebration.

City councilmen approved the grant application Thursday.

Total cost of the project will be $9,300. The parks department is expected to provide $3,952 in services and $1,058 in cash.

2 Persons Hospitalized After Crashes In Marin

Two persons were hospitalized and three others suffered minor injuries in two traffic accidents in Marin in the last 24 hours.

A San Francisco man who stopped on the Golden Gate bridge to change a flat tire early today was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital with a broken jaw received when another auto plowed into the rear of his car.

The Highway Patrol said Frank Martin Yates, 21, was a passenger in a car driven by Diane Carrigan, 30, of Mill Valley. Both were changing the tire when the southbound car was hit by an auto driven by Willie Andrew Anderson, 47, of San Francisco, according to officers.

Anderson was treated for minor injuries at the hospital, then booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of drunken driving. He was released on his own recognizance to appear Friday in Marin Municipal Court.

In the second accident a 15-year-old Novato youth was hurt when his motorcycle and a car collided at 3 p.m. yesterday on a private road through the Pacheco Ranch in Novato.

Kenneth Ashley Sullivan was reported in satisfactory condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael with broken wrists and a broken leg.

Officers said Sullivan was hurt when his motorcycle collided with a car operated by David Alan Gralish, 19, of Albany. A passenger, Michael Peters, 15, of Novato, was treated at the hospital for minor injuries.

Tam Board Plans Study

The Tamalpais High School District boad will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. Monday to discuss a study of its programs, staffing and fiscal problems.

The study, aimed at cutting costs, was presented to trustees last week. On Monday the district board will review the draft and appoint a 12-member planning board to determine how best to cut district expenses.

Trustees are trying to figure out which programs or personnel can be eliminated to keep the budget within the limits imposed by state law, declining enrollment and inflation.

ARMS

on silo-launched and submarine-carried missiles that were negotiated in 1972.

They said a mobile system is unnecessary because the nation's submarine missiles are already immune from attack and carry enough nuclear punch to destroy everything of value in the Soviet Union, even if all the Minutemen in silos were wiped out.

Pentagon officals emphasized that the test launch Thursday was purely a test. They said there were no plans at this time to build a fleet of such aircraft. The development could be used as a bargaining chip in Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with the Soviet Union. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow Wednesday to pursue those negotiations.

Arms control specialists said mobile missiles if deployed would complicate arms negotiations because they would make it very difficult to count the number of missiles involved. Now spy satellites can count silos and also missile submarines.

LAW IN ACTION

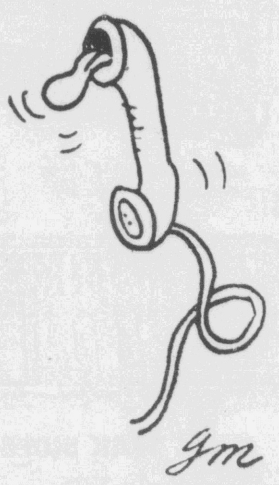
From the State Bar Of California

Phone Pests Hard To Stop

"Hello. We want you to give some money for the Children's Fund. Are you listening?" "No!" Clunk.

Telephone sales people can be a bother. They sometimes bother citizens at home, businesses and policing agencies. Isn't it possible to pass a law against them as nuisances? Well, there are problems if we do. Many are in fact legitimate charities. Denying them the use of telephones may violate their first amendment rights. Everyone has the right to speak. Government can't stop them without very exceptional reasons. And religious charities have the right to preach and sell their religious materials. Licensing those sales would be an undue restriction on religious activity and on free speech.

Can't we do something about telephone pests? Very little, say the courts.



About all the lawmakers can do is license business activities. When churches, charities or other civic groups go into a business, then regulations are proper. Such licensing must be narrowly drawn. The law cannot be used to censor a legitimate telephone call.

In one case, police thought a telephone subscriber was using his phone to promote gambling business. The police chief asked the phone company to cut off his phone. The subscriber objected vehemently. He sued and won. True, the phone may not be used for illegal activites. But the phone is also a way of exercising free speech. Before the phone could be cut off, the Public Utilities Commission should at least give the person a due process hearing.

In another case, the PUC adopted a rule that recorded phone messages must identify the sponsor. One group has recorded far out messages — often filled with hate. The PUC wanted to make them identify themselves. The court said this was a form of censorship. The right to free speech includes the right to remain anonymous. If there was any slander or harassment, there were other ways to deal with it later. The State could not cut off the recordings in advance.

There are laws against obscene phone calls. Civil remedies are available for invasion of privacy, harassment, or disturbing one's peace. To cut off the use of the phone in advance runs afoul of the first amendment.

Meredith Seeks Spot On Ballot

GULFPORT, Miss. (UPI) — A three-judge federal panel is scheduled to hear arguments Monday in Jackson on a petition by civil rights activist James Meredith requesting that he be allowed to run for Congress in the 4th District as an Independent.

Meredith's qualifying petition was rejected by the state Election Board on grounds he gave up his right to run as an Independent when he participated in the June 4 Democratic primary.

Churchill Book

NEW YORK (AP) — The hundredth anniversary of Winston Churchill's birth is Nov. 30, and among the books to commemorate the occasion is Rand McNally's new "Winston Churchill: A Pictorial Life History." According to the book, 18-year-old Winston once complained to his mother, "I can never do anything right." Yet on his 90th birthday, greetings poured in addressed simply "To The Greatest Man Alive."

Dr. Pike Quits As Health Chief

Dr. Catherine C. Pike, chairman of the Marin County Mental Health Advisory Board, has resigned because of dissension on the board.

Dr. Pike announced her resignation as chairman in a letter to county supervisors. She said she will continue to serve out her term as a regular board member.

"In recent months, dissension on our board has become increasingly difficult. This has contributed, within the past four months, to the decision of three of our most experienced board members to resign and of a fourth to refuse reappointment," she said.

"Under the circumstances, I can no longer continue to carry the responsibility of chairmanship . . ."

In her two-page letter she complained of internal fighting within the mental health community.

car near Chase Manhattan Plaza shattering windows in the Chemical, Chase Manhattan and Marine Midland banks. A car was demolished and several others were damaged. Windows broke in nearby buildings, up to the eighth floor in one building.

A third blast went off at 3:20 a.m., outside the Banco de Ponce; and a fourth at 3:30 a.m on posh Park Avenue at the Union Carbide Building. At 3:35 a.m. a fifth bomb exploded, also on Park Avenue, near the Lever Brothers Building.

"They are not playing," one officer said of the terrorist group.

Passersby standing outside the Exxon Building began running when they heard the blasts.

One youth shouted, "the revolution has started," as he ran from the area.

He Forgot Most Important Part Of His Wardrobe

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill wore a dark suit and black tie Wednesday night, but one member of the audience thought something was missing.

"Where is your WIN button?" Sawhill was asked.

"That's a good question," he replied. "I'm embarrased I don't have it on."

Sawhill said the button was in his briefcase.

The buttons boost President Ford's "Whip Inflation Now" program.

Sen. Rodda To Speak

Sen. Albert Rodda, chairman of the state Senate Education Committee, will discuss Marin County schools' concerns at a dinner meeting at 7 p.m. Nov. 22 at Caleruega Hall, Dominican College.

Dr. George Stone, Fairfax School District trustee, will persent the county schools education and legislative interests at the meeting, sponsored by the Marin County School Boards Association, the county schools office and the Tamalpais Union High School District legislative task force.

Dinner cost is $6.50.

nizes its importance."

Ford ordered the VA to work closely with the Office of Management and Budget to determine how much extra funding should be requested. Chase refused to say if the Administration fully supported all the money proposals.

Difficulty in recruiting doctors, nurses and other staff members because of lower pay than that offered by private hospitals or private practice.

Limited numbers of surgeons who can provide such highly specialized skills as caring for paraplegics. He said the VA must compete with private and public hospitals for such specialists, but can not provide them either the salaries or the expensive facilities of private hospitals.

A shortage of space and adequate equipment, which results in overcrowding and reduced standards of care.

Complex eligibility standards which confuse veterans. The report asked Congress to simplify what Chase called "a hodgepodge of requirements" established over the last 50 years.

The report was quick to state that VA care meets standards of the medcical profession, and said that VA hospital employes give quality care under the burdens of lack of staff and outdated equipment. The problem, it said, is to assure that each veteran gets good care.

"Care on a drab, crowded, noisy ward may be excellent from the technical viewpoint of treatment of the disease but is clearly inadequate for treatment of the whole patient ..." the report concluded.

"Space deficiencies may typically produce crowding, but commonly also create situations in wtich the provision of care is compromised through delay and lack of convenient necessary facilities or services," it said.

In the situation of one nurse for four wards the report said "we know that the quality of care is compromised —whether or not it has been for any specific patient on the wards at the time of a survey."

Chase said the VA was losing its full time doctors because of a $36,000 salary ceiling imposed by Congress.

OBITUARIES

Ecologist Mrs. Nelson Dead At 62

Margaret Nelson, a longtime conservationist and a Marin resident for more than 20 years, died yesterday at a local hospital after a long illness. She was 62.

A native of Bismarck, N.D., Mrs. Nelson lived in Rhinelander, Wisc., much of her life. She and her husband, Kenneth, moved to Marin in the early 1950s. The couple, who had been married 39 years, had lived in Mill Valley for the last 15 years.

Active in conservationist affairs, Mrs. Nelson was a member of the Sierra Club. She used to spend much of her time hiking on Mount Tamalpais. So a private memorial gathering will be held on the mountain soon.

In addition to her conservation work, Mrs. Nelson was active in Democratic Party affairs, and in local school district issues.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by two sons, Robin R. Nelson of Berkeley, and Gregory G. Nelson of Mill Valley; two daughters, Jennifer J. Marvin and Deborah D. Nelson; both of Mill Valley; a brother, Thoralf (Ted) Hornboe, and a sister, Jennie Berry, both of Mill Valley; and three grandchildren.

No funeral is planned.

Contributions to the Leukemia Society of America, Bay Area Chapter, of 323 Geary Boulevard, San Francisco, are preferred.

GRACE M. WILKINSON

Grace M. Wilkinson, a 10-year Marin resident, died Thursday at a local retirement residence after a lengthy illness. She was 72.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Wilkinson lived most of her life in Freeport, Long Island, N.Y., and worked 34 years as a secretary in the comptroller's office in Nassau County.

After her retirement, she moved to Greenbrae to be near two sons living in the Bay Area. She moved two years ago to The Redwoods in Mill Valley.

Mrs. Wilkinson is survived by her sons, Louis A. Wilkinson of Sausalito and Coast Guard Capt. John M. Wilkinson of Hayward; a brother, George R. Mortimer of Arlington, Va.; a sister, Lorene M. Rogers of Victor, N.Y.; and two grandchildren.

Bomber To Make Its Debut Today

PALMDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Climaxing 12 years of design and debate, the prototype of the B1 bomber, the most expensive weapons system in history, rolls out the hangar door today to face flight tests to see if it works and controversy over whether it is needed.

Hearing On Fired Planner Continues

The Marin County Personnel Commission will resume its hearing Wednesday into charges that County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell improperly fired a staff planner.

Margot S. Parke, who had worked half-time in the planning department before she was dismissed earlier this month, protested Thursday that the action did not conform with county regulations. She requested reinstatement.

Her attorney, Richard H. Breiner, said his client was fired without cause after her one-year probationary period ended.

He told commissioners she was hired Oct. 5, 1973 and fired effective Oct. 5, 1974 — one day over the 365-day period in which an employee can be released without cause.

Additionally, he said, Mrs. Parke received only one evaluation of her performance — after nine months — even though county personnel rules require three evaluations at different times during the year.

Commissioners have asked that Von Gundell appear at the next meeting to explain his failure to make the required evaluations.

Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing Von Gundell, argued that since Mrs. Parke was a half-time employee, the 365-day probationary period in the Civil Service ordinance does not apply to her.

Instead, Godino read a section of the county's personnel rules which say a part-time employee's probationary period is 2080 hours. Thus, he continued, Mrs. Parke was still on probation at the time she was released since she had worked less than 2080 hours.

Two personnel commissioners, Ben Farlatti and Robert B. McCreadie, indicated they were willing to uphold Mrs. Parke's appeal because of "a moral obligation in this gray area."

"If she is fired (at this late date), it should be for cause," McCreadie said.

She had spent the year working on the Tamalpais Valley and Stinson Beach community plans. The Tamalpais plan was reviewed by the county planning commission on Monday.

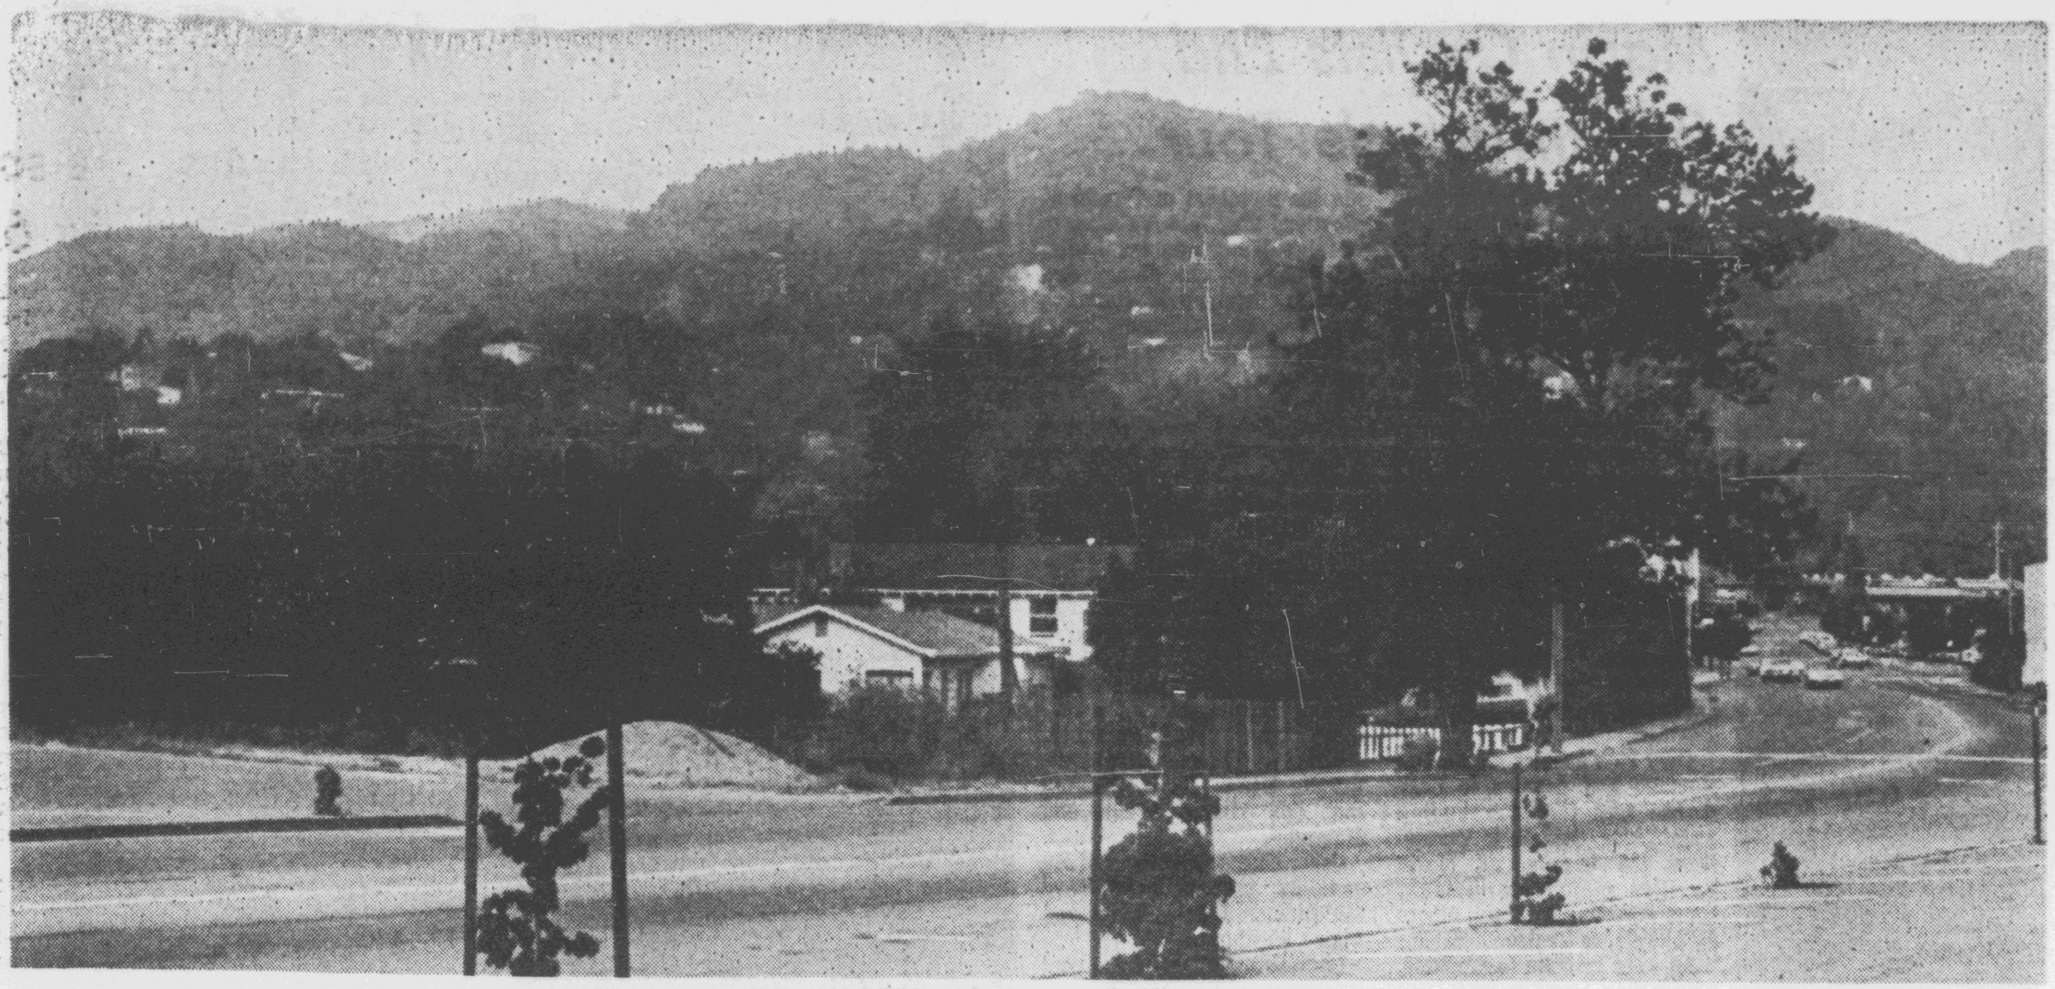
The commission will consider the appeal again Wednesday at 6 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Energy Team Turns To Wood

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Wood could supply as much as 20 per cent of the nation's energy use, according to a Stanford University research team.

It especially suggested increased use of eucalyptus, a tree which grows quickly and can flourish on poor land. The team said eucalyptus wood could be converted into gas and electricity for a little less than energy produced from coal.

The team of students and faculty from Stanford's Institute of Energy Studies focused on feasible energy sources on the year 2020 when oil and natural gas resources are no longer expected to be able to supply much of the world's energy needs.



IN MEMORY OF PAM

The family of Pamela P. Ettinger of Fairfax, who was killed last month in an automobile accident, has offered to donate nearly $80,000 to the county of Marin to acquire this scenic ridge overlooking downtown Fairfax. The family will give $79,758 to buy 175 acres of the Floyd W. Elliott property in Cascade Canyon if the county agrees to designate the area "Pam's Blue Ridge" and place a plaque there in memory of the 24-year-old woman who died in a crash in San Mateo County. Miss Ettinger had lived in Fairfax about six months prior to her death and was a student at the College of Marin. A family spokesman said the gift was chosen because of Miss Ettinger's interest in open space and ecology. The county already has purchased 261 acres nearby, according to Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni and Parks Director Pierre W. Joseke who announced the offer yesterday.

San Quentin Guard Is Exonerated

A San Quentin guard accused of illegally shooting an inmate during a melee will not be charged by the Marin district attorney's office, a spokesman said yesterday.

A review of prison reports showed the guard, J. H. Andrus, acted properly in shooting inmate Lawrence Alexander in the stomach on Aug. 3, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Joshua W. Thomas.

Two prison reform groups last week asked Thomas's office to investigate the matter and file criminal assault charges against Andrus.

In an affidavit, Alexander, 31, said he was standing against a fence during a disturbance in the B Section exercise yard when Andrus shot him from a gun rail with a high-powered rifle.

But Thomas said prison reports showed Alexander was well away from the fence and about six feet from a guard grappling on the ground with another inmate when he was shot.

Andrus said he shot Alexander because he thought the inmate was attempting to assault the guard on the ground, Thomas said.

New Measures

OTTAWA (UPI) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde announced yesterday new measures, including an increase in the number of meat inspectors, to protect consumers against the sale of contaminated meat.

CHURCH HAS INDICTMENT LIST

Uncertain Evaders Get Quiet Check

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Draft resisters in exile or underground who are uncertain of their legal status can now find out if they have been indicted or are under investigation without checking with the government.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the United Church of Christ announced yesterday that after five weeks of "extensive and intensive" efforts, they had received from the Justice Department the complete list of pending federal draft indictments.

"This list is crucial in preventing thousands of American war resisters from being unnecessarily shanghaied into the punitive clemency program," Henry Schwarzschild, amnesty director of the ACLU told a news conference.

During the Vietnam era, over 200,000 young men were adjudged draft delinquent by the Selective Service System and their cases turned over to the Justice Department for prosecution.

More than 90 per cent of them were never indicted, yet many of these men "went underground or into exile for fear of arrest and prosecution," according to ACLU.

"Now that we have the list," Schwarzschild said, "war resisters no longer have to call the Justice Department to find out whether they are in legal jeopardy. They can call the amnesty movement."

Many people in the pro-amnesty movement had expressed concern that the only way a resister could find out if he was in legal jeopardy was to contact the Justice Department or a U.S. attorney's office.

Guidelines sent by Attorney General William Saxbe to all U.S. attorney offices state that an individual who is neither under indictment nor investigation for an offense "but who reports ... and admits to such an offense will be subject to prosecution unless he makes an agreement" to perform alternate service.

This provision would apply to those individuals whom the Justice Department had earlier decided not to prosecute.

Both Schwarzschild and Rev. Barry Lynn of the UCC were critical of the Justice Department for not informing individuals who had been cited by the draft system but whose prosecution was not pursued by the Justice Department that they were not in legal jeopardy.

They said they would attempt to obtain a list of the names of the approximately 180,000 cited for draft violations but never indicted. They said the list would be available at the Clemency Information Center established by the National Council of Churches in Indianapolis. The Center accepts collect calls from resisters.

Philippines Eases Media Rules After Two Years

MANILA (UPI) — Two years of martial law in the Philippine islands was eased slightly today when the government abolished two agencies for regulating news media and turned the job over to two councils to be created from among print and broadcast journalists.

The government of President Ferdinand Marcos announced it had abolished its Mass Media Council and its Bureau of Standards for Mass Media.

Foreign correspondents have been exempt from government control except for a period of 41 days shortly after martial law was imposed in September, 1972, when they were required to submit their dispatches to a censor.

"The prevailing national situation has become appropriate for the removal of government participation in media activities," it said.

When martial law was proclaimed in September, 1972, Marcos shut down 15 major newspapers, seven radio-television networks and about 40 radio stations, accusing them of participating in a conspiracy to topple the republic.

Since then eight newspapers and five networks have been allowed to operate on six-month licenses. Most radio stations also are back on the air.

Longshoremen Ask Pay Talks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — West Coast longshoremen are demanding a reopening of wage negotiations because of inflation.

The Dispatcher, a newspaper published by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, disclosed yesterday that the union leadership has asked the Pacific Maritime Association to reopen pay talks.

Dock workers are to receive a 12 cents an hour pay boost Jan. 1 under a cost-of-living formula, but the rise in the cost-of-living has been so rapid the figure should be 30 cents.

The ILWU also said it wanted the current cost-of-living ceiling removed.

CHILD CARE BUSINESS IS BOOMING

The Belvedere-Tiburon Child Care Center, started this summer with funds from the two cities' councils, is now self-supporting, caring for an average of 25 preschoolers daily. The drop-in facility is being studied as a model by Larkspur mothers. Here Sandra Foote of Tiburon, 15, draws a "body map" for Lisa Pratt, 5, to paint. The Redwood High School junior is earning work-experience credit for her child care class. Frenchwoman Advises Tender Care Of Male Ego To Hold Friendship

By BETTY FROST

Putting a little "joie de vivre" back into the relationships of men and women was the message Monique Benoit brought to the Outdoor Art Club membership and guests Thursday.

Mme. Benoit, columnist, model and lecturer, advised the audience, which packed the Mill Valley clubhouse, on "Men: What Every Woman Should Know About Them." She proposed harmony, "an entente cordiale" between the sexes, warning that the militant female may not be successful either in a career or private life.

The Frenchwoman's view of woman as the tough but tender manipulator, ever watchful of wounding the man's delicate ego sounded antediluvian in 1974. But as the French say, "the more it changes, the more it remains the same."

"A man's ego motivates all his actions," the speaker said. "At the end of a relationship there is not so much concern for breaking his heart as hurting his ego. A wise woman will let the man be the one to end the relationship. She will keep her former lovers as friends and let the man have the regrets."

Ego plays its part in a man's infidelity, she continued. "He wants to see if he can still score." Such amatory detours do not always mean that the man no longer loves his mate. The woman should realize that in losing a battle she has not necessarily lost the war, according to Mme. Benoit.

"In all of the animal world, the male is the aggressor. Female aggressiveness leads to impotent men. In sexuality, whatever happens below his belt, starts in his head," she said.

Women should also realize that men don't like to see a woman cry. They can deal better with anger than tears. It is also better for a woman to shout than to sulk. Usually the man has no idea why a woman is sulking, or even that she is. Shouting, apparently, attracts his attention.

Mme. Benoit quoted George Eliot, "A woman's love is made for her by the man she chooses." She warned against certain kinds of men — a sexual windbag, who is invariably a bully; men who are afraid of women and who will lure a submissive woman into a master-slave relationship, and vulgar, obscene men who will be cruel because they actually dislike women.

However if a man is truly gallant, intelligent and decent, he will treat a woman as an equal.

Social reforms to improve the status of women, the Frenchwoman sees as desirable, but as a part of life removed from amorous attachments.

One white haired woman confided after the lecture that the advice was awfully good but had come too late for her.

Her expertise on men, Mme. Benoit claimed, was from observation. A former newspaper columnist, she interviewed over 1,000 men in the San Francisco Bay area.

As a lecturer she finds that the two most requested topics are discussions about men and food. Her principal work the past five years has been as an instructor on nutrition, skin care and posture for organizations and companies. In these courses the slim Frenchwoman calls upon her background as a physical education teacher and fashion model.

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Chewing bubble gum, spraying whipped cream, and pouring bottles of liquid over each other's heads — was this a kid's party or a fraternity bash?

No, it was the televised baseball World Series at Oakland, and the winners of the World Series, of course, were the Oakland A's. But the Los Angeles Dodgers could not be outdone. Steve Yeager of the Dodgers won the bubble gum chewing contest. One of the announcers said Yeager was embarrassed at having won the contest three years in a row.

Certainly is more interesting to watch the antics of the players on the sidelines than it is to watch the actual game. But then, I'm not a baseball fan.

SOAP OPERAS on TV are another story. If you've ever been confined to bed with a cold and don't feel up to reading, there is always the television to turn on — you can sleep right through it during the day. How many women can watch these dramas day in and day out and not become neurotic, is a question.

It seems that many women watch "As The World Turns," which follows the noon news. (Wonder if the women bother to watch the news.)

Here is Lisa, who was married to Dr. Bob Hughes — every soap has a doctor and hospital — then she had a couple of more husbands. Dr. Bob Hughes is now married to Jennifer, who is the sister of Kim, who became pregnant by her brother-in-law, Dr. Hughes, and they are all still friends! And this is just one of the few of the soaps that mesmerize the public.

As if that isn't enough, there is a woman who now puts out a weekly soap opera paper that keeps viewers posted on all the horrible details, in case they have to miss an episode.

Let's hope Marin County women are more intelligent than to spend their time watching this type of program.

WITH HALLOWEEN just around the corner, wonder who gets more enjoyment out of "trick or treat," those tricking or those treating. The very little kiddies are the sweetest as they come to the door with masks on, and when asked "who are you?" they automatically drop their masks and say "see!" The family dog also becomes the welcoming committee as each group of youngsters comes to the door. But let's hope this year, the older kids, other than escorting young brothers or sisters, find another way to enjoy the evening.

Sue Magee of the Marin Country Club Estates in Novato is suggesting an idea for the Halloween treats. Many women will be making cookies and candy, not only for the joy of it, but because of the high cost of the treats in the stores. She suggests putting the goodies in a baggie and putting the doner's name and address on the bag, so when the children bring the treats home, they won't be thrown in the garbage because of fear of something not being edible.

Baby Doctor Boom's Still On Upswing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The baby boom is long gone but the pediatrician population is still exploding, health officials reported Thursday.

The growth in the number of baby doctors, coupled with a decrease in births, may lead to an oversupply of pediatricians, Michigan officials Dr. Kurt Gorwitz and Dr. Donald C. Smith said.

"The number of children and adolescents is decreasing about 500,000 per year. This downward trend should continue for most of the balance of this century," the report said.

There are an estimated 3,445 children for one pediatrician today, the researchers said, but present trends will take the ratio to 1,869-1 by 1985.

Marin Cyclists End Italian Bicycle Tour

Five Marin cyclists recently returned from a month-long bicycle tour through Italy where they averaged 35 miles a day.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Girtler of Tiburon, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Foster of Greenbrae and Ed O'Neil of Mill Valley traveled a carefully planned route by bike, train and steamer.

Girtlers' daughter Susan, on leave from her law studies at University of Denver, accompanied the cyclists by car.

The party arrived in Milan on Sept. 13, bought new bicycles and pedaled off to the lakes area on the Swiss boarder. They rode to Arona on Lake Maggiorre and then to Lake Como and crossed to Lugano by steamer.

They took another steamer to Nobiallo and pedaled to Lake Garda and the surrounding countryside, then on to Verona. Here the friends, all Marin Cyclists members, divided; some traveling by train, others by bicycle, to Venice.

All went by train to Florence, where they biked to Siena and met Kathleen Graves of San Anselmo who was biking alone through Europe.

The Marin cyclists were joined by four Frenchmen, charter members of the International Bicycle Touring Society, in a ride through medieval Italian towns between Florence and Rome.

It was an easy tour, according to Betty Girtler who compared it with a much harder ride she had made through the south of France a year ago.

The newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Drange — Stuart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Drange of San Rafael — are living in Los Angeles following their wedding in early September in Tahoe City.

Stuart's bride is the former Janice Danielson, whose family lives in Omaha, Neb. She is employed as a nurse at the UCLA Hospital in Los Angeles.

Stuart is a dental student at the UCLA School of Dentistry. He was graduated from San Rafael High School and University of California at Berkeley.

IT WAS an evening of nostalgia for members of Donald V. Westlund Post 7816, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Ladies Auxiliary at the dinner last Saturday evening at Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club.

The occasion was the 25th anniversary of the founding of the post.

Present and guest of honor was Marie Westlund, known as the "mother of the post" and mother of the late Donald V. Westlund for whom the post was named. His two sisters, Alice Mazzolini and Fern Askim, and two brothers, Virgil and Clyde Westlund, were also present.

Twenty-five year pins for continuous membership in the auxiliary were given to Marie Westlund, Blanche Eckhardt, Rozella Owen, Wilma Thompson, and Mmes. Askim and Mazzolini.

It was announced that the auxiliary will present the post with a plaque naming all past commanders of the local organization.

Dr. John Rockwell of New York was the honored guest at a dinner party given by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wynn of Belvedere at their home Thursday.

Dr. Rockwell, who is a music critic with the New York Times, was speaker at the Opera Preview at Del Mar School, Tiburon, later that evening. The previews are sponsored by Marin Opera Action, of which Anna P. Wynn is chairman. Jules Massenet's "Esclarmonde" was the opera discussed by Dr. Rockwell.

Other dinner guests were Dr. and Mrs. Algerd Monstavicius of San Francisco and Dina Richards, of San Francisco president of Bay Area Opera Action.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pompei of Mill Valley will entertain 10 couples with a cocktail party at their home this evening before attending the Sunny Hills benefit, "Prisoner of Second Avenue," at Ross Art and Garden Center.

Among the Pompeis' guests will be Messrs. and Mmes. Tony Alioto of Novato, Victor Udaloff of Novato, Ed Dill of Mill Valley and Gayne Conyers of Mill Valley.

"Jewels of Espana" is the theme of the ball which annually raises funds for the hospital, known world wide for its treatment of children with cancer and other disabilities.

Meeting Slated For Roundtable

Marin Community Roundtable will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Corte Madera Library, according to Chairman Lois McLain, for an information exchange among representatives of women's interest organizations.

Individuals or women's group's representatives are welcome.

The roundtable is an offshoot of the ad hoc committee which helped organize the Status of Women Commission. It is designed as a forum for exchange of information and ideas of participating organizations. It publishes a master calendar of organization events every three months.

Golden Anniversary Party Set For Roy Coopers of Greenbrae

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cooper returned from Atlanta, Ga., late Thursday evening and are taking it easy for a few days at their home in Greenbrae prior to a dinner dance in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary tomorrow.

The party at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco will be hosted by their daughters, Paula Harris of Mill Valley, Susan Gillespie of San Francisco, Barbara Mannheimer of Foster City and Carol Farber of Fremont.

The couple met as teen-agers, when they were neighbors in Seattle, Wash. Cooper was born in Canada and moved to Seattle with his family when he was 14. His wife, the former Adelaide Salinger is a native of Seattle. They eloped on Oct. 28, 1924.

Cooper began a career in the motion picture industry 50 years ago in Seattle. With their four small daughters the Coopers moved to San Francisco in 1937, where he worked for the Golden State Theater chain, now United Artists Theater circuit. In 1954 he formed his own company, Roy Cooper Co., Inc., West Side Valley Theaters.

Cooper was president of the National Association of Theater Owners from 1962 until 1967 and has been on the board of directors for 30. He and Mrs. Cooper were in Atlanta attending the association's annual convention. Cooper is also a charter member of Tent 32, San Francisco Variety Clubs International. The tent supports the Blind Babies Foundation, which provides professional counseling for the training of preschool blind children. Cooper is also a member of the Mayor's Advisory Committee for Bay Area Rapid Transit and the Beautification of Market Street.

Mrs. Cooper was president of the Women of Variety, Tent 32, in 1966 and for many years has been a volunteer at the Blind Babies Bazaar store in San Francisco, run by Women of Variety, which sells donated merchandise to help raise funds for the training and care of blind babies. She is also a member of Greenoaks Unit, Marin Foundation, Friends of Arequipa.

Also attending tomorrow night's party will be the Coopers' grandchildren, Philip III, Randall Cooper and Janet Harris; Karen and James Mannheimer Jr.; and Lori Ann Gillespie.

The daughters have arranged for Dr. Morris Goldstein, former rabbi of Congregation Sherith Israel, to officiate at a special ceremony during the party, recreating portions of the traditional Jewish wedding ceremony the Coopers missed when they eloped 50 years ago.

Halloween Parade For Greenbrae

Greenbrae's annual Halloween Frolic will begin Thursday at 5:30 p.m. with a costume parade of youngsters and end with free doughnuts, cider and hot dogs at the Greenbrae School.

The event is sponsored by the Greenbrae Property Owners Association.

Youngsters in costume gather at the corner of Eliseo Drive and Via LaCumbre, parade to the school grounds where they are judged in age groups for prizes. Members of the association will serve the food to be eaten on picnic tables in the school yard.

RAP:

Jayn, Karen and I have been friends for five years. Karen is extroverted, tries anything (including drugs), and I go along with the crowd, but Jayn is unique. She has kept her own dress styles and her own values and she's comfortable with them.' We love her for it. It's kind of like she's the rock and we're the sand.

Jayn is a parent's dream — or was. She told her folks everything, treated them like friends, asked their advice, and even took it. But they blew it!

They let us give a big summer party at her house. Karen and the heads split off from the rest of us, and pretty soon went off to toke. They showed up later, stoned out of their heads. And Jayn, in tears, went upstairs to tell her parents how worried she was.

Well, Karen got around her folks okay, but Jayn, who didn't do anything except confide in people she thought she could trust, has been grounded. She's not allowed to go anywhere with us anymore, and she doesn't tell her folks anything now. I'm very glad she stopped before I started doing dope, or they wouldn't even let me come over to her house. They're so suspicious of all her friends they won't let her even walk to the park.

The irony of it kills me. My parents trust me absolutely, and I abuse their trust horribly. Jayn is just what her parents always wanted her to be, and they don't trust her with an inch of her life. Don't they know Jayn is strong enough to turn down drugs — and we'd never influence her. What do they think — that we'll slip acid in her drink?

Can't they see that beyond the dope, we're all individuals and just possibly nicer than some straights? Can't they see:

Here's a girl who never conformed "just because everybody else does it," and they're literally driving her to drink. (When they shout that all her friends are on drugs, she comes back, "Well, all your friends are on booze" — and pours herself one.)

Please give me a bucket of cold water to throw in Jayn's parents' faces. — JUDY

JUDY:

Not a bucket — only a few drops for Jayn's folks — the rest goes to you and Karen — the ones who really blew it. Everything was cool until you started doing heavy dope.

It's too bad her parents use Jayn's honesty against her, but I don't think they've cut her off from the heads because they think she'll become one. It's just that many times a reputation can be built on the type of people you hang out with — and they're afraid she'll get busted through association.

Putting myself in Jayn's folks' place, I doubt they are trying to punish her, but only keep her away from something that in the long run she may have to pay for — heavily. — SUE

P.S. There's always the chance that Jayn may be using her parents as an excuse. When a girl decides her friends have taken one road and she prefers the other, it's easier to say "I'm grounded" than "I've outgrown you."

RAP:

I'm only 12, but I look older. The choir director at our church made passes at me, and he isn't the only one. Men my father's age try to get me to have an affair with them. It's got so bad that I'm scared to kiss Daddy, and when men stand behind me in line at a movie or bank or something, I practically die. Why can't a young girl trust any kind of man? — CAN'T TRUST

C.T.:

Imagination can play strange tricks, when you're scared. We think one bad experience may have turned you fearful of all men, and if you don't talk this out with an expert, you may keep a complex that could twist up your life. Confide in your mother and let her help you. — HELEN AND SUE

Gale Whedon's Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Whedon Jr. of Kentfield have announced the engagement of their daughter, Gale, to Stephen D. Ferrone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Ferrone of Northbrook, Ill.

Gale is a graduate of Bronxville High School in Bronxville, N. Y., and Northwestern University. Stephen, a graduate of Loyola Academy in Northfield, Ill., also attended Northwestern. He attends Loyola School of Law in Chicago.

The couple plans a June wedding.

Use Of Herbs

In general, one fourth to one half teaspoon of most dried herbs and spices is enough to season two cups of vegetables. For maximum flavor, crumble whole herbs to release their oils before adding to food.

Damp Cloth

To shine the chrome on a toaster or other kitchen appliance use a cloth dampened with clear ammonia.

Salvage Shop Taps Sausalito Woman

The shop was founded in 1940 in response to a need for Bundles for Britain. It is staffed by volunteers and all proceeds are designated for charities.

In the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1974, the shop donated $8,969.40 to 39 different organizations. It supports four foster children, a Little League team and the Tam Junior Indians and donates to Guide Dogs for the Blind and Project Hope.

This year nine $200 scholarships will be awarded to nursing students at the College of Marin.

Members of the Sausalito Salvage Shop, all residents of Sausalito, volunteer one half day each week at the shop, located at 16 Princess Street. Donations of usable items are constantly being sought, according to Mrs. Squires.

A native of Medford, Ore., Mrs. Squires was graduated from the University of Washington. She and her husband, G. Robert Squires, a food broker in San Francisco, have lived in Marin for 10 years, the past three in Sausalito.

She has been active in the programs at Marindale School and was Marin County chairman of the American Field Service foreign exchange student program for four years. She is on the board of the Sausalito Woman's Club and a member of the Sausalito School District Advisory Board. Mrs. Squires has also served as cochairman of the salvage shop.

A British Tea Slated For Guy Fawkes Day

The Robert Louis Stevenson Chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire will hold its third annual British tea from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, Nov. 4 at All Saints Lutheran Church, San Marin Drive, Novato.

The tea will celebrate Guy Fawkes Day, when a plot to blow up King James' Parliament was foiled in 1605. The day is remembered in Great Britain every year with a Guy (or a scarecrow type effigy) to burn on a bonfire, fireworks and children's parties, according to Publicity Chairman Alexa Witter of Novato.

The Novato group helps to support a home for the elderly in California and the Family Tree, a school for autistic children in Novato.

This year the emphasis is on typically British items. Traditional English tea will be served and sandwiches, mince pies, sausage rolls, fruit cakes and brandy snaps.

In addition there will be a baked goods stall featuring plum puddings, lemon curd, jams, marmalades, fruit cakes and a crafts stall with knitted items, tea towels and lavendar sachets.

Tickets may be obtained by contacting Julia Slater of 186 Michelle Circle, Novato. Admission is $1.50 and tickets will also be available at the door.

Marindale Gift

The largest check ever given to Marindale School from Ballet Aquacade of Marin was presented last week to Barbara Tarasoff, principal of the school. The check for $6,500, representing proceeds from last June's Ballet Aquacade, was $1,400 more than last year's contribution. The amount was incorrectly reported to the I-J in an earlier story, according to aquacade exeuctive director Yolanda Sullivan.

Art Sale To Benefit The Pobble

An art exhibit and sale by the Artists' Cooperative will be held Monday evening to benefit the Pobble in Novato, a shop carrying handcrafted items made by the handicapped and elderly.

The sale and show will be held at Howland's Interiors, 811 Montgomery, Jackson Square, San Francisco, from 6 to 10 p.m. Jack Howland is an officer of the Pobble organization.

The exhibit will include works of Bay Area aritsts and a showing of the art of fashion by both American and European masters. There will be two door prizes at the "Pobble" evening: a sculpture by C. B. Johnson and a painting by David Meyers. Informal modeling of designer fashions will also be a part of the evening. Donation is $3.

Information can be obtained from Gerri Eszterhas or Stephanie Roman, president of the Pobble Auxiliary, or from the Pobble Shop.

Soroptomist Club Gives Donation

In commemoration of Soroptimists Founders' Day, the soroptimist club of Novato donated $100 to the Novato Human Needs Center to replenish the center's food supplies, which are "embarrassingly low," according to Director Henry Mattimore.

Soroptimism was founded Oct. 3, 1921 when the Alameda County Soroptimist Club was chartered in Oakland with 89 members.

The soroptimist Club is a service club similar to Rotary in that only one woman in each business or professional classification can hold membership in each club. Soroptimist International of the Americas, Inc. is composed of three federations in 38 countries with a membership in excess of 50,000.

The Soroptimist Club of Novato was chartered in March, 1973 and has 22 members, according to President Billie Garl. Members meet every Tuesday for lunch at the Peacock Restaurant.

Next Tuesday's luncheon will be held for prospective members.

Helen Louden Leads Church Women's Unit

Purpose of the guild is to promote interest in the church and its metaphysical teachings, according to Miss Louden, who has been a member for one year. She previously served as treasurer of the guild.

The guild plans to have a dinner dance, plant sale and pot luck supper, and members will visit nurseries and boutiques.

Miss Louden is also a member of the Marin Society of Artists, Mendocino Art Center and the Society of Western Artists. A native of San Rafael, she attended schools in San Francisco, but has lived most of her life in Marin County. Her hobbies are painting in watercolors, gardening and traveling.

There will also be place setting and flower arranging demonstrations and poster contests for 4-H members. Judging opportunities and action demonstrations by 4-H members will be going on continually during the public event.

Novato Wedding Is Held

Jacqueline Anstey and Daniel Jones of Novato were married at Our Lady of Loretto Church on Saturday, Oct. 19.

Jacqueline is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Anstey of Novato and Daniel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Jones of Las Vegas.

Attending the bride was Julie Rose Taylor. Best man was Raymond Brown, both of Novato.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Following a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe the couple will live in Novato.

The bride is employed at the Bank of America in San Rafael. She is the sister of Edward Anstey of San Jose and Richard Anstey of San Anselmo.

The bridegroom was graduated from Novato High School and is employed at Charles Kuhn Construction Co. in Novato. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt S. Harvey of Greendale, Wisc., and the brother of Tom Jones of San Rafael; Charles Jones of Novato, Patricia Rice of Petaluma and Dee Franzi of Fairfax.

Women Artists To Be Discussed

More than 200 famous and not-so-famous women artists will be discussed Wednesday at the final program of the "Phase Two: New Aspects of Women's Liberation" series at the College of Marin.

J. J. Wilson and Karen Patersen, instructors in the Women's Studies Program at Sonoma State College, will present "Great Women Artists: Past and Present" beginning at 8 p.m. at Olney Hall on the campus. The program will include slides and a discussion of women's themes and images, feminine aesthetics and the future of women's art.

Workshop For Fairs At YWCA

A two day communication workshop for couples will be held Nov. 2 and 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Marin Young Women's Christian Association, 1618 Mission Avenue in San Rafael.

The workshop will be led by Ken Kelzer, a marriage counselor, and his wife, Charlene, who leads groups in self discovery through art media.

The workshop is designed to clarify and enrich the process of man-woman communication, according to the couple. Group sharing, individual dialogue with couples and art media, such as clay, paint and sketching, will be used to explore each couple's communication process, and videotape feedback will be used to deepen each couple's awareness of their dialogue and energy flow.

Maximum enrollment is six couples, and the cost is $70 per couple. Kelzer's paper, "Guidelines for Effective Marital Communication," will be mailed as advance reading for participants. Registration can be made by calling the Kelzers.

Blue Bird Wins Helicopter Ride

Talent Bank Formed By Commission

The Marin County Status of Women Commission is establishing a talent bank of competent women available and willing to serve on public boards, commissions and other advisory groups in the county.

The commission, established by the Marin County Board of Supervisors in March, is an advisory commission with the purpose of promoting and insuring equal rights and opportunities for women. Recognizing the importance of participation of women in local government, the commission is establishing the talent bank in an effort to increase the opportunities available to women in Marin, according to Sheila McEvoy, staff member for the commission.

The commission will not endorse individuals requesting appointment. Instead it will serve as a clearing hosue and attempt to coordinate lists of qualified women for consideration when openings occur.

Tem Kant's Engagement Announced

Tem J. Kant and Kelly F. Campion, both of San Rafael, will be married Nov. 23. Announcement of the engagement has been made by the future bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Kant of San Rafael.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carney J. Campion of San Rafael.

Tem is the sister of Tia J. and Tay J. Kant of San Rafael and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Goodloe of Placerville and Maude Kant of Fairfax. She is a graduate of Terra Linda High School and Heald's Business College. The future bride is employed by Geico in San Francisco.

Kelly is the brother of Kevin, Brian, Terry, Maura and Carney Campion Jr. of San Rafael. Also a graduate of Terra Linda High School, he is employed by the California Division of Forestry in Middletown.

ART REVIEW

Nostalgic Show At Dollar Mansion

By ADA GARFINKEL

European prints of the 18th & 19th centuries, antique American quilts and photographs of early San Rafael make up a nostalgic display now on view in the amicable Victorian setting of the Robert Dollar mansion on Mission Avenue in San Rafael.

The softly-colored aquatints and engravings depict pastoral settings, medieval castles and market scenes and classical Mediterranean ruins. (All are from the collection of Michael Lerner of Lagunitas).

Others portray catacombs, formal courtyards and fountains, long corridors, archways and architectural details.

Quiltmaking is an old art form, dating back to the ancient China, North Africa and the near East. American women have been making quilts as works of art for almost 400 years — for special occasions, trousseaux, gifts and for display at fairs, festivals and churches.

Those in the Dollar show ere made in the 1800s. Each has a title, and most are shown as hangings. Their designs are chiefly geometric, and the needlework is uniformly and exquisitely handled. At least two of the quilts are as contemporary as today's paintings.

In the foreground one can see the gate house of the Boyd estate; in the background is the original Gerstle mansion, now Gerstle Park.

Other reminders of the past are photographs of the Centennial Building at Fourth and C Streets, the old steam train at the San Rafael depot, and a horse-drawn carriage in front of the Hotel Rafael in 1890.

The exhibits will run through Nov. 4. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays and noon to 4 p.m. on Sundays. The Dollar Estate is at 1408 Mission Street.

Fraud Charge Blocks Sale Of 'Coolant'

SAN JOSE (UPI) — The district attorney has obtained a court order temporarily banning the sale of an auto "coolant" that boils at 212 degrees because it is mostly water.

Santa Clara County Superior Judge Bruce Allen issued the order against "Hi-Power," a product described by its manufacturer as a summer coolant and advertised for $3.47 a gallon.

Shirley MacLaine Is Dancing Again

By JOSEPH N. BELL
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Shirley MacLaine has decided in mid-career to turn back to the activity that first brought her to show business: dancing. She really did make it in the big time when she understudied Carol Haney in "Pajama Game" and had to go on at the last minute when Miss Haney was injured — just the way it used to happen in all those old Hollywood musicals.

Most of the things that have happened to Shirley MacLaine since have been just as improbably — including her current resurgence as a singer-dancer. She returned to musicals briefly to do the film of "Sweet Charity," but since its disappointing reception, Shirley has been concentrating in about equal parts on dramatics and politics.

So why a return, at this stage of her life, to the rigid discipline and hard work of dancing for a living?

She curled into the corner of a sofa, pulling the blanket around her, oblivious to the hubbub of visitors who had come backstage between the eight o'clock and midnight shows to mill about and make show business talk.

She speaks thoughtfully, measuring her words at first, then plunging ahead when she sees where she is going, dropping her "g's" with abandon, the only suggestion of her Virginia upbringing.

"It sound high-falutin'," she said, "but when you're moved by somethin' you see in your life and act accordingly, you might as well say it. I'm usually moved by small things, but in this case I was moved by a real big one: a trip I took through China with seven other American women early this year.

"We saw a country — even though the collective spirit admittedly de-emphasizes the individual — where everybody I came in contact with was doin' the best they could at whatever they believed they had the capacity for. We all came back feelin' like we could do anything.

"I was born a dancer, true masochiast all my life, but I'd never really used this talent I'd been trained for. Films never made that kind of demand on me . . . On the stage . . . you can't take it from the top again if you weren't in the mood the first time. So I decided to stretch myself, put myself on the line.

"The hotels have been askin' me to play Vegas for years, but I never had the courage. You really have to believe in yourself to get up on that stage. So when I came back from China, I sent the word out I was interested. And the Grand came back with the best offer and the most enthusiasm. So I hired the best people I knew, put up my own money, and went to work."

Work meant running every morning on the beach, a half-mile at first, then up to five miles, plus daily workouts at a gym, then finally long hours in a rehearsal hall while the show was pounded into shape, along with Shirley.

It was important to Shirley that her show be very good, and she chose associates willing to match her own commitment: composer Cy Coleman ("Jigsaw," "Sweet Charity"), producer-lyricist Bob Welles, and youthful choreorgrapher Alan Johnson. "I think people will appreciate somethin' good if that's what you give them. Junk doesn't take as much time or effort or money — or love.")

SHIRLEY MacLAINE
She's hoofing again

It is the first winner for Shirley in a long time, and she is very much aware of that. Since the disappointment of "Sweet Charity," she has done a number of forgettable movies and a disastrous TV series in England. ("I tried to get out of it when I saw there wasn't enough love.")

She had another loser in George McGovern, for whom she worked strenuously for several years, before she spent three months driving across the United States, probing, digging, trying to understand herself and her country.

"I went as a secretary named Shirley Parker. Entertainers aren't recognized if they don't want to be, and I wasn't. Almost every person I got into a discussion with — on whatever level — ultimately said to me: I'm worried about gettin' my own piece of the pie because that's what everybody else, includin' our national leaders, seems to be worried about.' ON THE MOVE — Redwood's Jim Connor sped downfield on a punt return with Bob Praszker of Tamalpais in pursuit yesterday during the fourth quarter at College of Marin. Connor returned the ball 37 yards to give the Giants good field position, but the effort was in vain, as the game ended in a 0-0 tie.

TERRA LINDA TRIUMPHS

'We Can Still Win It,' Lucas Claims

Sports

By DAVID DEL GRANDE

"We can still win it (the football title). We know we can," proclaimed Terra Linda High School coach Don Lucas following last night's 17-7 victory over Drake. But based on what has happened thus far, the Trojans' chances will depend heavily on forcing opponents into punting situations.

Much as they did in their Marin County Athletic League opening win against Redwood, the Trojans took advantage of two Pirate punting mistakes to win. Some 1,100 fans looked on at Paul Miller Field in San Rafael.

The victory thrusts the Trojans back into title contention with a 2-1 record. Drake drops to 0-3.

Following Terra Linda's unsuccessful onside kick attempt to open the game, Drake wasted little time scoring. After completing two clutch passes to running back Dave Egan, quarterback Terry Fahey hit receiver Gary Peak for a 12-yard touchdown only four minutes and 11 plays into the game.

But then adversity struck the Pirates. On fourth down midway through the second quarter, Peak was forced to dive on an errant punt snap in the end zone. The safety narrowed Drake's lead to 7-2.

Three minutes later, after stalling Drake back at its own 21-yard line, Terra Linda again capitalized m an attempted Peak punt. This time, defensive back Rob DeGraves burst through to block the punt. Trojans Larry Loberg and Jim Sullivan dove on it in the end zone. After Jim Jenkins had run over a two-point conversion, Terra Linda led at halftime, 10-7.

As expected, both teams made extensive use of passing. Trojan quarterback Brian Wark completed nine of 18 for 129 yards. His passing set up the clinching score with three minutes left when Dick Labarthe bolted three yards for a touchdown to cap a 62-yard drive.

MARIN LEAGUE GAME SCORELESS

Frustrating Football Tie For Redwood, Tam

By DAVID EINSTEIN

The Redwood Giants and Tamalpais Indians frustrated themselves, their coaches and several hundred fans yesterday by playing to a 0-0 tie in a Marin County Athletic League football game at College of Marin.

The outcome kept both teams winless in league play, Redwood at 0-3-1, Tam at 0-2-1. It also marked the sixth time in seven games that the Giants have been shut out.

At the score — or lack of it — implies, the game wasn't exactly an offensive fireworks show. Redwood had just 139 yards net, Tam a measly 80. The Giants never got a real chance to score, and the Indians managed only two and blew them both.

Outstanding among the mediocrity was Tam's Kevin Murphy, who rushed for 80 yards and punted eight times for a 32-yard average. His last three kicks covered 44, 48 and 43 yards.

Redwood's Jim Connor turned in a good performance on punt returns, breaking one for 36 yards and another for 37.

Once at the beginning and again at the end of the last period, the Indians moved close enough for possible field goals. But Kent Julian's attempts of 22 and 37 yards were short. The first chance was set up by a drive to the five-yard line that began in the third quarter as a fumble recovery and featured a 17-yard reverse by Shannon Bynum.

With less than a minute to play, Murphy kept the fans awake by barrelling 24 yards to the Redwood 23. But three more plays gained just seven yards, and a five yard penalty against the Indians put the ball on the 21 for Julian's last try.

Tam quarterback Charlie Stump suffered a mild concussion early in the fourth quarter and retired in favor of Ken Praszker.

The Giants made their best move early on; Mark Chapman, on the last play of the first quarter, hit Chuck Hall with a 28-yard pass to the Tam 24. Chris Meloney, Redwood's leading rusher for the game, then lugged the ball to the 19.

The next two plays lost 11 yards, however, and the one after that resulted in an interception by Arthur McIntosh to end the threat.

Seals, Flyers Have Hot Time On NHL Ice

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Seals and Philadelphia Flyers today held one official record and one unofficial mark after the wildest encounter yet between the two enemy teams.

They went at it in an all-out 40-minute brawl in the penalty box and on the ice last night in a game that produced eight expulsions and led to a record 232 minutes of penalties. The old record of 204 minutes was set by Toronto at Montreal in 1953. Mike Christie of the Seals wound up with three separate wounds requiring 14 stitches.

What's more, veteran observers said it was probably the lengthiest battle in National Hockey League history.

"I've seen bloodier battles and I've seen fights that came nearer to being riots, but this was probably the most prolonged and hardest to break up I ever saw," said one Seal official.

California won 4-1 for its first victory over the Stanley Cup champs since October, 1972, and first Coliseum Arena triumph over Philadelphia since January, 1972. It also helped keep the Seals unbeaten at home this season.

At least three events led to yesterday's brawl. The Flyers still feel Barry Cummins, now no longer with the team, took a cheap shot two years ago at superstar Bobby Clark and there have been numerous reprisals by the Flyers ever since.

This year, General Manager Bill McCreary said he was tired of seeing his team intimidated and promised to go for bigger and tougher players. He obviously has made good on his promise.

Then in the first period, Christie held his own in a brief scuffle with Philadelphia bad boy Dave Schultz and both teams seemed spoiling for more action.

At 8:40 into the final period, Christie and Bob Kelly of Philadelphia started going at it in front of the penalty box. Orest Kindrachuk of the Flyers jumped in and both benches immediately cleared.

Police stood at the ready, but it was believed no fans got in the action, which was centered in the penalty box and in a mound of players right in front of it. But apparently the rules of decorum were followed in such matters with no skates or sticks used by the participants.

The well-pummelled Christie wound up requiring eight stitches below the left eye and four above it. He also required two under the right eye.

Ejected and facing possible further disciplinary action were Christie, Jim Neilson and Len Frig of the Seals and Kindrachuk, Schultz, Don Saleski, Kelly and Andre Du Pont of Philadelphia.

Hero of the game for the Seals was goalie Gary Simmons, who may have won the first-string job from Gilles Meloche after blocking 27 shots and almost getting a shutout. Charley Johnson had a goal and two assists to lead the Seals as more than 10,000 Coliseum Arena fans watched.

In other NHL games, Atlanta tied Minnesota 2-2 and Vancouver beat Kansas City 5-3. Toronto beat Winnipeg 3-1 in the lone World Hockey Association game.

Flames 2, North Stars 2

Fred Stanfield's first goal of the season, a 25-foot drive from the left boards, enabled Minnesota to tie Atlanta. Stanfield broke in alone and fired a low shot that went past goalie Phil Myre's pads late in the second period. Bill Goldsworthy gave the North Stars a 1-0 lead in the first period but Atlanta's Randy Manery tied the game four minutes later. The Flames then took a 2-1 lead when Bob Murray popped in a rebound for his first NHL goal.

Canucks 5, Scouts 3

Vancouver moved back into sole possession of first place in Division 2 of the NHL with its victory over winless Kansas City. The winning goal proved to be the oddest one of the game as the Canucks' John Gould fired the puck against the backboards behind the Scouts' net. Goalie Peter McDuffe attempted to block the rebound but missed the puck completely so that Paulin Bordelau was left alone, facing an empty net.

Toros 3, Jets 1

Wayne Dillon, Tom Simpson and Vaclav Nedomansky score the goals that handed Winnipeg its first loss of the season after two victories. Bobby Hull, playing despite a back injury, gave Winnipeg a 1-0 lead but Toronto rebounded in the second period with a pair of goals. Dillon, the league's leading scorer, connected on a power play and Simpson then put the Toros ahead. In the final period, the Toros got an insurance goal from Nedomansky.

DRAWING A CROWD — Mike Christie of the Seals (helmet) and Dave Schultz of Philadelphia squared off in the first period of last night's National Hockey League game in Oakland, and soon the incident involved more than two players. But referees broke it up, and both Schultz and Christie drew five minute penalties.

Warriors Displaying Signs Of Character

OAKLAND (UPI) — The young Golden State Warriors have shown a lot of speed and desire this season but they finally showed a little character, too, in a 99-97 win at Portland.

In sadly typical fashion last night, they blew a 10-point lead they held at half and trailed 88-85 with six minutes left. But they outscored the Blazers 12-4 only to lose that lead as Bill Walton's jumper tying the game at 97-all with 15 seconds left.

The Warriors, after calling time out, worked the ball to their mightiest mite of them all, Charlie Johnson, who hit an 18-footer at the buzzer that won it. It seemed a fair finish since last Tuesday a Warrior missed shot at the buzzer gave Portland the National Basketball Association win in an earlier battle between the evenly-matched teams.

The Warriors, now 2-2, come home to face tough Detroit tonight.

Last night's battle at Portland matched two premier forwards, Rick Barry of Golden State and Sidney Wicks of Portland. Whatever their relations off the court, on it they are far from friends.

They shoved, tripped and grabbed each other all night while trying to point out the other's tactics to the officials. They also played brilliantly as Barry hit 34 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and had seven steals while Wicks scored 27, grabbed eight rebounds and four steals.

Johnson had 16 points while Walton had a big night for the Blazers with 16 points, 25 rebounds and five blocked shots and Geoff Petrie added 21 for Portland, now 2-3.

Overtime Drama In Water Polo

Dalton Lockman scored his 10th goal of the game in sudden death yesterday to give San Rafael High School a 20-19 victory over Redwood in a Marin County Athletic League water polo game in Larkspur.

Regulation time ended with the score tied, 16-16, and two four-minute overtime periods failed to resolve the issue. The sudden-death rule then went into effect, and Lockman scored to give San Rafael its fifth win in six games and a share of first place with Terra Linda. The Trojans beat Drake, 18-3 in yesterday's other game.

Redwood, now 4-2, had seven players foul out. Dave Russell led the Giants with nine goals. Sig Baerthel had six for San Rafael to back up Lockman, and goalie Bill Tanem had 41 saves.

Tom Enright led Terra Linda with four goals.

Standings — San Rafael, 5-1; Terra Linda, 5-1; Redwood, 4-2; Drake, 2-4; San Marin 1-4, Tamalpais, 0-5.

Kings Put It Together In 'Well Played Game'

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Kansas City-Omaha Kings finally put it all together last night and the result was a one-sided 112-91 triumph over the Chicago Bulls.

"We've had good halves and good quarters but we were spotty with dead spots and sparkling performances in the same game," said Kings Coach Phil Johnson after his club beat the Chicago Bulls 112-91. "But we never had a full, well played game until this one.

"We were 20 points down in one game to Phoenix and won and earlier, we trailed the Bulls by nine points with two minutes to go. But in this one, Jimmy Walker got us going and we never cooled off."

Walker, the scoring leader with 20 points, netted 14 points in the first period and though the Bulls tied the score once, they never got ahead and trailed by more than 20 points throughout the last period.

It was the third straight loss for the Bulls and gave the Kings their fourth win in five starts, keeping them atop the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division.

Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, Boston beat Atlanta 116-109, Washington whipped Milwaukee 111-96, Houston clobbered Philadelphia 110-86, Detroit edged Los Angeles 110-107, Golden State nipped Portland 99-97 and Seattle beat Phoenix 106-97.

Celtics 116, Hawks 109

John Havlicek's 34 points paced Boston over Atlanta. Havlicek, who fouled out with three minutes remaining, scored four of those points with five minutes left to give the Celtics a 105-100 lead after Atlanta had closed to 101-100 on rookie Tom Henderson's three free throws. The Celtics also got 21 points from forward Paul Silas.

Bullets 111, Bucks 96

Phil Chenier got the stalled Washington offense going late in the second quarter and led the Bullets to their win over Milwaukee. Chenier finished with 29 points to lead the Bullets, who remain the only undefeated team in the NBA with a 4-0 record. Elvin Hayes had 21 points and Mike Riordan 19 for Washington. Milwaukee was led by Lucius Allen with 21.

Rockets 110, 76ers 86

Ron Riley scored 12 of his 16 points in an explosive third quarter for Houston to lead the Rockets over Philadelphia. Riley also picked off 19 rebounds for Houston in its home opener. Rudy Tomjanovich led Houston's scoring with 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Fred Boyd was top scorer for Philadelphia with 19.

Pistons 110, Lakers 107

Bob Lanier scored 10 points in the fourth quarter and blocked a possible game-tying shot to lead Detroit over Los Angeles.

Sonics 106, Suns 97

Spencer Haywood scored 17 of his game high 27 points in the first half Friday night as Seattle beat Phoenix. The game was marred by six technical fouls, five of them against Phoenix. The Suns' Charlie Scott had two and was ejected in the fourth quarter.

Is Ali Succeeding In Psyching King?

Foreman Friendly In Public

N'SELE, Zaire (UPI) — Is Muhammad Ali having any success in his efforts to "psyche" George Foreman before they go into battle for the world heavyweight championship Wednesday?

Hard to say, but Ali is working studiously along that line, and on yesterday Foreman did something he hadn't done before.

It has been, for some reason, Foreman's custom to remain aloof from the press and from crowds. It also has been his custom, on finishing his workout, to wave goodbye, sometimes with a faint smile, sometimes not. The Zairois applaud but do not react with the fervor Ali inspires in them.

Yesterday, when Foreman finished punching the big bag, skipping rope and his foot work, he headed abruptly for the exit. Suddenly he stopped and climbed up on the stage where several hundred Zairois were standing.

There was delighted laughter. Foreman was showing just how nicely he can smile when he permits himself. Then there was this young white boy, eight years old, shaking hands with the champion, and the champion wearing a wide grin as he hugged the boy around the shoulders.

For those few moments there was a touch of personal warm contact, and the Zairois loved it. Either they had broken through to this very private man, or the private man had made the first move against what Ali has been saying about him.

When Foreman's workout had begun Ali suddenly appeared outside the hall, peering through the open-work walls from across the street, ducking behind cars and shading his eys like an American Indian on the prairie.

Of course, he was spotted immediately and while Foreman went through the first stages of his workout, all attention was directed at the furtive Ali across the way.

Tiring of the fun, Ali left, feeling perhaps that having again diverted attention from Foreman to himself he had accomplished his day's work.

But then Foreman struck back, smiling and mingling with the crowd and—at last—drawing some of the attention towards himself.

Baylor Is In Big Game Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's been eight years since both Texas A&M and Baylor were undefeated in league play at this stage of the Southwest Conference race, but that's the situation when they tangle tonight before an expected overflow crowd of more than 50,000 in Waco, Tex.

Still, the frantic SWC race goes beyond Texas A&M's 2-0 record and Baylor's 1-0. Southern Methodist also boasts a 2-0 mark and the Mustangs entertain 1-1 Texas Tech in an afternoon contest.

All are bidding to unseat perennial champion Texas, which also takes a 1-1 SWC mark into action at Rice in a night contest.

The Baylor Stadium record crowd was the 48,394 who attended the Texas game in 1972. Temporary bleachers probably will enable more than 50,000 to squeeze in tonight to watch the unranked Bears entertain the Texas Aggies, who are rated eighth nationally by The Associated Press.

Texas Tech is 11th, Texas 13th.

Elsewhere in the Top Ten, it's No. 1-ranked Ohio State at Northwestern, Kansas State at runner-up Oklahoma, Minnesota at No. 3 Michigan, Texas Christian at fourth-rated Alabama, Florida State at No. 5 Auburn, Oregon State at sixth-ranked Southern California, Miami, Fla. at seventh-ranked Notre Dame, Oklahoma State at ninth-ranked Nebraska and No. 10 Penn State at West Virginia. All are afternoon contests.

Texas A&M appeared a little sluggish in defeating lowly Texas Christian 17-0 last week.

"My emotions weren't comparable to last week," said coach Emory Bellard, who had his team sky-high for a 28-7 whipping of Texas Tech the previous Saturday.

However, the Aggies still managed to impress TCU.

"I think A&M will win the conference," said TCU tackle Tommy Van Wart. "A&M's backs are the key to their offense. They can pick their hole and scoot out when it's closed."

The Aggies also impressed Baylor coach Grant Teaff.

"The manner in which Texas A&M defeated TCU was awesome," he says. "I don't remember when a major college football team was held to a minus yardage rushing the way TCU was minus 58 yards on 39 carries."

Although Rice hasn't beaten Texas since 1965, the Owls have been chief spoilers for the Longhorns over the years.

For example, in 1930 Rice dealt Texas its only setback; in 1940, the Owls knocked Texas out of a share of the championship; in 1944, Rice again cost Texas an SWC title; in 1945, Rice's 7-6 victory was the only blot on Texas 10-1 campaign; in 1946, Rice's 18-13 triumph denied D. X. Bible's last Texas team a co-championship; in 1949, Rice won on Froggy Williams' famous last-minute field goal.

Rice hasn't won yet, but, coach Darrell Royal notes: "Rice is a team that no one has handled. LSU tied them, they didn't tie LSU. Nobody's taken liberties with Rice's defense and it's easy to see why. They have some good folks in Cornelius Walker and Rod Norton. They have a good defensive football team."

Hadl And Green Bay Hit It Off

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Veteran quarterback John Hadl, professing to be "in the best shape I've been in for five years," enthusiastically joined the Green Bay Packers yesterday and was greeted in kind by his new teammates.

Hadl, who had balked at reporting unless the Packers renegotiated the contract he had with the Los Angeles Rams, met in strategy session with coach Dan Devine, studied films and took his physical examination.

"There's nothing wrong with my arm. I'm fine," Hadl, 34, said after undergoing the exam.

Hadl, who was traded Tuesday by the Rams for five high draft choices, reported although the contract was not renegotiated.

"I'm glad to be with the Packers," he said. "I think we have a very good chance to win our division. But it won't be easy. I've played against Detroit already this year and I know that Minnesota and Chicago have good teams."

Hadl will accompany the team to Detroit for tomorrow's National Football League game with the Lions, but Jack Concannon will start at quarterback and Hadl will be used only in emergency as he acquaints himself with the team.

Safety Jim Hill, Hadl's former teammate with the San Diego Chargers, expressed delight with the deal.

"I'm prejudiced, of course, but I know what he can do and the league knows what he can do," Hill said. "Joe Namath calls him the best quarterback in the league, and Joe ought to know."

Casa Grande Whips Healdsburg, 25-0

By DIANE FISHER

HEALDSBURG — The Healdsburg Hounds rolled over and played dead last night. Casa Grande High School whipped Healdsburg 25-0 here in Sonoma County League football.

Casa Grande's defense was the key to the victory, holding the Hounds to minus seven yards rushing and 31 yards passing.

The Gaucho's first score came in the second quarter when Larry Thomas booted a 23-yard field goal.

Casa Grande (3-1) then recovered a Healdsburg fumble and capitalized with a 32-yard touchdown pass from Jim Bricker to Carl Hendershot. John Lutz kicked the extra point, making it 10-0 at halftime.

Curtin Sparks Rancho Cotate Football Win

SANTA ROSA — John Curtin ran for two Cougar touchdowns here last night, leading Rancho Cotate High School to a 17-2 Sonoma County League football win over Piner.

Curtin sprinted 38 yards in the second quarter for the first Cougar touchdown, and plowed three yards for another in the third quarter.

Mike Balliett booted a 34 yard field goal as well as the two extra points to complete Rancho Cotate's scoring.

Piner's safety came in the third quarter when a bad snap forced Cougar punter Eric Mogel to fall on the ball in the Rancho Cotate end zone.

Japanese Team Tops Mets, 10-7

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese home run king Sadaharu Oh hit a grand slam homer off relief pitcher Jerry Cram in the eighth inning today to give the Yomiuri Giants a comefrom-behind 10-7 victory in their opening game with the New York Mets.

A capacity crowd of more than 50,000 turned out at Korakuen Stadium in fine sunny weather to see the Mets open their post-season 18-game goodwill series in Japan.

First baseman Oh, 34, who won the triple crown in the Central League for the second straight year this past season and belted 49 homers, also drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single off Tom Seaver, the Mets' starting pitcher, in the third inning.

A two-run homer by John Milner followed by a double by Joe Torre and a single by Benny Ayala, all off Shitoshi Sekimoto gave the Mets three runs in the first inning.

Right-hander Bob Miller took over for Seaver in the fourth but yielded a run when the Giants scored on a double play with the bases loaded. Miller's error on a bunt loaded the bases with none out.

Wayne Garrett gave the Mets a 4-3 lead with a homer off Yoshimasa Kobayashi in the fifth inning.

Dave Schneck hit a three-run homer off Kunikazu Ogawa in the top of the sixth and the Mets had a 7-3 lead.

The Giants scored another run off Miller in the bottom of the sixth on a double by Kazumasa Kono and a single by Shigeo Nagashima, who has retired after 17 years of play and is expected to be the new Giant manager next year.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Cards Game May Be Crucial For 'Skins

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Washington Redskins have never lost to a team in their conference—the National Conference East—twice in the same season under George Allen. And tomorrow would be the most inopportune time for a first, as far as the Redskins are concerned.

Washington is in St. Louis to play the Cardinals, the lone remaining unbeaten team in the National Football League, and even though it's only the halfway point of the 1974 season, the game could be crucial to the Redskins' playoff hopes.

Allen's Redskins are 4-2 and trail the Cardinals by two games. A loss tomorrow would drop them three games behind, leaving them the difficult task of making up three games in the seven remaining games. Also involved are the Philadelphia Eagles, tied with the Redskins. Should the Eagles maintain their winning ways, the Redskins might even lose a shot at the wild card berth.

The Redskins have been impressive since Sonny Jurgensen took over at quarterback two weeks ago, upsetting Miami 20-17 and drubbing the New York Giants 24-3. St. Louis had to struggle to beat Houston last week but the Cardinals have made the "big play" their trademark this year, with Jim Hart and Mel Gray providing it through the air and Terry Metcalf on the ground.

Minnesota and New England, who had their five-game unbeaten streaks snapped last Sunday, tangle in another key game. The Patriots are tied with Buffalo for the American Football Conference East lead while the Vikings hold a two-game edge in the NFC Central.

Vallejo Runs Over Petaluma Gridders, 27-0

VALLEJO — The Vallejo High School Apaches literally ran over Petaluma 27-0 here last night in North Bay League football.

Vallejo scored a touchdown in every quarter, the first of which was a five-yard run by Don Parker.

In the second quarter, Mark Thomas burst up the middle for an eight-yard touchdown, making the score at halftime 12-0.

Apache running back Ron Austin opened up the second half with a 23-yard touchdown scamper and Thomas ran in for the two-point conversion.

The final Vallejo score came on a six-yard dash by Chris Klebenstein with Don Parker kicking the extra point.

Elbow Surgery For Caldwell

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants reported yesterday that lefthanded pitcher Mike Caldwell has undergone successful surgery in Los Angeles for the removal of a bone spur in his pitching elbow.

Dr. Frank Job, who performed similar surgery on Los Angeles Dodgers pitchers Jim Brewer and Tommy John, said Caldwell will be free to leave the hospital Monday.

Cross Country Win For Marin

SUISUN CITY — The College of Marin Tars took five of the first six places yesterday to romp past Canada of Redwood City, 17-44 in a Camino Norte Conference cross country meet at Rockville Park.

Kian McCarthy, Dan Turek and Brian McCurdy swept the top three spots, with McCarthy covering the four-mile course in 20 minutes, 58 seconds. Eric Moller and Tom Altamirano of Marin finished fifth and sixth.

The victory, which increased the Tars' league record to 5-0, was achieved without Ken Scalmanini and Mike Killeen. The former was out with a sore ankle, the latter had prior commitments. But both should be ready for next Friday's battel against Santa Rosa, which also has a 5-0 mark in the CNC.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Did Koufax Match Ryan's Strikeouts?

THE TIPOFF:

It took the early success of the New England Patriots for the pros to admit that the Miami "53" defense, hailed for its ingenuity, was nothing more than the old Oklahoma defense with a couple of linebacker types on the terminals of what used to be the Okie "5-2-4" alignment, turning it into a "3-4-4." Now two-thirds of the NFL has already swung to this as a basic defense.

Q. Does Nolan Ryan hold the record for striking out the side on nine pitches? I recall him doing it three times: once with the Mets and twice with the Angels. — Steve Estrada, Brea, Calif.

I'll take your word for it about Ryan's feats. As for the record, such statistics aren't kept officially, though I would think Sandy Koufax might have kept pace with Ryan in the strikeout league.

Q. They say Rocky Marciano was the only heavyweight champion of the world to retire undefeated. I would like to know who beat Gene Tunney before he fought Jack Dempsey. — Farris Dodson, Cincinnati, O.

Technically, you may be right because Tunney never did lose a bout as a heavyweight. But as a light heavyweight, he was clobbered by Harry Greb in May, 1922, in a bout for the American light heavyweight title. It was the only defeat in Tunney's professional career though he participated in 17 "no decision" contests.

Q. Where can I obtain autographed pictures and career statistics of the Oakland Raiders ? — Dave Morkel, Catasauqua, Pa.

By writing to the Publicity Department, Oakland Raiders, 7811 Oakport St., Oakland, Calif. 94621. In fact, most pro clubs will oblige such requests by writing to their publicity departments but I would be more specific and single out certain players if you want any such request honored.

Q. I am a Minnesota Vikings fan and would like the 1974 team roster but I can't find it anywhere. Can you please help me? — Rhett Arbuckle, Dublin, Calif.

Again, write directly to the Vikings in Minneapolis, Minn., and I'm sure they'll respond to your plea.

Q. During the period when Joe Louis was fighting, in the 1930s, I recall some heavyweight boxing matches for championships that were scheduled for 20 rounds. Am I correct on this? — Ted Matlosz, Elizabeth, N.J.

Your memory is good. Two of the Brown Bomber's title defenses, against Bob Pastor in 1939 and Abe Simon in 1941 and both held in Detroit, were scheduled for 20 rounds, but Louis ended both with early knockouts. The 20-round bout is virtually passe.

Q. With the success of Mack Herron as a runner with the New England Patriots, don't you think pro scouts will change their minds about the ability of little men to carry the ball in the pro game? — Jay Curtis, New Haven, Conn.

No, the pro scouts will stick to their slide rules that say a quarterback has to be 6-4 and a running back has to weigh 225 and a linebacker's got to be 240 because they're always looking for the ideal. And the little guys like 5-5 Herron, 5-5 Howard Stevens and 5-6 Rufus Ferguson will still sneak in there on guts and quickness — just as a decade ago Charley Tolar played fullback for the Houston Oilers at 5-7.

PARTING SHOT:

Can you remember way back when there was this unreal character who called himself Evel Knievel?

OFFICIALS SIDESTEP LOCKER ROOM ISSUE

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Officials at the University of Washington have sidestepped the issue of women's equality in the Husky football locker room.

Christine Swanson, sports editor of the University of Washington Daily, said earlier this week she planned to enter the locker room following today's game with Oregon — as other writers have been doing for years.

An athletic department spokesman said the officials' response was fear that a woman entering the male sanctuary might create a "circus atmosphere."

They consulted the state attorney general's office and decided to bar all writers, male and female, from the locker room.

Instead officials decided to set aside a room where the players will be brought for interviews — after they are fully clothed.

SPORTS SHORTS

Hunter, Brock, Marshall, Burroughs Picked

Combined AP & UPI

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Slugger Jeff Burroughs, base-stealing king Lou Brock, relief ace Mike Marshall and 25-game winner Jim (Catfish) Hunter have been named the major league Players of the Year by the Sporting News. The announcement was made here yesterday.

Burrough of Texas, raised his average 22 points to .301 and increased his run production from 85 to 118 in 1974.

Brock, 35, sparked the St. Louis offense by stealing 118 bases, a major league record. He broke Maury Wills' single-season mark of 105 and Max Carey's National League career record of 738.

Marshall led Los Angeles' drive to the World Series and became the first reliever to win the N.L. pitching honors from Sporting News. He appeared in 13 straight games in one stretch and finished with 106 appearances. Marshall had 15 wins and 21 saves.

Hunter is considered one of the steadiest performers in baseball. He hasn't won fewer than 20 games in a season since he was 18-14 in 1970.

Football

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Rams yesterday signed quarterback Don Milan, a free agent who has had tryouts with Oakland and Kansas City, to back up James Harris and Ron Jaworski.

Boxing

Manny Natsios scored two goals to pace the undefeated Giants to their 10th victory of the season and a two and one-half game lead over second place Terra Linda, which tied Drake yesterday, 0-0. Tamalpais and San Rafael played to a 2-2 tie.

Standings — Redwood, 10-0; Terra Linda, 6-1-3; San Marin, 5-3-2; Tamalpais, 4-4-2; Drake, 3-4-3; Novato, 3-5-2; San Rafael, 1-8-1; Marin Catholic, 1-8-1.

RETIRED 49ER QUARTERBACK

Brodie Maintains Desire For Competitive Football

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Brodie still gets the itch to fling the football in competition even though he retired last year after 17 seasons in a San Francisco 49ers uniform.

"I would like to be playing sometimes," the veteran quarterback said, "because I've forgotten the unpleasant things of the past games."

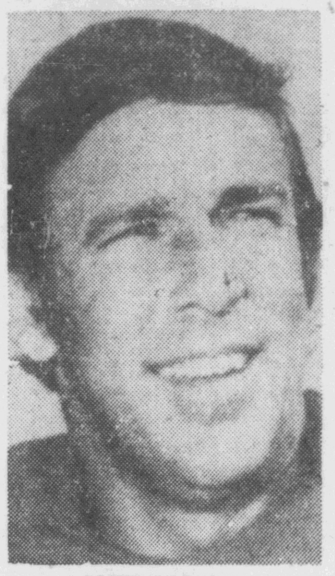
The 39-year-old Brodie, now a color sportscaster for NBC television, said he would like a job resembling the one now held by George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders. "Oakland was smart enough to know how he can contribute to its cause," he said.

Brodie said he could not return to fulltime playing because "I ran out of enthusiasm." To play pro ball, he explained, "it takes one's whole self to be good."

Brodie made the comments in discussing his new book "Open Field," which he wrote in collaboration with James D. Houston.

The Stanford product said it still thrills him to watch pro ball.

"I get my enjoyment out of people coordinating perfectly," he said. And he added, it appeared the game was getting technically better and better every game.



JOHN BRODIE
He has forgotten

Brodie was asked his thought about the future of the World Football League.

"I hope it lasts," he said. "There are more good football players than there are teams. It's just great to have more teams."

Asked whether some coaches were becoming too militaristic or too impersonal, he said, "Coaches are people. They fluctuate from team to team. Some put too much into it. The people who are communicating — they are the ones who are winning."

Brodie now spends two or three days a week in fund raising for a Center for the Treatment of Narcotics Offenders in Palo Alto.

"That's very rewarding," he said. "It should be made available to other areas. Last year, 175 persons passed through the center, and 130 received a big, stable change."

In "Open Field," Brodie tells about how he started his football career in high school, how he starred at Stanford and how he launched his National Football League career with the Niners. He also relates his rivalry with Y. A. Tittle and the anxiety caused by rookie signal-callers on the Niners.

He also discusses how he used the drug dexamyl to such an extent to counteract a sore arm that he virtually became addicted to it.

Only through Scientology, he said, was he able to stop using dexamyl and do away with the soreness in his arm.

Old Spark In Rivalry Is Gone For 49ers, Raiders

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers both need a win tomorrow in their cross-bay battle at Candlestick Park, but the old spark in the rivalry seems to have been extinguished.

Even exhibition games between the National Football League rivals used to overflow stadiums but there were 500 tickets left for tomorrow's meeting at last count, which means it won't even be on local TV.

Says Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler: "There's no rivalry. We've just got to win. It's another step toward the Super Bowl."

"If there was a big rivalry," adds Raider safety Jack Tatum, "it has cooled, at least for me. We play each other every season in the exhibition. We want to win because we want to get to the championship not because it's the 49ers."

San Francisco will start rookie Tom Owen, who sparkled in the second half of last Sunday's disaster against Los Angeles, at quarterback. But if Owen can't cut the mustard, veteran Norm Snead, obtained this week from the New York Giants, might be rushed into action.

The Raiders would seem to have the advantage over the 49ers in the quarterback and the pass rush departments since the 49ers can't seem to get much of an inside rush.

The 49ers are two-touchdown underdogs even though they lost by only one point in an exhibition.

Infield Veteran Is Released By Champion A's

OAKLAND (UPI) — The World Champion Oakland A's yesterday released veteran infielder John Donaldson and added three minor leaguers to their 40-man roster.

Donaldson spent most of the 1974 season at the A's Tucson farm club in the Pacific Coast League. He appeared in 10 games for Oakland and hit .133.

The youngsters called up were pitchers William Van Bommel and Michael Barlow from Tucson and infielder Chester Lemon from Birmingham of the Southern Association.

Van Bommel had a 6-9 record and a 5.17 earned run average, while Barlow was 4-7 with a 2.63 era. Lemon hit .290 in 79 games with 10 homers and 61 runs batted in.

Gloom Pervades Declining Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — A darkening economic outlook sent investors back to the sidelines on the New York Stock Exchange this week, and gave the arket another substantial decline.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.69 to 636.19. The widely followed average of 30 selected blue-chip stocks lost 33.63 points after climbing 14.94 Monday in a session marked by short covering.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, a broader indicator than the Dow, plunged 2.16 to 70.12. the NYSE common stock index lost 1.01 to 37.07.

The loss was a broad one. Declines far outnumbered advances, 1,207 to 563, among the 1,996 issues traded. Only 20 issues made new highs, while 92 registered new lows for the year.

Volume lightened on the decline. The turnover totaled 75,178,480 shares, compared with 82,887,875 the week before and 80,738,252 during the same week a year ago.

On Tuesday, the Commerce Department reported durable goods orders fell 6.4 per cent in September, the sharpest drop in six-and-one-half years.

The same day, the Labor Department reported the Consumer Price Index rose 1.2 per cent in September, or 12.1 per cent higher than a year ago.

The week before, the government reported the Gross National Product declined in the third quarter by 2.9 per cent and inflation rose to 11.5 per cent on an annual basis. It marked the third consecutive quarterly decline.

Many define a recession as two consecutive quarterly declines in the GNP, but the government insisted the nation was not in a recession. The Ford administration said it was "stagflation" and the economy was "waffling" sideways.

However, Paul McCracken, an unofficial presidential adviser and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said this week it was time to call "a spade a spade." He said the nation was in a recession which would become sharp and last through mid-1975. Then there will be a sharp recovery, he said.

There was other news — some encouraging and some discouraging. And it left investors perplexed.

Ford, which announced plans to lay off 950 employees at six plants next week, was fifth active, falling 4⅜ to 30⅛ on 672,800 shares.

Chrysler, which is making cutback plans, was seventh most active, off ¾ to 10¼ on 569,700 shares.

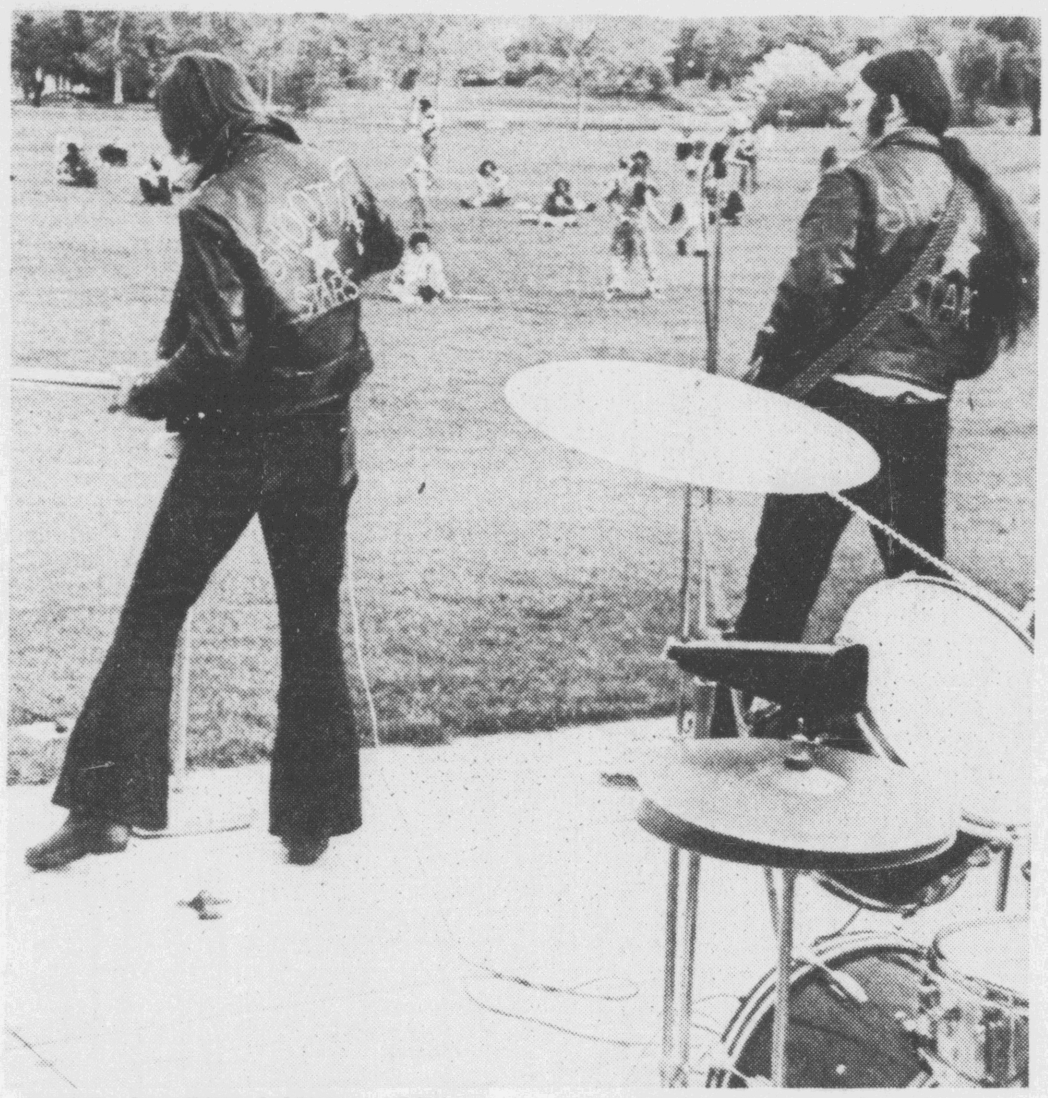
ROCK FOR LUNCH — A sparse but lively noontime crowd at Sonoma State College boogies and whirls to the music of a local rock band (far right). Although students voted to eliminate student fees paid each semester to support activities, more than 40 performing arts events are scheduled this fall. Bands almost every Wednesday and Friday for free. (Photos by Bob Hax)



BAND ON THE LAWN — Living up to the Joni Mitchell song, "Playin' Real Good for Free," Kid Kahoutek and the Shooting Stars work through a lunch hour set at Sonoma State College. Rock concerts go on at the school most Wednesdays and Fridays, with bands donating their time and talents, and the fall schedule of performing arts events is packed despite the absence of activities funds from the college.

It Is Lively At Sonoma State

By ERNEST MURPHY

Despite the fact there have been no fees to support student activities since 1970, Sonoma State College these days is a very lively place.

More than 40 performing arts events are scheduled this semester. And there is something for almost every taste — from mime Robert Shields to African, Indian or contemporary music.

Dozens of campus organizations put on enough lectures, forums, festivals, picnics, dances and rallies to keep the campus' wall-sized bulletin boards plastered thickly with posters and announcements.

How do only 5,700 students keep so many things going on without money from the college?

"It's taken a while for people to understand that you can do something without having a guaranteed source of funds," says Rand Link, assistant director of the Student Resource Center (current jargon for what used to be called a student activity center on most campuses).

Since the student body voted to eliminate the $9 fee each student paid each semester to support activities, only one area has really suffered: athletics.

The fee had financed intercollegiate sports at Sonoma State, and when it was eliminated, sports struggled along, living on contributions from individuals and groups of boosters in the surrounding communities.

Sonoma finally got out of the sports game altogerher this year when it dropped its membership in the Far-western conference. For two years in a row the college's basketball team had captured the league championship, but even that didn't seem to help.

As Link explained it: "We were in an untenable situation — you just can't fund athletics on an unstable foundation."

When the school announced it was leaving the conference, cries of anguish from the student population were notable mostly by their absence. Grumbling can still be heard in the communities of Marin and Sonoma, however, and campus officials worry that the downfall of athletics may weaken the schools' relationship with nearby towns.

But other student activities are thriving on the Rohnert Park campus.

There are two student newspapers, the Morning Glory and The Key, both self-supporting and published off campus.

While state officials are deciding whether to begin funding day care centers on campuses so the increasing number of students with children can study without distraction, Sonoma State student parents set up My School, a center of their own.

They support the day care facility with their own money, and recently The Inn of the Beginning, rock music hall in nearby Cotati, put on a benefit for the school.

All around the campus are similar examples of do-it-yourself fund raising, the recent appearane of physician-activist Dr. Benjamin Spock, for instance, was a fund raiser for the political science club.

One of the most popular fund raising stunts is the film showing. Link estimates there's a film being shown nearly every night by some organization. They run the gamut from foreign classics to recent domestic offerings such as "Paper Moon" and "A Clockwork Orange."

Larry Snyder, director of the Center for Performing Arts which sponsors most of the cultural events on campus, explained that the crowded cultural calendar is supported completely through its box office receipts.

"We've been lucky," Snyder said. "in that often the receipts from one program pay for another."

Even though admission charges play such a vital role, in the support of the performing arts on the campus, they are kept reasonable: Normally, student admission is $1 and others pay $2. Sometimes, as in the case of Shields, the popular mime, $3 is charged, but not often.

The performing arts season at Sonoma State combines "imported" talent with performances by faculty, students and community residents.

Snyder is working with several area institutions, including the College of Marin, to form a group booking system to make more top-quality concert performers available to local audiences.

By being able to offer concert artists a series of nearby engagements, lower rates can be obtained for individual appearances. It is buying performances wholesale, so to speak.

Next Semester, probably in January, Sonoma State will get some outside money because the state legislature has approved a $2.6 million assistance package for "instructionally-related activities" at the 19 state colleges and universities.

Carl Campbell, public affairs director at Sonoma State, said Sonoma probably will receive about $50,000 to $60,000.

That's hardly enough to finance a new athletic program, most officials admit, although there's nothing to prevent its being used for sports since fundable activities include radio and television, forensics, art, music and dance, student publications, and athletics.

Campbell said the college administration will decide how to pass out Sonoma State's share of the state money. Officials have asked students what programs they want funded, although student interest so far has been slight.

When Dean of Students Robert Joseph recently asked students to come to a meeting to discuss how the money should be spent, only 14 showed up.

Now William Carr, director of the Student Resource Center, is designing a questionnaire to find out what students think.

Normally a campus has a student government whose chief function is to make such decisions.

But at Sonoma State, the students disbanded their government in the same referendum election which abolished activity fees.

Bridge District Shelves Plans For Sausalito Ferry Terminal

Bridge district directors yesterday referred new plans for the facility back to the council for its reaction. The new design is for a much simpler terminal than originally planned. It calls for a concrete-topped wooden pier and a small ticket and waiting area ashore. Total price, including design, construction and land, is estimated at $2.5 million.

Bridge district board last month shelved terminal plans indefinitely in the face of opposition from Sausalito officials and residents.

But architect Roland B. Mays, whose firm already has been paid $144,000 for the two terminal designs, yesterday urged the bridge board to let him complete the engineering work for the facility. With that done, the terminal will be ready to go to bid if the bridge district ever decides to build it, he argued.

However, several bridge directors said yesterday they don't want to do any more work on the Sausalito terminal unless the city drops its opposition. (Sausalito officials have said they don't want a terminal unless the bridge district lets the city control the number of passengers carried on its new ferries. The bridge district has refused to do so.

San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini clearly speaking the majority view, said the engineering would be "a waste of money if Sausalito doesn't want the terminal."

One of the few comments on the design came from Sausalito City Councilman Sally Stanford, who objected to leaving the "old ratty-looking piers" from the old ferry slip. Mays said the northern set of old pilings would be left intact to protect the Sausalito Yacht Club from the ferry wake and prevent becalmed sailboats from drifting into the ferry landing.

City Councilman Robin Sweeny differed with Miss Stanford, observing she like the old pilings. "That's about par for the course in Sausalito," interjected Miss Stanford.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

SONOMA — Adopted a 35-cent adult fare for all intracounty bus trips in Sonoma County. Commuter patronage from Sonoma is up 15 per cent since 11 new buses ere added to the fleet of 31 serving the county's commuters, the district staff reported.

FERRY — Received staff report that the first of the three new ferries being built in San Diego is expected to arrive in the bay Dec. 7.

STORAGE — Agreed to pay up to $15,370 a month to store the second and third new ferries at the San Diego shipyard building them, with delivery set by the end of March, 1976 when the Larkspur Ferry terminal will be ready for use.

Woman Robbed At College

Nancy Ullner of San Rafael was knocked down and robbed of $1.27 yesterday while walk ing on the College of Marin campus, according to sheriff's deputies.

She told officers a man hit her in the face, knocking her to the ground, grabbed her money and fled.

She described her assailant as about 5 feet, 5 inches tall, 170 to 180 pounds, with dark brown hair and heavy, bushy eyebrows.

The robbery occurred shortly before 3 p.m.

Mystery Blast Rocks Santa Venetia

A mysterious explosion that rocked the Santa Venetia area last night has Marin County sheriff's deputies baffled.

The blast was heard at 10:24 p.m. by hundreds of persons in the vicinity of North San Pedro Road, Birch Street and Mabry Way.

The department's switchboard was flooded with calls but no one saw anything and no damage was reported.

Investigators have ruled out the possibility of a sonic boom and are sticking to the theory that the explosion was caused by a large firecracker or similar bomb-like device.

Dean Quits Clubs

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Western singer Jimmy Dean has decided to quit nightclub appearances so he can spend more time with his family.

A Grand and Sensible Opening.

For the money, it's the biggest town house in Marin.

It's true. Western Oaks is opening a new unit of two-story, 1024 square foot town houses for only $31,500. Possible because construction began before building costs started to sky-rocket. 1975 buyers won't be so lucky.

This town home has lots of liveable space. A large living room, separate dining area, big master bedroom, good-sized second bedroom and 1½ baths.

One thing that isn't big about Western Oaks is our financing cost (9¼%) and our closing costs ($375). With a down payment of $3150, your monthly payment on the loan is $233. Plus $25 for the homeowner's fee and insurance and $60 for taxes.

Western Oaks has all of the qualities that makes a Marin home coveted. A lovely country setting. Superb vistas of the surrounding hills and oaks through sliding glass doors in each town house. And a handsome clubhouse and pool, almost completed, atop a high knoll with a view clear to Black Point Forest.

Live in Marin—sensibly. Our newly decorated model is now ready and full of fresh ideas that you can use in your own home. It's open daily except Tuesday noon to 5. Weekends 11 to 6. Just seconds off the freeway in Novato. Take 101 to the Rowland exit, then west to Redwood Blvd.

Natural landscaping with big rocks and beautiful trees. See the stone fireplace, big family room, elec. kitchen and spacious level yard. Eves. 456-3835. $52,000.

SAN ANSELMO. Total privacy. Want a home with lots of land? Then see this "king of the hill". A view of 3 counties and total privacy — it's the only house on the road. 3 bdrms., 2 baths, swimming pool. It's out of this world! And you can move right in. Eves. 454-9297. $72,950.

HOME OF THE WEEK

WANT A COLONIAL? See this Ross custom built 2 level home. It's 11 years old and has the most beautiful private garden and swimming pool. It was designed by Steinmetz with beautiful trees and lots of parking. This gracious home has 4 bdrms., dining room, family room, 3½ baths. It's spotless and perfect. The rooms are big enough for your largest antiques. It's ½ acre! For the discriminating buyer! Eves. 456-3835. $150,000.

SLEEPY HOLLOW. Something special. Dutch doors greet you as you enter this lovely home. Nice and light living room, great family room with plank floors, fireplace, wet bar and skylight for hanging plants. There's a beautiful woodsy outlook — just like a private park. Terrific wallpapers and decor thruout. Laundry, workshop, storage room, 4 bdrms. and 2½ baths. Lots of appeal! $91,500. Eves. 454-3434.

GREENBRAE. New! Just completed this week — super quality construction by Broughton and Horne and designed by Dave Coleman to take advantage of the lovely bay and Mt. Tam views from one of the presttiest lots in Greenbrae. It has a pool site and huge old oak trees. There's a spacious living room with cathedral windows, hardwood floors, heavy beams and a massive stone fireplace. Separate dining room, large kitchen with dining area and views and decks all around. The bathrooms are out of House Beautiful. There are 4 large bdrms. and family room. Be the first to see! Eves. 456-3835. $132,500.

SAN RAFAEL COUNTRY CLUB. Your own park on this beautiful acre in prestigious Country Club. A great family home custom built for these proud owners. Spacious floor plan with 3 bdrms., 2½ baths, family room and formal dining room, 3 fireplaces including one in the "indoor-outdoor" room add to the warmth of this charming home. A very peaceful setting with a lovely view. Eves. 479-5134. $125,000.

BOLINAS. It's unique. A luxury beach home or retreat with matchless view of S.F. and the Golden Gate Bridge. Absolute privacy on 311 ft. of your own ocean frontage. A 4000 sq. ft. luxury home in top condition. ¾ acre with fabulous tile swimming pool, beautiful landscaping and a security fence. Let us show you — by appt. It's paradise! Eves. 454-3434. $325,000.

LOW PRESSURE SYSTEM

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration satellite photo made at 9:53 a.m. yesterday shows a low pressure system centered over Western Washington with showers over the center. Mid and high level clouds extend northward from Baja, Cal., to Western Nevada. Extensive low clouds cover the Oregon and Northern California coasts.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Is A Good, Juicy Steak The Best Fare For Athlete?

Thick, juicy steaks have almost always been a training table staple. The rationale being the red meat was a surefire way to develop strength and endurance. Although the theory has not been scientifically confirmed, most coaches and trainers believe that there is a corollary between good red meat and athletic stamina.

What then constitutes good nutrition for an athlete? There is little if any difference between the nutritional needs of athletes and non-athletes. Both groups need ample fluids and adequate amounts of food. During training and competition, more calories are needed because these furnish the energy athletes need.

Someone has yet to prove that any fluid is superior to water, the most basic of all nutrients. Making up water losses as the athlete goes along also help to avoid dehydration. Extra salt is a must on hot days or when the activity causes excessive sweating.

Athletic sports requiring a high energy expenditure call for more food. More important, muscle tissues require oxygen;in return they give off carbon dioxide (through breathing) and water (through sweating). Muscle tissue runs on fats and sugars (carbohydrates) and tends to hang on to proteins. Thus, enormous amounts of meat are an unnecessary part of the diet.

Nutritional requirements of an athlete depend on the energy cost of the sport. To illustrate, dietary needs for short, intense efforts are not as great as for long distance events. Food plays a lesser role in single efforts such as pole vaulting or discus throwing. Food demands and quick energy costs are greater in sprinters, middle distance runners, water polo, or the marathon. And in this order.

A high jumper's overall caloric cost may be as low as 3,000 calories; a long distance runner expends 6,000 calories. Quick-energy foods are needed for short-term events, and while sugar is supposed to do this, we have no scientific proof that it does.

Athletes generally do better by eating more than three medium-size meals a day. Participants of short effort sports should eat 4 hours before the event. Milers can eat their last mean closer to the starting time if they eat the faster-digested carbohydrates.

DUCK WADDLE

G. T. writes: What causes a duck waddle stance?

REPLY

Persons who have neurological conditions involving balance walk with the legs far apart to maintain stability. In children, a severe duck waddle gait usually means dislocation of both hips.

HARDENED AORTA

J. B. writes: According to recent heart X-rays, I have calcification of the aorta. Does this mean that arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries is closing up this passageway? Incidentally, doctor, I am 79 years old.

REPLY

No. The aorta, the largest blood vessel in the body, is one of the first to harden. But like the rusty old pipe, there is no harm so long as blood continues to flow through it.

SUN AND X-RAYS

E. M. B. writes: I am going to Florida for a couple of weeks and wondered if staying in the sun will help to eliminate the radiation from recent X-rays?

REPLY

No. The rays go through the body, they do not remain.

CHILLS, NOT FLASHES

T. W. writes: Do some women get chills instead of hot flashes during the menopause?

REPLY

Not as a rule, but a woman could develop an infection that brings on chills.

DISEASED GALLBLADDER

E. J. writes: I have a chronically diseased gallbladder. Should I follow a special diet or have it removed surgically?

REPLY

Many physicians feel it is best to remove a diseased gallbladder, especially if it contains stones. Doing so eliminates a potential source of infection that could spread to the liver. Conversely, many people live to a ripe old age with a battle-scarred gallbladder, stones and all. The decision to go in for surgery often depends upon the degree of discomfort the organ is causing. If you decide to let things ride, avoid fatty and fried food because they bring on distriess. Chenodeoxycholic acid, a new product that dissolves gallstones, is promising, but may not correct the problem.

San Rafael, air quality yesterday:
Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, light air pollution.
Smoke particles, light air pollution.

Other areas:
San Francisco, light air pollution.
San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources.

San Francisco Bay Area: Considerable cloudiness through tomorrow with chance of showers decreasing tonight. Little temperature change; highs mid 60s to low 70s; west to southwest winds to 15 m.p.h.; chance of rain 10 per cent tomorrow; low tonight at San Francisco 55 Oakland Airport 54 Redwood City 52.

Sierra Nevada: Variable cloudiness with chance of rain or snow showers through tomorrow, colder tonight and tomorrow with snow level in showers 8000 or 9000 feet.

Napa and Sonoma Valleys and Santa Rosa Plain: Considerable cloudiness through tomorrow with chance of showers decreasing tonight; little temperature change; low tonight and high tomorrow at Santa Rosa 45 68; winds southerly 5 to 15 m.p.h.

Redd Foxx Becomes A Sheriff

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (UPI) — Television actor Redd Foxx, wearing bleached blue jeans and a denim jacket, was sowrn in yesterday as chief of police of the all-black Taft community.

District Judge Bill Haworth gave Foxx the oath of office during an intermission in a jury trial.

Foxx, star of the "Sanford and Son" television series, said he would try to spend as much time as possible in Taft, a community of about 500 persons. He said he wants to establish recreational facilities for the town's youth and develop a museum.

Mayor Leigh Foley appointed Foxx to the chief's post, which has been vacant for several years. No badge goes with the office, just a commission card.

The swearing in ceremony was witnessed mostly by courthouse employees, who apparently were the only people aware of the TV star's visit. He was swamped by autograph seekers after the ceremony.

Angela May Teach At State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Angela Davis, who was acquitted of charges resulting from the 1970 Marin County courthouse shoot-out, has made inquiries about a part-time teaching position at San Francisco State University.

John Sloane, associated dean of the School of Behavioral and Social Sciences, said he would consider her as a possible candidate to teach philosophy or psychology.

Miss Davis was fired in 1968 by the University of California Board of Regents from her job as an instructor of philosophy at UCLA because she was a member of the American Communist Party.

A judge, two San Quentin Prison convicts and a young man who smuggled weapons to the inmates were killed in the shoot-out Miss Davis had been charged with murder, kidnap and conspiracy.

BART Board Intends To Sue

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Board of Directors of the Bay Area Rapid Transit has confirmed its intention to sue four of the system's suppliers, including Rohr Industries, Inc., of Chula Vista.

Rohr supplied BART trains on a $150 million contract.

The other firms are Westinghouse Electric Co.; Bulova Watch Co., and Parsons-Brinckerhoff-Tudor-Bechtel, an engineering combine.

The directors Thursday unanimously adopted a motion "not to change the board's decision" to sue after listening to Rohr counsel Robert Heidrick who asked that the issue be negotiated further.

ALMANAC

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, Oct. 26, the 299th day of 1974 with 66 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Saturn and Mercury. The evening star is Jupiter.

American gospel singer Mahalia Jackson was born Oct. 26, 1912.

On this day in history:

In 1825, the Erie Canal, America's first man-made waterway, was opened for traffic between Buffalo and Albany, N.Y.

In 1920, the Lord Mayor of Cork, Terence McSwiney, died after fasting 75 days in the British prison cell, demanding independence for Ireland.

In 1942, the American aircraft carrier "Hornet" was sunk by Japanese warships in a fierce naval engagement off the Solomon Islands in the Pacific Theater of World War II.

In 1972, Igor Sikorsky, developer of the first practical helicopter, died at the age of 83.

A thought for the day: Irish poet Thomas Moore said, "Ask a woman's advice and whate'er she advises, do the very reverse and you're sure to be wise."

Opening lead — ♠ Q

LEAD TO DUMMY

When this hand was played South won the first trick with the king of spades and led a trump to dummy's nine in order to return a diamond toward his king. It was a good idea, but not good enough.

West won with the ace of diamonds and shrewdly returned a trump. Dummy's ten held, and declarer led another diamond from the dummy. His jack lost to the queen, and back came another trump, removing the last trump from dummy.

Now there was no way for South to make the contract. He had to lose three diamonds and a club.

FAVORABLE LEAD

South had received a favorable opening lead, and he should have taken advantage of it. A trump lead would have beaten him, but the actual lead gave South the chance to ruff a diamond in dummy.

After winning the first trick with the king of spades, South should lead a diamond from his hand. It goes against the grain to lead away from strength, but this play guarantees the contract.

Since there are still three trumps in the dummy, South is sure to win the race. He can win a trump return and lead a second diamond. Back comes a trump, but South wins in his own hand and ruffs the last diamond. Time enough, then, to get back to the South hand and draw the last trump.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids 1 NT (16 to 18 points) and the next player passes.

You hold:
♥ - Q J 10 8
♥ - 6 5 2
♦ - A Q 10 2
♣ - J 9.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards.

If partner bids two spades you will raise to four spades. If partner fails to bid two spades you will go to game in notrump.

The Editor's Notebook

Difficult Dilemma Of Inflation-Recession

INFLATION IS full upon us. We know it when we go to the grocery store, to the restaurant. We know it every time we must purchase goods or services. We are reminded of it every time we pick up a newspaper or hear a news broadcast. Even our tax bills reflect it.

On the other hand, we are threatened with recession. High government officials in Washington are mostly not ready to admit we face recession. "Downturn," they call it. The man who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon administration, now that he is out of government, says it's recession.

ELLIOT JANEWAY, financial columnist, says the way to combat inflation is simple. Just buy less and save more. In other words, cut out non-essentials and make sure you shop for a bargain when you buy essentials.

The Bank of America's chief economist says the same thing in different words: "Encourage savings, demand far greater fiscal discipline."

The battle against inflation, he says, is a "common-sense discipline fight." By that he seems to mean that each of us must discipline himself to do without luxuries (as distinguished from our basic needs for shelter, nourishment and clothing).

Janeway says each of us should have cash in a savings account equal to six months' income — to be ready to face the economic uncertainties of the immediate future.

ON THE OTHER hand, the president of Chrysler Corp. has said: "We need a restoration of consumer confidence. Washington has told everyone not to buy and this 'don't buy' philosophy is hurting us.

"The recession is already here in the auto industry and in the country," said the Chrysler executive, adding, "The problem in the auto industry is serious and getting deeper."

Talk with a stockbroker. He'll tell you that what is principally wrong with stock prices is simply lack of confidence.

Franklin D. Roosevelt said it in those memorable words uttered at the very depths of the great depression of the early 1930s: "All we have to fear is fear itself."

OBVIOUSLY WE are caught between a rock and a hard place.

If we don't follow the advice of those who share the views of President Ford (which Chrysler President Lynn Townsend calls the "don't buy" philosophy), we are in danger of being totally engulfed in runaway inflation even worse than what we have thus far seen.

If we do follow the advice to discipline ourselves when it comes to spending less and saving more, we may be accelerating recession.

In short, we are damned if we do and damned if we don't.

FOR MANY OF US in Marin — with substantially above national average incomes and education, etc. — recession is still something we only think about.

We tend to think it is something that involves stock prices, corporation profit-and-loss statements, and perhaps some layoffs for those with less education and limited skills. But we don't feel it under our own private, personal roofs, so to speak.

Let's not be blind.

Take a look around the neighborhood.

NOT FAR from you, whatever your "good" neighborhood in Marin, you will find a situation we all wish just wasn't true.

You will find a person just like the rest of us, living rather too affluently, perhaps, but confident that tomorrow somehow income and expenses will work themselves into a little more prudent balance.

Nothing to worry about in the meantime, really. After all, the pay goes up every year and that makes it possible to keep head above water.

But on one recent day the axe fell.

After 25 years' diligent service to the company, recognized now by a vice presidency and generous emolument, the fellow we speak of (whom you will find not far away in your own neighborhood) just got word that the company must lay him off.

Business hasn't been too good lately. Prospects aren't bright for an early return to prosperity. It's clear that the company must take some rather drastic action to protect itself and its stockholders. Expenditures simply must be cut.

"Sorry, old boy, but we are going to have to eliminate your position."

Thus it is that there is a home in your neighborhood where the head of the house, now past 50, faces loss of job and loss of income.

THAT'S NOT just recession. That's genuine depression, 1930 style.

He and his family must get out of the big, expensive-to-maintain house and find a more modest place.

Trouble is, the housing market is "soft," what with excessively high interest rates and a "don't buy" philosophy. He may be lucky to sell his house in a quick, forced situation for a little more than he owes on it. The equity he thought he was building up may suddenly disappear.

Next month, the property tax bill will be due, and after the first of the year, there will be income taxes — payable on last year's income but no current income with which to pay.

For those among us in such circumstances, the future is bleak.

EXPERTS IN government and out seem generally agreed that the upturn will not come until the middle of next year.

Those of us whose memory extends back to shiver depression of the 1930s shiver a bit when we hear that. We are reminded how often we heard in 1930: "Prosperity is just around the corner."

It took the preparations for World War II to get us out of it then, about a decade later.

We pray that today's experts are not so far wrong as the experts of 1930.

—Jack Craemer

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Dismayed, Disgusted At Smoking Permission

It is with great dismay and much disgust that I read the article in your paper of Oct. 16, regarding the treatment of students who smoke at the Middle School in Mill Valley. What permissiveness!

How could the board and Superintendent Palches condone such a thing? When we are constantly being reminded of the dangers of smoking, how can our high-priced educators take a stand to encourage the same?

Oh, for the good old days when we had Bob McConnell as superintendent and people like Daryll Hopkins and Betty Grimm as principals, plus men like Bob Andresen on the board! We had a school district then.

This recent decision makes me happy to be leaving the area and know that no more of my tax dollar will go to support this mismanaged school district. For this incompetency they are asking the voters to approve a tax increase?

Tuolumne Supervisor Misinformed On Stanislaus

The supervisor of Tuolumne County who wrote in urging a "no" vote on Proposition 17 (I-J, Oct. 21), on the grounds that it would save the Stanislaus River, was apparently misinformed.

A dam on the river would flood 100,000 acres of wildlife — that's salvation?

The "recreational mecca" created by the dam would attract more boaters (aren't Clear Lake and Lake Berryessa enough of a disaster?) which would increase pollution in the river — pollution which is already caused by irrigation runoffs from farms along the river and which could be stopped by stricter sewage controls.

Although Proposition 17 states that the river be put into the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act it does provide for an effective flood control dam one-fifth the size of the New Melones project. A "yes" vote would provide the needed flood control . . .

On the contrary, a "yes" vote will save the river.

Conservation League Pleased With Coverage

On behalf of the Marin Conservation League, I want to express my deepest thanks to the Independent Journal for the splendid feature stories and news articles published during the past month.

Our 40th anniversary was greatly enhanced by the fine articles written by Independent Journal reporters. We appreciate the amount of space you gave, but most of all we appreciate the fine quality and the substantive professional journalism that was manifested.

Rebecca Larsen's two-part series on the league is the most trenchant story yet written about the league. When I read Mrs. Larsen's quotes of the statements I made to her, I was impressed with how intelligent she made me sound.

Putnam Livermore, Mrs. Sepha Evers, William Evers and Grace Wellman and many others were most pleased with your journalistic contribution to our 40th anniversary.

CBS Destroys Last Refuge Of The Male Chauvinist Pig

WASHINGTON — As everyone knows, I have always been in the forefront of the fight for women's liberation. My body is scarred from battling on the picket lines at the Miss American Pageant in Atlantic City and the Miss Universe Contest in Miami. As we say in the lib movement, "I've paid my dues."

Therefore, I believe I can deal with the following subject with complete objectivity. What on God's green Astroturf is a woman doing acting as a sports commentator during a professional football game?

LAST WEEK I turned on the Redskin-Giant game, leaned back in my chair with a beer in my hand and a bowl of potato chips at my feet. Suddenly I heard this strange voice on the air. It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS' Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided that the sound on my set had gone awry. But a few seconds later a very pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game.

I sat straight up in my seat. A woman doing color on TV? Didn't CBS have any shame at all?

How could a multibillion-dollar network invade the homes of 30 million beer-drinking, potato chip-eating, red-blooded American football fans with the voice of a girl?

LET US MAKE no mistake about this. Football watching is the last refuge of the Male Chauvinist Pig. We invented the game; we play it every Sunday — and Monday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday and Saturday (see your local paper for TV listings). It is our thing.

As nice as Ms. Chastain looks and as knowledgeable as she tried to be, she has no more business on a TV football game than Howard Cosell has on "The Waltons."

If I were to conjecture why CBS made this decision, I would have to guess that by assigning a woman announcer to a TV football game they were trying to attract a larger female audience. They were hoping to win over the wives or, as they are called, "widows" of the men who spend their week ends staring dumbly at their tubes.

THIS THINKING is not the way we do things in America. The role of the wife on Sunday afternoons is to make the beds, prepare the meals, drive the children somewhere, or take care of any relatives who might drop in unexpectedly.

Even if they wanted to, they don't have time to watch football. It is a cruel hoax on the part of the network to try to attract them to the TV screen when it knows women have so many more important things to do.

To show you the groveling they did last Sunday, CBS had Ms. Chastain interview Billie Jean King at half-time. The last thing American men want to see during a football half-time is an interview with Billie Jean King.

Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have no objection to women being airline pilots, truck drivers, senators and even President of the United States. They're entitled.

They can be doctors, lawyers, automobile mechanics, policemen, firemen and Indian chiefs. They can own banks, be in the numbers rackets and play Little League baseball if they want to.

The only place they don't belong is on a TV sportscast telling us male spectators things that they think we didn't know about football.

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

Facing so many tough problems, President Ford and his aides can only dig in and roll up their sleeves — for inoculation against snakebite.

When does a problem become a crisis? When its victims fill out an application for federal aid.

Delay On Rockefeller Shows 25th Amendment's Weakness

NEW YORK — Before the Senate Rules Committee can reconsider the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller, three months will have passed. Then, with the turn of the House Judiciary Committee, it may be the end of the year or perhaps the new year and a new Congress when a vote on confirmation finally comes.

This means that for four months or longer the office of the vice presidency will be unfilled. In that interval, if an accident should befall President Ford, Speaker Carl Albert would inherit the office. Albert has made no secret of his own feeling of inadequacy and his sense of dread that such an accident might occur.

What this says about the 25th Amendment as a means for choosing a vice president hardly needs underscoring. It says something, too, about the workability of the system itself in a time of stress and strain with few parallels.

URGING SEN. Howard Cannon's rules committee to convene a session before the congressional recess so he could testify about the gifts disclosed in leaks to the press, Rockefeller was only too well aware of what had not been the subject of his interrogation in the first round of hearings.

The committee at the time was in possession of Rockefeller's income and gift tax returns and the 2,000 pages of FBI report. If members had chosen to question him then about these gifts, he would have made the formal statement that he sought in vain to put in the record under oath before the congressional recess.

Not so much committee members as committee staffers are believed to have leaked the information that has made daily headlines. As the former governor has noted, it is against the law both to disclose information from federal income tax returns and to publish it.

WITH THAT SQUARE jaw clamping down hard, there can be no doubt that Rockefeller intends to see this through. After all, as he says, he has been in the rough and tumble of politics for 34 years. And politics in New York state can be rough indeed.

The mix of money and politics is nothing new. It was a principal charge in the Democratic primary in 1960 when Hubert Humphrey accused John F. Kennedy of coming into West Virginia with an open-ended checkbook to win the delegate race. In 1972 the millions Richard Nixon spent for his re-election were a large factor in the scandal.

The difference in Rockefeller's case is his exceptional generosity, made possible by one of America's largest fortunes. The remarkable reach of his generosity with staffers and friends has little to do with politics.

An exception under another heading is the miserable Victor Lasky book about Arthur Goldberg, a meaningless superfluity since Rockefeller was certain to be re-elected governor in 1970. Political gimmicks by overzealous aides are often self-defeating.

THE BELIEF in Rockefeller's circle is that the leaks have run their course. Although one source is said to have obtained the entire bundle of material in the House Judiciary Committee files, it contains few, if any, important new disclosures.

The extent of the investigation is a commentary on the politics of the 25th Amendment. At one point, 400 FBI agents in this country and in South America were at work on the Rockefeller case, putting together that 2,000-page report containing every act and every gesture in the governor's political career.

IN THE LIGHT of what has happened to Rockefeller, who would be willing to undergo the ordeal of uncertainty, the piecemeal inquisition by leak?

Almost of necessity it would have to be someone who has never been in the arena; someone with no record whatsoever; someone who has never made a gift of any kind to anyone.

Rockefeller has been in the sweaty arena in a variety of offices since 1940. This background and experience eminently qualify him for the vice presidency. To hold him up for a morality never exacted of past political practitioners is not only hypocritical, but destructive of public service and a valuable public servant.

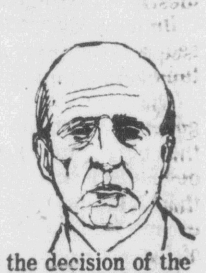
JOSEPH C. HARSCH



President Ford Displays Lack Of Political Perception

President Ford's encounter with the school busing problem in Boston is worth some detailed attention for the light it casts on what is probably Mr. Ford's biggest single problem as a political leader. He is not politically perceptive.

The episode took place within the setting of the Republican Party's relations to the black community. Those relations were almost nonexistent during the latter Nixon years. Mr. Nixon had made a calculated political decision to alienate the black vote for the sake of the "hard hat" vote. (This is an oversimplification but essentially true.)

MR. FORD TOOK office with a friendly gesture to the Black Caucus in the Congress. He invited them in for a chat. They came, talked, and went away feeling that their race was again welcome at the White House. A friendly relationship had been restored between the head of the Republican Party and the black community.

It was a short-lived repair. During his news conference Oct. 10, Mr. Ford quite properly deplored violence in Boston, but quite unnecessarily and indeed improperly went on to criticize the decision of the federal judge under which Boston is going through the throes of an extremely difficult and even dangerous desegregation effort.

It was an unnecessary criticism of a federal court order because it is not the responsibility of a president to disagree with a court decision. The president takes an oath to uphold the Constitution and support the laws. He may disapprove personally of some law. But particularly when human life is at stake, he should be meticulous in supporting the law.

Above all, he should not do or say anything to make law enforcement more difficult.

THE EXAMPLE of proper presidential conduct in such a case was provided by President Eisenhower. That president did not really like the desegregation decision of the Supreme Court of those times, the "Warren Court." He was personally unhappy about sending federal troops into Little Rock, Ark., to enforce desegregation there. But he did send in the federal troops. He did sustain the law.

Mr. Ford's criticism of the Boston desegregation order was received jubilantly among the white extremists of South Boston, who felt encouraged by it in their campaign of violent resistance to desegregation.

The two leading Republicans of Massachusetts were dismayed. They immediately urged the White House to repair the impression that the president was encouraging violence. Governor Sargent telephoned the White House. Sen. Edward Brooke wrote a letter urgently asking for a statement which could be used in Boston against those favoring violence.

But meanwhile, Boston's Democratic mayor, Kevin White, was seen on nationwide television declaring that President Ford has "encouraged false hopes and fanned the flames of resistance that will almost inevitably lead to further disruption in Boston."

MR. FORD WAS candid. He stated his personal dislike for busing as a means to desegregation. But by doing so, he injured his party wherever it seeks to regain a significant share of the black vote. The net of it was a minus for Republicans and a distinct advantage to the Democrats.

This is the third time Mr. Ford has done something which has hurt Republicans and helped Democrats.

The first, and most damaging, was the unconditional pardon, including the offer to give Mr. Nixon the tapes.

The second was taking an able professional out of the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and putting an untested and almost unknown woman in the job — two months before a midterm election in which many Republican candidates need every bit of help possible from their naational committee. Republicans running for office were horrified by both actions.

IN PALM DESERT

You Can See Where Patton Trained Tankers

By ELMER PETERSON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PALM DESERT — Deserts heal slowly. The dry air and earth preserve things. Tin cans don't rust away; plants, once destroyed, take years to grow back.

In the California desert, you can still see where General Patton trained his tank soldiers for World War II.

That is why environmentalists and government officials are concerned about the onrush of dune-buggy enthusiasts, developers, and homeowners who see in the California desert an opportunity to escape from the smog and overcrowding of Los Angeles.

These new residents are bringing the problems of the city with them to this harsh region, once considered so brutal that only Indians and gold prospectors, familiar with its ways, attempted to brave the excessive summer heat.

Irrigation and air-conditioning have made what was uninhabitable habitable.

Now the desert has cities, towns, airports, and even industry. Each month, an estimated 50,000 persons discover it for the first time. By 1980, it is estimated that as many as 20 million persons will be using it annually. The count is now 9 million — double what it was five years ago.

In the Palm Springs area, where the late President Eisenhower spent his winters, the growth is phenomenal. The attraction here used to be winter golf, which lured the wealthy to build luxurious homes. Palm Springs itself was small, intimate, and much-patronized by Hollywood celebrities. Now Palm Springs has enormous mobile home compounds with their own golf courses and clubhouses. Condominiums of every size and description are under construction.

But a blunt warning comes from Dr. R. E. Taylor Jr., assistant director of the Dry-Lands Research Institute of the University of California at Riverside.

"There is a vital necessity . . . for studying the desert and planning its orderly development now before disaster strikes," says Dr. Taylor.

"You can't go messing up the dessert and have it recover the way non-arid regions do. The desert can be harmed, and harmed very quickly, by environmental degradation and incorrect use."

What's needed, aside from overall planning, is supervision. At the present time, to supervise its 12 million desert acres, the Bureau of Land Management has eight rangers. These men have no authority even to make arrests. The bureau wants more men, more authority, and more money, but Congress has been slow to react. When it comes to federal funding, the desert has to compete with cities, counties and states for clout.

Recently the bureau announced new regulations closing about 500,000 acres, or 3 per cent of the desert, to recreational vehicles. Another 960,000, acres, about 6 per cent, was opened for unrestricted use. And some 7,680,000 acres will be restricted in that dune buggies, motorcycles, and four-wheel-drive vehicles will have to use existing or designated roads and trails.

In announcing these rules, the bureau recognizes the need for a master plan for the desert, and is working for it with speed and efficiency.

The desert is not yet doomed. On the affirmative side, there is a study going on, the first of its kind, at the Philip L. Boyd Deep Canyon Research Center. There University of California scientists are conducting a 20-year inquiry into how best to protect and preserve desert environments. The plan is to find out how plants and animal life survive extremely arid conditions. The answers, it is predicted, will be a valuable guide to how present-day residents of the desert should conduct themselves.

One Deep Canyon discovery is that as more humans invade the desert, the more certain forms of plant, animal, and insect life are encouraged through increased humidity. Build golf courses, and you may encourage the rodent population. That, in turn, may lead to an increase in the number of coyotes.

"There's much to be learned from animals and insects and how they adapt to the desert," says Bill Jennings of the research center. "You seldom, for example, see ants during the daytime when desert summer temperatures are at their peak. They come out in the evening. If we can translate this sort of study into human experience, learning how to use the shade and wind to help keep cool, we can cut down on the use of electricity for air-conditioning, something that could be of great importance."

There is no reason to believe that the rush to the desert will diminish in the years ahead. It has become a place for motorcycle races — many unsupervised. Dune buggy enthusiasts are attracted to the desert's acres of sand dunes, a sort of natural roller coaster for these vehicles.

To the rockhounds and campers, the desert offers constant adventure. All these people insist that they have a right to explore the desert in their own fashion. There is simply the fact that the desert is there, wide open and tremendous.

"We can try to come to terms with the desert, meet it halfway at least," says Taylor. "For one thing, we can't go on trying to bury the natural desert with technology. We should try to adapt to it, not the other way around:

"By balancing things more; by using the native desert plants for landscaping, for example, instead of trying to make the desert look like New England and using up precious water in the process. By building houses with thick walls, low ceilings, and smaller windows — instead of high ceilings and view windows — thus requiring less air-conditioning and therefore less energy.

"It's a matter of accepting the desert more as it is, instead of trying to make it what we think it should be."

Windfall Profits: Venezuela Shows A Developing Model

By GUY HALVERSON

CARACAS, Venezuela — This affluent South American nation is quickly assembling what could become a model case on how a developing country handles windfall profits from oil exports.

The Venezuelan approach — a mixture of hardheaded pragmatism and traditional Latin American idealism — is twofold:

Creation of a national investment agency empowered to bolster the local economy, particularly the industrial, housing, education, and agricultural sectors.

An investment of large amounts of cash reserves abroad.

The quadrupling of oil prices by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has added a whopping $10 billion to Venezuela's budget this year, up from $3 billion during 1973. And the outlook for 1975 is another $10 billion.

Venezuela is the world's third largest oil producer and, next to Canada, the main supplier of overseas oil to the United States. Known holdings range up to 13.9 billion barrels — with the possibility of even more untapped reserves.

The Orinoco River tar-belt country in eastern Venezuela is estimated to contain up to 700 billion barrels of heavy oil, of which at least 10 per cent could be recovered by use of current technology.

For the government of President Carlos Andres Perez — controlled by the liberal Accion Democratica Party — the influx of funds has confronted policymakers with a dilemma: how to improve conditions for Venezuela's 12 million people without triggering greater inflation.

Use of the oil earnings is considered imperative. Venezuela despite its attractive environment, has major economic and social problems. Poverty is still a common condition for the majority of people.

"Venezuelan leaders know that they must tackle their widespread poverty now," says one foreign diplomat here. "This may well be their last opportunity."

Among the problems the government now faces:

One-third of the total national work force now is either unemployed, or underemployed.

Population growth, running at 3.5 per cent a year, is one of the continent's most serious troubles. More ominous, one-half of the population now is under 16 years of age, and will soon be in the permanent work force.

As the impoverished, ramshackle barrios surrounding Caracas vividly illustrate, housing remains a serious challenge. According to Arnoldo Jose Bagaldon, minister of public works, the current "housing deficit" for Venezuela is 500,000 units.

Last June the government established the Venezuelan Investment Fund (VIF), headed up by Carlos Guillermo Rangel, widely respected president of Fedecamaras, an important Venezuelan business association.

As now envisioned, the agency will be given roughly one-half of the nation's oil revenues — an amount that is expected to reach between $10 billion and $20 billion by 1980, according to some government officials.

You can save enough money at this adult community to retire on.

If the cost of living is putting a dent in your retirement plans, relax. There are still a few great home bargains, if you know where to look. Temelec Greens is one of them.

It's near Sonoma, just 40 miles north of the Golden Gate Bridge. And it has just about everything you could want in a home and in a place to live.

The 2-bedroom, 2-bath villa homes are built in the Spanish tradition, with tile roofs and private garden courtyards. The kitchens have built-in appliances and crafted hard-wood cabinets. The spacious living rooms come with custom masonry fireplaces. The master bedroom suites have elegant dressing areas. There's wall-to-wall carpeting, and sliding glass doors to the patios. Every home has a separate garage. And the Homeowners Association takes care of the landscaping and maintenance of the grounds.

At our price of $29,950 to $32,950, the homes would be great bargains anywhere. But when you consider what comes with them, you'll want to come see everything for yourself.

Because when you move into Temelec Greens, an entire, historic estate is yours to enjoy. And unlike some other adult communities that charge you stiff monthly fees for clubhouse facilities, here it's all covered by the Homeowners Association fee of $30 a month.

There's a swimming pool, a picnic place, colorful formal gardens, fountains, lily ponds and old stone gazebos. Inside Temelec Hall (built in 1858), you can play billiards, browse through the library, meet friends for bridge or attend a social gathering. And only five minutes up the road, you can tee off at the Sonoma National Golf Course.

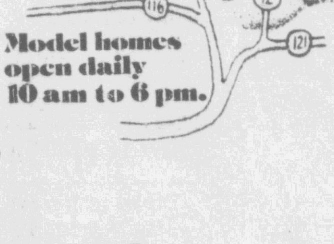
So if you or your spouse are over 45 (and your children living with you are over 18), take a drive to our part of the Wine Country and stroll through our model homes. Then visit Temelec Hall.

You'll find that the good old days of reasonable prices, fine workmanship, clear air and secure surroundings are not very far away after all.

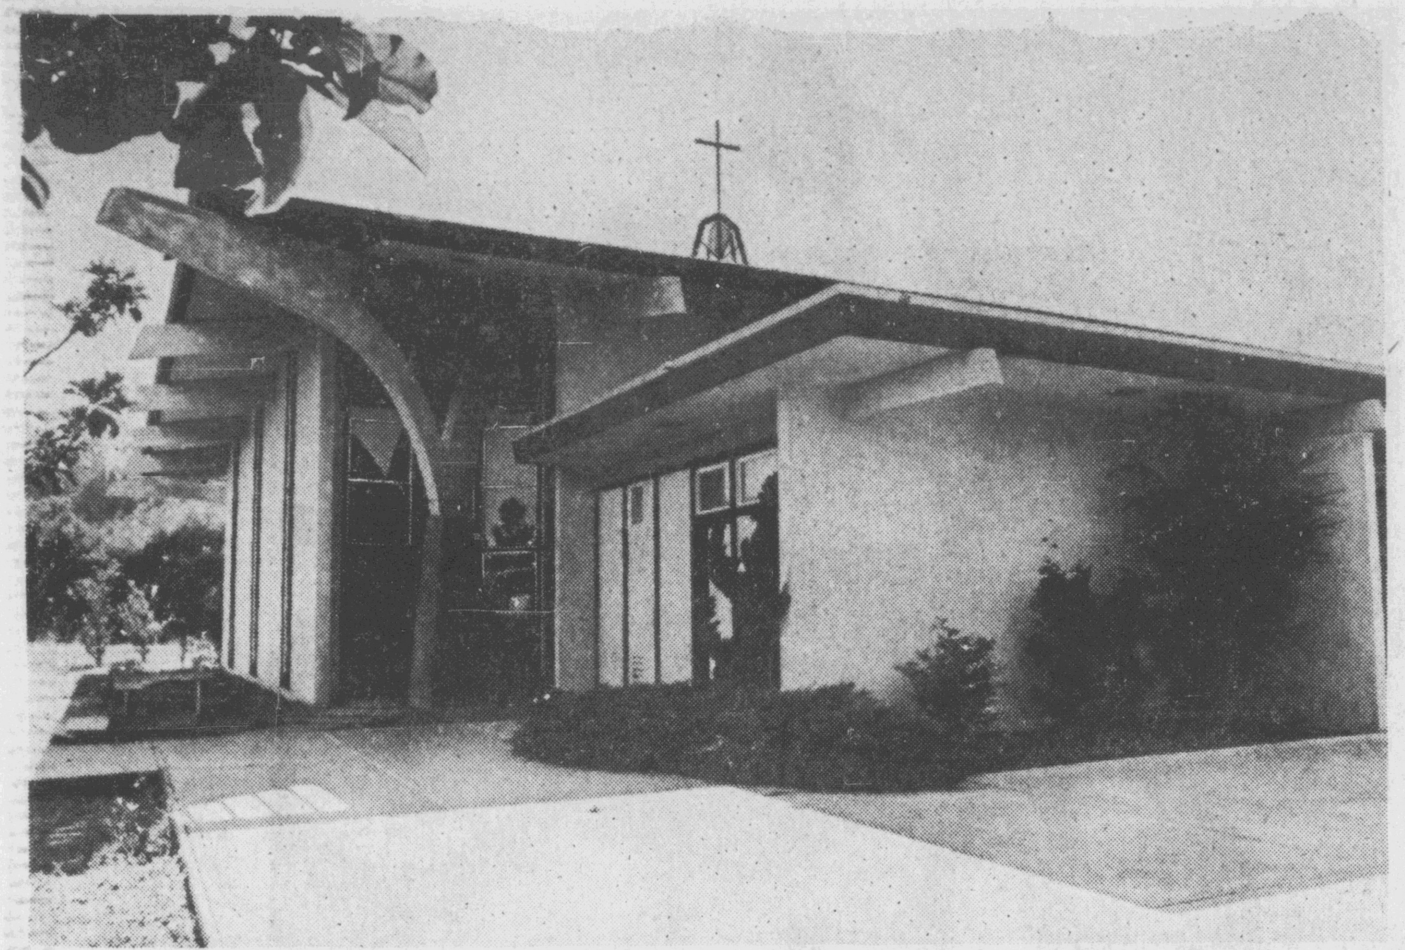
Take the El Verano exit (Arnold Drive) off Highway 121 near Sonoma, and look for our signs.

Temelec Greens

Model homes open daily 10 am to 6 pm.



Temelec Greens: 2-bedroom homes from $29,950.



METHODIST CHURCH OF MILL VALLEY

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley serves not only its congregation as a church, but the entire community as meeting place. The church members decided that it was foolish to have such a building sitting empty six days a week. It opened the church sanctuary to other groups for a minimum fee to cover the cost of keeping the building open. It averages five other groups a week using the building. The congregation was organized in 1912. The original church was at the corner of East Blithedale and Sycamore avenues. The building was sold to the Assembly of God Church when the church moved to its present location at Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue. The classrooms were constructed in 1959 and the nursery in 1961 with the sanctuary completed in 1965.

MARINITE'S ARTICLE

We Are All Slaves To Something

By C. PHILIP SCHILLER

We think we live well beyond the age of slavery, and most of us take pride in our freedom. But are we really all that free? I think it is an inescapable fact of life that we are all slaves to something, even though we may delude ourselves into thinking that we are the masters of our fate, and free to do as we please.

What are some of the things that enslave us? We can be a slave to ourselves — to please, pamper, and satisfy our every whim and desire. How soon life turns sour, and our friends tire of us, if this is our main reason for living! When we are enslaved by our desires and passions, we use people and love things. But happiness in life is found in loving people and using things.

We can also be enslaved by our possessions. While wealth and possessions are not evil in themselves, loving them unduly elevates them to a position of mastery over us. Jesus observed that "No man can serve two masters. . .you cannot serve God and mammon." (Matthew 6:24) — Mammon stands for money, and its power and influence over us and others.

We needn't be rich to succumb to the temptation of trusing in money and worldly things. We scarcely notice it happening, but we are slowly mastered by a materialistic outlook.

E. Stanley Jones tells a story of a robin who was offered a worm for a feather. The bird felt he had a good bargain — it would save a lot of searching for worms, and he wouldn't miss a feather. But one dreadful day the robin realized that his feathers were gone and he could not fly. He was earthbound, having sold his power to fly for worms. How sad when a person trades away the powers of the soul, the ability to soar, for physical things. That person is a dead soul surrounded by many things!

Some people are enslaved by the difficulties and disappointments of life. When things don't go well for them, they retreat from life like a whipped dog hiding in his kennel. "Life is too much!" "We've had it!" So they retreat into a gloomy round of self-pity and endless complaining. Others try to escape from the realities of life by becoming "workoholics" with no time for enjoying life. And there are the more obvious attempts to escape life through drugs and alcohol.

We apparently will be mastered by something, but we do have a choice of whom or what. God has provided hope and light for us, but it comes as a paradox: to find real freedom in this life we must accept the mastery of His will for us. And this is found in a person, in Jesus Christ the Lord. When we call Him "Lord" we yield ourselves to His control. This control is not oppressive, but takes the form of loving guidance. It might be compared to radar that safely guides a ship on a foggy night, preventing it from unseen perils, and bringing it safely through. In the same spirit Jesus said to his followers, "No longer do I call you servants, (slaves). . .but I have called you friends." (John 15:15)

It is unfortunately true that some people fear a close relationship with Christ. But this is to misunderstand His nature, which is to free us to enjoy life, and not to bind and restrict us. By Christ's sacrificial death on the cross we can be redeemed. . .freed. . .bought back from slavery to sin and self. Jesus said: "So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36)

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me." (Revelation 3:20)

Pastor Faces 'Other Woman'

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Protestant pastors, most of whom are married, in some instances get entangled in an age-old, personal predicament — the problem of the "other woman."

It is "a major problem that confronts pastors in every denomination," says the Rev. Andrew Bustanoby, a former Baptist pastor and now a marriage counselor in Bowie, Md.

Church authorities cite a special potentiality for such situations in the ministry, with its duties of visiting, counseling and encouraging members at deeply felt, private levels.

Also, in most congregations there are women, lonely and wanting companionship, who seek the pastor's personal advice and guidance. Sometimes, often unintentionally and almost by accident, his efforts to sympathize and be helpful develop into an affair.

The subject, its hazards and ways to avoid them, generally is included to varying extents in seminary training.

"Every pastoral ministry course in seminary includes a lecture on the pastor's relations with women in the church," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby writes in the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today.

However, he says an aspect of the problem not dealt with adequately is "the pastor's need for what the other woman has to offer. Men are attracted to the ministry not only for spiritual reasons, but also for the emotional fulfillment it offers."

He maintains that ministers most likely to get involved with women in their churches are what psychologists have classified as "maladaptive 'top-dog' personalities." To screen them out, he proposed greater use of psychological testing in seminaries.

He says the "minister who errs sexually does not start out with sexual encounter on his mind" but to "build his ego on the admiration of all people in his congregation — men, women and children.

"The women of the congregation provide ego satisfaction for his doubts about his masculinity. These doubts are allayed by messages from the woman that he is an attractive male. He then finds himself with the opportunity to check out these messages more fully.

However, "the bait is not sex," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby says. "The bait is ego satisfaction, a normal human need; this leads to an opportunity for sexual involvement."

Brazilians Scorn U.S. Spiritualists

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Spiritism — a religion that believes in clairvoyance and reincarnation — is active in this South American country. But Brazilian mediums are critical of U.S. spiritualists who charge money for seances.

"Mediums should always work for free," said Reinaldo Seares Pinheiro, general secretary of the Sao Paulo Spiritist Federation. "The Gospel says that mediumistic powers are given free. But we know that some mediums in the United States charge for their services."

Mediums here make it a point to differentiate themselves from most of their counterparts in the United States. "There they call it spiritualism. In Brazil, it's spiritism," Pinheiro explained.

One exception is the Christian Spirit Center in Elon College, N.C., which Brazilians say was founded by their most famous medium, Francisco Xavier.

Brazilian spiritists say the purpose of their religion is to establish links between human beings and God.

Folksinger Will Play At Benefit

Betsy Chapman, folksinger from San Anselmo, will present an evening of music tomorrow at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church at 112 Bulkley Avenue, Sausalito.

Her performance will follow a Mexican dinner at 4:30 p.m.

The performance will benefit the Latin American Mission Program (LAMP). This is a missionary group of 40 persons trying to fill the needs they find in Latin America. Much of their work is in the border city of Mexicali.

Some of their work has been directed toward cooperative efforts with the Stanford Medical Center in providing plastic surgery to children. Because of the volunteer service of the Stanford doctors, LAMP has arranged for more than 500 operations in the past five years.

Other projects include food cooperatives, medical dispensaries, education and the only Cachequal Indian radio station in Guatemala.

11 Theological Giants Listed

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the oft-termed "theological giants" of this century are dead, including Karl Barth, Paul Tillich, Emil Brunner, Martin Buber, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Rheinhold Niebuhr. Only one of that constellation still is living, Germany's Rudolph Bultmann, now 90.

Are there any newcomers to fill the gap? Editors of six leading church magazines singled out 11 persons as "today's living giants of the Christian faith."

Ranked as the most dominant theologian was European scholar Jurgen Moltmann of Germany. He is a reformed churchman who sparked a "theology of hope" movement. It emphasizes faith as a drive toward future goodness, with God in front leading humanity ahead, and finds realizations of hope both through struggle for reform in this world and in consummation at the end of time.

Others on the list:

Swiss theologian Hans King of Germany. He is as a reform-minded Roman Catholic, whose criticism of the doctrine of papal infallibility has made him a target of Vatican investigations.

United Church ethicist James Gustafson, of the University of Chicago Divinity School, an opponent of so-called "situation ethics," which claims love — not blanket rules — determine morality.

Philosopher Bernard Lonergan, a Canadian Jesuit, of Regis College, Toronto, a profound intellectual whose work in building bridges between theology and the social sciences has been compared to that of Thomas Aquinas.

Southern Baptist evangelist Billy Graham, who is not regarded a creative theologian and who often is accused of overemphasizing personal salvation and minimizing the Gospel's social implication, but who has preached to more people than anyone in history. He was cited for his "obvious appeal" and influence among millions.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Helder Camara of Brazil who has defied Brazil's military government to denounce injustice and insist on fairness to the poor.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black churchman of Rhodesia, who has outspokenly opposed the racial policies of the white minority regime.

Roman Catholic theologian Rosemary Reuther of Howard University. She holds that traditional Christianity has been used as a tool of oppression, especially in sexist views of women. She contends it should be a message of liberation.

American Indian writer Vine Deloria, a Sioux, author of "Custer Died for Your Sins" and "God is Red." While not primarily a theologian, he was cited for offering a "stirring call for society's repentence and reform."

Roman Catholic priest-sociologist Andrew Greeley, director of Chicago's National Opinion Research center and a lucid, prolific writer, who combines the insights of sociology and theology.

Building Of Church To Begin

Dr. E. E. Zachery, superintendent of the Northern California District of the church, will be the guest speaker.

The program will include the Teen Choir from the Petaluma Church of the Nazarene and Trombonist Stephen Stukas of Pasadena, Calif.

The first shovelful of ground will be turned by the trustees of the local congregation, Dr. Lloyd Byron, Thomas Manners and Capt. Louis Cavallero of the Novato Fire Department.

Pastor Wilfred Stukas will supervise the construction of the chapel and classrooms assisted by the volunteer labor of members and friends.

The congregation has been meeting at the pastor's home at 1 Arbor Circle since the first services were held in August, 1972.

Performance Set In San Rafael

The New Jerusalem Players, six members of the Jews for Jesus, will perform in drama, song and testimony at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Open Door, 647 Lindaro Street, San Rafael.

Judaism Studied In Mail Course

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

Well, not exactly attending class together.

The convict is in jail in Texas, the Justice Department official is in Washington and the nun is in Massachusetts.

They are all a part of the American Jewish Committee's new Academy for Jewish Studies Without Walls, a set of correspondence courses which already carry credit from the University of Haifa, in Israel.

The idea for the academy was sparked by what director Yehuda Rosenman said was "a wide disparity between the high level of general education among Jews and the woefully low level of Jewish education."

In its first year of operation, therefore, the academy is offering courses in biblical thought, medieval Jewish thought, modern Jewish thought, Hasidism, Jewry in Eastern Europe and a history of American Jewry.

Even though the academy is oriented to Jewish studies, a fair number are non-Jewish.

A nun in Boston, for example, told the academy was being sponsored by a local ecumenical commission and noted "many Christians, too, could profit from what the academy has to offer."

The Texas convict, a migrant worker who dropped out of school when he was 15 to follow "the harvests from Minnesota to Wisconsin to Illinois and Oklahoma," wrote the academy that he was trying to "avoid vegetating" and hoped to major is sociology and Mexican-American history.

One man, who wrote that he had dropped out of school when he was 15, noted that he "worked as a blacksmith, farmer, sawmiller and carpenter," adding, "I hope to go on to college later on. I would like to write on religion."

Yet another applicant to the academy was a sculptress specializing in medieval motifs who said she wanted to take the course in medieval Jewish thought because she wants to incorporate the Jewish component in her work.

Many of the Jewish applicants said they wanted to take courses because they had received no religious training from their "assimilationist" parents or that their parents were "hostile to both the theory and practice of religion."

The idea of a "university without walls" was pioneered in Great Britain in 1969 with the Open University.

"There are few places today where intelligent adults who can devote only part of their time to study, or live far from centers of Jewish learning, can pursue Judaic education on a serious intellectual level," according to Rosenman.

Vision Teaching Aid Created By Optometrist

When children run with sharp pointed instruments and toys in their hands, Dr. Lawrence Babow cringes.

When youngsters ask questions, as they do, about the eyes, which few grownups can really answer, including many teachers; Larry Babow is disheartened.

So, the tall, lean bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need.

THUS, with a determination and dedication which he undertakes any project in but which belies his casual manner of speech and movement, Larry Babow found himself the creative force behind the most comprehensive but easily understandable teaching aid on vision and the eye ever developed specifically for teachers.

The goal was to create a learning tool that would be fun for elementary school children while teaching them how the eye works, with emphasis on safety.

Titled "A Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," the 34 pages of illustrations, descriptive copy and teaching hints about the visual process interrelating a variety of classroom subjects as science, logic, reading, vocabulary, health, safety, spelling, history and time-telling, is perhaps the only comprehensible book about the eye for children of its kind . . . and even for the lay adult.

Designed to stimulate the imagination of children and teachers, the book also contains three pages of ditto masters of drawings with which the teacher involves the children in class learning projects.

THIS UNIQUE teaching aid evolved from the two major interests of Larry Babow. Optometry is one, of course. Education of children is the other. Larry and his wife Barbara, as the parents of a 13 year old son, Brent, and a 10 year old daughter, Barri, are vitally interested in education and serve now as co-presidents of the Home & School Association of Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood where the Babow family lives. He has also been a special resource instructor at that school.

"So, the tall, lean, bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need."

His children also had an influential role in the development of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," for it was through them he realized how little youngsters know about the vision process and how little they are aware of the preciousness of sight. He also found that the eye was a foreign subject to most teachers, just as it is for most everyone else not in the vision care professions.

So, Larry, who had long been active in professional affairs, became particularly interested in the area of vision education; and was elected president of the Vision Conservation Institute of California, a non-profit educational corporation which is part of the California Optometric Association.

Under his aegis, the VCI began developing a series of graphic designed pamphlets for the public and for educators about different vision problems, dispelling myths and alerting the public to trouble symptoms.

THESE PAMPHLETS entitled "Fact and Fantasy," were the first such publications of their kind to be produced by VCI.

Their popularity, however, further emphasized for Dr. Babow the urgent need for some easily understandable material about vision and the eye for the schools.

A teaching aid was needed that could both inform the teacher and serve to make instruction simple and fun. The teaching tool also had to hold and involve the attention of young students in a way that they could understand the complex mechanisms of vision and still have fun.

Larry spent months pondering the approach, step by step. Then he discussed the idea with Michel Dattel, a noted San Francisco graphics designer and close friend. Dattel immediately began doing illustrations, caught up in Babow's excitement.

But, input was also needed from health educators and Larry Babow approached Gene Huber, head of elementary school health education in San Francisco. Huber eagerly contributed his ideas from a teaching point of view.

Then it was time to write the material, so Larry Babow sought the help of Los Angeles optometrist Byron Newman who is an associate editor of the California Optometric Association bi-monthly journal. Finally, the finished editing was done by the state optometric association specialists.

LARRY BABOW had all of the elements of a beautifully illustrated, well devised and written teaching aid. Now, how well would students and teachers respond to it?

The only way to find out was to go to a school and Larry Babow took the original artboards and material to the Mary E. Silveira Elementary School in Marinwood which his children attend. The response was enthusiastic.

The youngsters quickly became involved in discovering "the secrets of vision." The teachers found that they, too, not only learned about the eye and vision without slugging through a lot of technical material, but they also had a tool that could easily transmit that same information to their students.

There remained, now, only one major obstacle. Money. Funds were needed to pay for the early work of illustration and writing and to publish the initial copies.

LARRY BABOW took it upon himself to obtain the necessary grants for funding the project. He had only the artboards and copy, his enthusiasm and dedication to sell. It was enough, however, for the California Optometric Association Auxiliary raised the funds he needed.

The first printing came off the press last September. It was now necessary to put the books into the schools. Workshops for teachers demonstrating the books were given by optometrists throughout the State. Some local Optometric Societies purchased a number of the teaching aids and presented them to the school districts. In some cases, school districts purchased additional copies.

San Francisco optometrists provided the city's elementary schools with 500 copies and the school district bought 500 more this year. This first full use of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye" will be implemented in San Francisco classrooms this fall. But, the Teaching Aid on vision is still new and unfamiliar to many other school districts.

Now, Larry Babow is worrying about

Tamalpais Valley Sculptor Creates Faces From American History

By FRANK FARRARA

The nooks and crannies of his home are filled with his sculpture, walls adorned with his paintings and his alcove workshop alive with works in the making.

LESTER, born in a sod house near Cheyenne, Okla., is a direct descendant of Davy Crockett and has fashioned two busts of Crockett that are at the Alamo.

He attributed his attachment to American history to his early years. "My family goes back to the 13 colonies, and when I was a youngster Buffalo Bill was still alive and Pawnee Bail. . .and I saw Indians firsthand in teepees."

As he explained his busts, he commented, "most of these were done in the last year and there are more than twenty."

"I believe in looking inward and capturing the people. . .a journalism in Bronze," he said. "I'm doing all the ones I love. I can't wait for commissions. I don't have to compromise."

The 60-year-old sculptor, with wavy white hair and chin beard who is also a teacher, painter, art therapist, poet and marriage and family counselor, returned to sculpture in recent years after a long layoff.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around," he said. "I never chased women. I never get drunk, and I don't smoke and I eat good food."

LESTER said he didn't take any art classes in high school, but became interested one day at the library when he saw a figure of a frog carved from a frozen turnip.

He tried a bust of his mother, "which didn't look like her," and an Indian asleep and a horse by a rock in sandstone which didn't pan out.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around. I never chased women, never got drunk. I don't smoke and I eat good food. I was too busy working. I'd rather wear out than rust out."

"Then I carved a Buffalo Bill being attacked by wolves.

A man he calls, "Uncle Bill, but he really wasn't my uncle," suggested that I send it to the Oklahoma Historical Society. . .and it was placed in the museum in Oklahoma City."

"I started Abraham Lincoln by lamplight, but it was cold and the clay froze and dropped off the armature," he recalled.

Lester, while still a high school student, completed the bust of Lincoln, which won first prize in the county and third in the state.

"UNCLE BILL said if you finish high school, I'll buy a Ford V-8 and let you drive," Lester said. We went and when we came back to Oklahoma, I did a bust of Davy Crockett and on Aug. 17 I sent it to the Alamo and it's still there. . .in the Barracks Museum."

After he completed college, he said he did another "better bust" of Davy Crockett in bronze and presented it to Alamo Library in August, 1970.

Lester worked his way through Oklahoma State University during the depression "when there wasn't any money for art," establishing a National Youth Administration ceramic project and "making dishes for the NYA."

"I got into teaching, then came the war and I came out here and made plaster patterns for the aircraft industry," he said.

AFTER a spell of pottery manufacturing, he resumed teaching at Palm Springs High School and then "got tired of it and sold vacuum cleaners and had a Fuller Brush show on the radio in Indio."

He returned to teaching in San Bernardino in 1953, teaching art to mentally retarded students and serving as chairman of art and special education until 1972 when he moved to Marin.

Lester said his sculpturing, long dormant, began to revive in 1964 when he did a bust of Ken Hubbs, a Chicago Cubs player, who had been killed in an air-

METHODIST CHURCH OF MILL VALLEY

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley serves not only its congregation as a church, but the entire community as meeting place. The church members decided that it was foolish to have such a building sitting empty six days a week. It opened the church sanctuary to other groups for a minimum fee to cover the cost of keeping the building open. It averages five other groups a week using the building.

The congregation was organized in 1912. The original church was at the corner of East Blithedale and Sycamore avenues. The building was sold to the Assembly of God Church when the church moved to its present location at Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue. The classrooms were constructed in 1959 and the nursery in 1961 with the sanctuary completed in 1965.

MARINITE'S ARTICLE

We Are All Slaves To Something

By C. PHILIP SCHILLER

We think we live well beyond the age of slavery, and most of us take pride in our freedom. But are we really all that free? I think it is an inescapable fact of life that we are all slaves to something, even though we may delude ourselves into thinking that we are the masters of our fate, and free to do as we please.

What are some of the things that enslave us? We can be a slave to ourselves — to please, pamper, and satisfy our every whim and desire. How soon life turns sour, and our friends tire of us, if this is our main reason for living! When we are enslaved by our desires and passions, we use people and love things. But happiness in life is found in loving people and using things.

We can also be enslaved by our possessions. While wealth and possessions are not evil in themselves, loving them unduly elevates them to a position of mastery over us. Jesus observed that "No man can serve two masters. . .you cannot serve God and mammon." (Matthew 6:24) — Mammon stands for money, and its power and influence over us and others.

We needn't be rich to succumb to the temptation of trusing in money and worldly things. We scarcely notice it happening, but we are slowly mastered by a materialistic outlook.

E. Stanley Jones tells a story of a robin who was offered a worm for a feather. The bird felt he had a good bargain — it would save a lot of searching for worms, and he wouldn't miss a feather. But one dreadful day the robin realized that his feathers were gone and he could not fly. He was earthbound, having sold his power to fly for worms. How sad when a person trades away the powers of the soul, the ability to soar, for physical things. That person is a dead soul surrounded by many things!

Some people are enslaved by the difficulties and disappointments of life. When things don't go well for them, they retreat from life like a whipped dog hiding in his kennel. "Life is too much!" "We've had it!" So they retreat into a gloomy round of self-pity and endless complaining. Others try to escape from the realities of life by becoming "workoholics" with no time for enjoying life. And there are the more obvious attempts to escape life through drugs and alcohol.

We apparently will be mastered by something, but we do have a choice of whom or what. God has provided hope and light for us, but it comes as a paradox: to find real freedom in this life we must accept the mastery of His will for us. And this is found in a person, in Jesus Christ the Lord. When we call Him "Lord" we yield ourselves to His control. This control is not oppressive, but takes the form of loving guidance. It might be compared to radar that safely guides a ship on a foggy night, preventing it from unseen perils, and bringing it safely through. In the same spirit Jesus said to his followers, "No longer do I call you servants, (slaves). . .but I have called you friends." (John 15:15)

It is unfortunately true that some people fear a close relationship with Christ. But this is to misunderstand His nature, which is to free us to enjoy life, and not to bind and restrict us. By Christ's sacrificial death on the cross we can be redeemed. . .freed. . .bought back from slavery to sin and self. Jesus said: "So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36)

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me." (Revelation 3:20)

Pastor Faces 'Other Woman'

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Protestant pastors, most of whom are married, in some instances get entangled in an age-old, personal predicament — the problem of the "other woman."

It is "a major problem that confronts pastors in every denomination," says the Rev. Andrew Bustanoby, a former Baptist pastor and now a marriage counselor in Bowie, Md.

Church authorities cite a special potentiality for such situations in the ministry, with its duties of visiting, counseling and encouraging members at deeply felt, private levels.

Also, in most congregations there are women, lonely and wanting companionship, who seek the pastor's personal advice and guidance. Sometimes, often unintentionally and almost by accident, his efforts to sympathize and be helpful develop into an affair.

The subject, its hazards and ways to avoid them, generally is included to varying extents in seminary training.

"Every pastoral ministry course in seminary includes a lecture on the pastor's relations with women in the church," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby writes in the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today.

However, he says an aspect of the problem not dealt with adequately is "the pastor's need for what the other woman has to offer. Men are attracted to the ministry not only for spiritual reasons, but also for the emotional fulfillment it offers."

He maintains that ministers most likely to get involved with women in their churches are what psychologists have classified as "maladaptive 'top-dog' personalities." To screen them out, he proposed greater use of psychological testing in seminaries.

He says the "minister who errs sexually does not start out with sexual encounter on his mind" but to "build his ego on the admiration of all people in his congregation — men, women and children.

"The women of the congregation provide ego satisfaction for his doubts about his masculinity. These doubts are allayed by messages from the woman that he is an attractive male. He then finds himself with the opportunity to check out these messages more fully.

However, "the bait is not sex," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby says. "The bait is ego satisfaction, a normal human need; this leads to an opportunity for sexual involvement."

Brazilians Scorn U.S. Spiritualists

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Spiritism — a religion that believes in clairvoyance and reincarnation — is active in this South American country. But Brazilian mediums are critical of U.S. spiritualists who charge money for seances.

"Mediums should always work for free," said Reinaldo Seares Pinheiro, general secretary of the Sao Paulo Spiritist Federation. "The Gospel says that mediumistic powers are given free. But we know that some mediums in the United States charge for their services."

Mediums here make it a point to differentiate themselves from most of their counterparts in the United States. "There they call it spiritualism. In Brazil, it's spiritism," Pinheiro explained.

One exception is the Christian Spirit Center in Elon College, N.C., which Brazilians say was founded by their most famous medium, Francisco Xavier.

Brazilian spiritists say the purpose of their religion is to establish links between human beings and God.

Folksinger Will Play At Benefit

Betsy Chapman, folksinger from San Anselmo, will present an evening of music tomorrow at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church at 112 Bulkley Avenue, Sausalito.

Her performance will follow a Mexican dinner at 4:30 p.m.

The performance will benefit the Latin American Mission Program (LAMP). This is a missionary group of 40 persons trying to fill the needs they find in Latin America. Much of their work is in the border city of Mexicali.

Some of their work has been directed toward cooperative efforts with the Stanford Medical Center in providing plastic surgery to children. Because of the volunteer service of the Stanford doctors, LAMP has arranged for more than 500 operations in the past five years.

Other projects include food cooperatives, medical dispensaries, education and the only Cachequal Indian radio station in Guatemala.

11 Theological Giants Listed

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the oft-termed "theological giants" of this century are dead, including Karl Barth, Paul Tillich, Emil Brunner, Martin Buber, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Rheinhold Niebuhr. Only one of that constellation still is living, Germany's Rudolph Bultmann, now 90.

Are there any newcomers to fill the gap? Editors of six leading church magazines singled out 11 persons as "today's living giants of the Christian faith."

Ranked as the most dominant theologian was European scholar Jurgen Moltmann of Germany. He is a reformed churchman who sparked a "theology of hope" movement. It emphasizes faith as a drive toward future goodness, with God in front leading humanity ahead, and finds realizations of hope both through struggle for reform in this world and in consummation at the end of time.

Others on the list:

Swiss theologian Hans King of Germany. He is as a reform-minded Roman Catholic, whose criticism of the doctrine of papal infallibility has made him a target of Vatican investigations.

United Church ethicist James Gustafson, of the University of Chicago Divinity School, an opponent of so-called "situation ethics," which claims love — not blanket rules — determine morality.

Philosopher Bernard Lonergan, a Canadian Jesuit, of Regis College, Toronto, a profound intellectual whose work in building bridges between theology and the social sciences has been compared to that of Thomas Aquinas.

Southern Baptist evangelist Billy Graham, who is not regarded a creative theologian and who often is accused of overemphasizing personal salvation and minimizing the Gospel's social implication, but who has preached to more people than anyone in history. He was cited for his "obvious appeal" and influence among millions.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Helder Camara of Brazil who has defied Brazil's military government to denounce injustice and insist on fairness to the poor.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black churchman of Rhodesia, who has outspokenly opposed the racial policies of the white minority regime.

Roman Catholic theologian Rosemary Reuther of Howard University. She holds that traditional Christianity has been used as a tool of oppression, especially in sexist views of women. She contends it should be a message of liberation.

American Indian writer Vine Deloria, a Sioux, author of "Custer Died for Your Sins" and "God is Red." While not primarily a theologian, he was cited for offering a "stirring call for society's repentence and reform."

Roman Catholic priest-sociologist Andrew Greeley, director of Chicago's National Opinion Research center and a lucid, prolific writer, who combines the insights of sociology and theology.

Building Of Church To Begin

Dr. E. E. Zachery, superintendent of the Northern California District of the church, will be the guest speaker.

The program will include the Teen Choir from the Petaluma Church of the Nazarene and Trombonist Stephen Stukas of Pasadena, Calif.

The first shovelful of ground will be turned by the trustees of the local congregation, Dr. Lloyd Byron, Thomas Manners and Capt. Louis Cavallero of the Novato Fire Department.

Pastor Wilfred Stukas will supervise the construction of the chapel and classrooms assisted by the volunteer labor of members and friends.

The congregation has been meeting at the pastor's home at 1 Arbor Circle since the first services were held in August, 1972.

Performance Set In San Rafael

The New Jerusalem Players, six members of the Jews for Jesus, will perform in drama, song and testimony at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Open Door, 647 Lindaro Street, San Rafael.

RELIGION IN AMERICA

Judaism Studied In Mail Course

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

Well, not exactly attending class together.

The convict is in jail in Texas, the Justice Department official is in Washington and the nun is in Massachusetts.

They are all a part of the American Jewish Committee's new Academy for Jewish Studies Without Walls, a set of correspondence courses which already carry credit from the University of Haifa, in Israel.

The idea for the academy was sparked by what director Yehuda Rosenman said was "a wide disparity between the high level of general education among Jews and the woefully low level of Jewish education."

In its first year of operation, therefore, the academy is offering courses in biblical thought, medieval Jewish thought, modern Jewish thought, Hasidism, Jewry in Eastern Europe and a history of American Jewry.

Even though the academy is oriented to Jewish studies, a fair number are non-Jewish.

A nun in Boston, for example, told the academy was being sponsored by a local ecumenical commission and noted "many Christians, too, could profit from what the academy has to offer."

The Texas convict, a migrant worker who dropped out of school when he was 15 to follow "the harvests from Minnesota to Wisconsin to Illinois and Oklahoma," wrote the academy that he was trying to "avoid vegetating" and hoped to major is sociology and Mexican-American history.

One man, who wrote that he had dropped out of school when he was 15, noted that he "worked as a blacksmith, farmer, sawmiller and carpenter," adding, "I hope to go on to college later on. I would like to write on religion."

Yet another applicant to the academy was a sculptress specializing in medieval motifs who said she wanted to take the course in medieval Jewish thought because she wants to incorporate the Jewish component in her work.

Many of the Jewish applicants said they wanted to take courses because they had received no religious training from their "assimilationist" parents or that their parents were "hostile to both the theory and practice of religion."

The idea of a "university without walls" was pioneered in Great Britain in 1969 with the Open University.

"There are few places today where intelligent adults who can devote only part of their time to study, or live far from centers of Jewish learning, can pursue Judaic education on a serious intellectual level," according to Rosenman.

Vision Teaching Aid Created By Optometrist

When children run with sharp pointed instruments and toys in their hands, Dr. Lawrence Babow cringes.

When youngsters ask questions, as they do, about the eyes, which few grownups can really answer, including many teachers; Larry Babow is disheartened.

So, the tall, lean bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need.

THUS, with a determination and dedication which he undertakes any project in but which belies his casual manner of speech and movement, Larry Babow found himself the creative force behind the most comprehensive but easily understandable teaching aid on vision and the eye ever developed specifically for teachers.

The goal was to create a learning tool that would be fun for elementary school children while teaching them how the eye works, with emphasis on safety.

Titled "A Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," the 34 pages of illustrations, descriptive copy and teaching hints about the visual process interrelating a variety of classroom subjects as science, logic, reading, vocabulary, health, safety, spelling, history and time-telling, is perhaps the only comprehensible book about the eye for children of its kind . . . and even for the lay adult.

Designed to stimulate the imagination of children and teachers, the book also contains three pages of ditto masters of drawings with which the teacher involves the children in class learning projects.

THIS UNIQUE teaching aid evolved from the two major interests of Larry Babow. Optometry is one, of course. Education of children is the other. Larry and his wife Barbara, as the parents of a 13 year old son, Brent, and a 10 year old daughter, Barri, are vitally interested in education and serve now as co-presidents of the Home & School Association of Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood where the Babow family lives. He has also been a special resource instructor at that school.

"So, the tall, lean, bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need."

His children also had an influential role in the development of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," for it was through them he realized how little youngsters know about the vision process and how little they are aware of the preciousness of sight. He also found that the eye was a foreign subject to most teachers, just as it is for most everyone else not in the vision care professions.

So, Larry, who had long been active in professional affairs, became particularly interested in the area of vision education; and was elected president of the Vision Conservation Institute of California, a non-profit educational corporation which is part of the California Optometric Association.

Under his aegis, the VCI began developing a series of graphic designed pamphlets for the public and for educators about different vision problems, dispelling myths and alerting the public to trouble symptoms.

THESE PAMPHLETS entitled "Fact and Fantasy," were the first such publications of their kind to be produced by VCI.

Their popularity, however, further emphasized for Dr. Babow the urgent need for some easily understandable material about vision and the eye for the schools.

A teaching aid was needed that could both inform the teacher and serve to make instruction simple and fun. The teaching tool also had to hold and involve the attention of young students in a way that they could understand the complex mechanisms of vision and still have fun.

Larry spent months pondering the approach, step by step. Then he discussed the idea with Michel Dattel, a noted San Francisco graphics designer and close friend. Dattel immediately began doing illustrations, caught up in Babow's excitement.

But, input was also needed from health educators and Larry Babow approached Gene Huber, head of elementary school health education in San Francisco. Huber eagerly contributed his ideas from a teaching point of view.

Then it was time to write the material, so Larry Babow sought the help of Los Angeles optometrist Byron Newman who is an associate editor of the California Optometric Association bi-monthly journal. Finally, the finished editing was done by the state optometric association specialists.

LARRY BABOW had all of the elements of a beautifully illustrated, well devised and written teaching aid. Now, how well would students and teachers respond to it?

The only way to find out was to go to a school and Larry Babow took the original artboards and material to the Mary E. Silveira Elementary School in Marinwood which his children attend. The response was enthusiastic.

The youngsters quickly became involved in discovering "the secrets of vision." The teachers found that they, too, not only learned about the eye and vision without slugging through a lot of technical material, but they also had a tool that could easily transmit that same information to their students.

There remained, now, only one major obstacle. Money. Funds were needed to pay for the early work of illustration and writing and to publish the initial copies.

LARRY BABOW took it upon himself to obtain the necessary grants for funding the project. He had only the artboards and copy, his enthusiasm and dedication to sell. It was enough, however, for the California Optometric Association Auxiliary raised the funds he needed.

The first printing came off the press last September. It was now necessary to put the books into the schools. Workshops for teachers demonstrating the books were given by optometrists throughout the State. Some local Optometric Societies purchased a number of the teaching aids and presented them to the school districts. In some cases, school districts purchased additional copies.

San Francisco optometrists provided the city's elementary schools with 500 copies and the school district bought 500 more this year. This first full use of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye" will be implemented in San Francisco classrooms this fall. But, the Teaching Aid on vision is still new and unfamiliar to many other school districts.

Now, Larry Babow is worrying about

Tamalpais Valley Sculptor Creates Faces From American History

By FRANK FARRARA

LESTER, born in a sod house near Cheyenne, Okla., is a direct descendant of Davy Crockett and has fashioned two busts of Crockett that are at the Alamo.

He attributed his attachment to American history to his early years. "My family goes back to the 13 colonies, and when I was a youngster Buffalo Bill was still alive and Pawnee Bail. . .and I saw Indians firsthand in teepees."

As he explained his busts, he commented, "most of these were done in the last year and there are more than twenty."

"I believe in looking inward and capturing the people. . .a journalism in Bronze," he said. "I'm doing all the ones I love. I can't wait for commissions. I don't have to compromise."

The 60-year-old sculptor, with wavy white hair and chin beard who is also a teacher, painter, art therapist, poet and marriage and family counselor, returned to sculpture in recent years after a long layoff.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around," he said. "I never chased women. I never get drunk, and I don't smoke and I eat good food."

LESTER said he didn't take any art classes in high school, but became interested one day at the library when he saw a figure of a frog carved from a frozen turnip.

He tried a bust of his mother, "which didn't look like her," and an Indian asleep and a horse by a rock in sandstone which didn't pan out.

"Then I carved a Buffalo Bill being attacked by wolves.

A man he calls, "Uncle Bill, but he really wasn't my uncle," suggested that I send it to the Oklahoma Historical Society. . .and it was placed in the museum in Oklahoma City."

"I started Abraham Lincoln by lamplight, but it was cold and the clay froze and dropped off the armature," he recalled.

Lester, while still a high school student, completed the bust of Lincoln, which won first prize in the county and third in the state.

"UNCLE BILL said if you finish high school, I'll buy a Ford V-8 and let you drive," Lester said. We went and when we came back to Oklahoma, I did a bust of Davy Crockett and on Aug. 17 I sent it to the Alamo and it's still there. . .in the Barracks Museum."

After he completed college, he said he did another "better bust" of Davy Crockett in bronze and presented it to Alamo Library in August, 1970.

Lester worked his way through Oklahoma State University during the depression "when there wasn't any money for art," establishing a National Youth Administration ceramic project and "making dishes for the NYA."

"I got into teaching, then came the war and I came out here and made plaster patterns for the aircraft industry," he said.

AFTER a spell of pottery manufacturing, he resumed teaching at Palm Springs High School and then "got tired of it and sold vacuum cleaners and had a Fuller Brush show on the radio in Indio."

He returned to teaching in San Bernardino in 1953, teaching art to mentally retarded students and serving as chairman of art and special education until 1972 when he moved to Marin.

Lester said his sculpturing, long dormant, began to revive in 1964 when he did a bust of Ken Hubbs, a Chicago Cubs player, who had been killed in an air-

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around. I never chased women, never got drunk. I don't smoke and I eat good food. I was too busy working. I'd rather wear out than rust out."

Multi-Culture Institute Deals Quietly In Overcoming Ethnic Tensions

MARIN LIVING

ACTING DIRECTOR ELAINE HOWARD PETROCELLI of Mill Valley learns about Indian ways from a young Native American at the Multi-Culture Institute Laboratory School in San Francisco.

When Elaine Howard Petrocelli, teacher and young Marin mother, joined the staff of San Francisco's Multi-Culture Institute eight years ago, she was a somewhat uncertain administrative secretary and the institute was chiefly a good idea in the head of Dr. Frances Sussna, its founder.

Today, Elaine is the institute's confident acting director, as good at getting grants from the Ford, Rockefeller and other large foundations as she has proved at administering MCI's home and regional offices, developing workshops for teacher training and serving as principal of an innovative laboratory school.

AND TODAY the rapidly-expanding Multi-Culture Institute is settling into its first permanent home — two Victorians at Pierce and Pine in San Francisco, deeded to MCI by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare — where it is running a lab school and training teachers to implement its ideas in public school systems across the country.

Briefly, the Multi-Culture Institute is a non-profit educational organization which feels that dealing with ethnic differences is an important task of our school systems. MCI feels that racial and ethnic pride can help end racial and ethnic prejudice. The students in the MCI school, and others in MCI-inspired classes, learn to enjoy and feel proud of their heritage and to understand and comfortably accept the cultural background of others.

What MCI teaches, and what it hopes to share with more and more public schools across the nation is summed up in two brightly colored lines on a classroom bulletin board: "We are different. We are the same."

That's an attitude Elaine would have appreciated years ago, when she was growing up as a member of "the only Jewish family in Columbus, Ind.

SHE REMEMBERS taking her elementary school songbook with its songs from many countries up to the teacher to ask if they could learn the Hebrew song. The teacher was scornful. That, she said, was a song of the Hebrews who were being wiped out and it was a good thing, too.

Some years later, after graduating from Ohio State, Elaine found herself on the other side of the desk in Columbus, Ohio. She taught there a year, then moved to California. Elaine recalls her year in an Oakland private school as "very hard work." She taught 3rd and 4th graders in the morning; 1st and 2nd graders in the afternoon. "After that, everything seemed easy," she says.

Elaine eventually joined the faculty of Dr. Sussna's Brandeis Day School in San Francisco, a private school in which part of the day was spent teaching the Jewish students their culture and their language.

With her memories of that teacher in Columbus, Elaine might well have decided that Brandeis offered just what the Jewish students needed. But she didn't.

"SOME OF us at the school were concerned. The children were getting a good feeling about being Jewish, but they needed more. We worried about the fact that they were only being exposed to children like themselves."

So when Elaine was invited by Dr. Sussna to leave Brandeis for the fledgling Multi-Culture Institute, she was ready for its multi-ethnic ideas.

She hadn't, though, planned on or prepared for the sizeable responsibilties she rapidly assumed.

"When I married, I saw my whole life's work as pushing my husband's career," Elaine says. "It was the whole thing ladies in the 50s took for granted."

Nonetheless, Elaine quickly became a curriculum consultant for the Multi-Culture Institute's first laboratory school, housed in donated facilities in Homewood Terrace, a one-time orphanage. Then, when several principals threw up their hands at an "impossible job," she was appointed school principal.

IN MCI'S laboratory schools, the day starts with a morning of general studies. Students work together in a strong academic program of individualized, nongraded instruction.

In the afternoon, students meet in separate cultural groups. There, led by a teacher of their ethnic group, they learn their history, their art, their music, even their language.

Sharing is an important part of the multi-culture program. At least once a week, children of one group host another, sharing some of what they've learned about themselves — a tai chi demonstration, a Spanish song, or a Chinese dish, prepared by the children themselves.

As principal, Elaine administered a school of more than 300 students in Grades K-6. When the school was forced to close early in 1972, out of a home and out of the Ford and Rockefeller foundation funds that had kept it alive, it had a waiting list as large as its student body.

AT THAT point, the Multi-Culture Institute was "absolutely desperate." Elaine remembers that "I hadn't cashed a paycheck in months. Frances (Dr. Frances Sussna) hadn't either."

They sought help but "every door was closed. People had that going out of business attitude toward us."

Home in Indiana on a family visit, Elaine approached the Irwin Sweeney Miller Foundation there. Before going in to make her presentation Elaine sat in her car, "absolutely terrified."

She remembers saying to herself, "I must be able to do this because I learned to ski even though I don't like to ski."

Positive thinking worked. At the end of the film strip and talk, Elaine had the promise of help to get MCI get back on its feet.

THE FOUNDATION grant funded a summer school and summer program of fellowship training for teachers interested in applying the Institute's program of ethnic studies in their home districts.

During the nearly three years it ran the laboratory school, MCI had hosted what Elaine recalls as "thousands of visitors" from across the nation. But the Institute didn't know how to follow up on their interest. The fellowship training solved that problem.

As the Multi-Culture Institute became more and more a resource center, sharing its ideas through workshops and summer training in its summer school, Elaine began to handle workshop development and dissemination of MCI's ideas in school districts.

Here again she took a job earlier holders had called "impossible" and made it work.

"I had very good people behind me," she says. "We knew that most good ideas stay in the pilot form and we'd all been to workshops where people went away and were no different, but we were teachers and we knew what teachers wanted."

IN 1973, the Mill Valley school system asked the Multi-Culture Institute for a consultation. Though Mill Valley schools had few minority students, Elaine considered it "important to point out to them that they all came from somewhere else, that they weren't the 'real' Americans."

The consultation was a success. "A lot of teachers began to apply this idea to the students, dealing with where the children themselves came from, not just with a Black Studies week."

Success bred success, for both Elaine and the Institute. The Lilly Endowment gave MCI three substantial grants in one year. The Rockefeller Foundation gave another grant to fund the new regional offices in Seattle, New York City and Savannah.

Best of all to the Institute, multi-culture classes have spread to public schools. MCI-trained teachers are running modified programs in public schools in New York City, Seattle, Indianapolis and Los Angeles, with more in the works.

AND ELAINE feels "really changed." She credits Terry Francois, president of the MCI since its 1966 inception, with much of the confidence-building, but whatever the source, the change has been enough to draw comments from people who had known her in "my other life, when I was at home, giving my all.;'

Along the way, she came to grips with the problem of balancing her family and her working life. "I had grown up with the feeling that you could not do both well. My children were the ones who taught me that I could do both just fine."

Raising two young children alone, Elaine was "lucky." I had a friend who wanted to take care of my children. She was an excellent mother substitute, the kind of person who should have been principal of a large elementary school. Very few people are so fortunate."

Today, happily remarried to a young lawyer whom she first met at an MCI board meeting where he was serving on the board, Elaine finds "the whole family" (now including three children) involved with MCI.

TOGETHERNESS, in fact, is a big feature of the family's days, It starts with breakfast. Everyone's up early, by 7, and Bill prepares what Elaine calls "a proper breakfast" for the whole family. "We're big on wheat germ on health-food cereals and juice," she says.

Then Grant (at 11, the oldest) and Nicole go off to schools in Mill Valley and Bill and Elaine leave the house with Kathryn, who attends the MCI laboratory school in San Francisco.

"Bill was once a semi-professional folk singer. He played at the Gourd on Union Street. After the children go to bed, he sometimes plays for me. Other times we have parties with our children and friends and their children where everyone plays the latest thing they've written or learned. The kids too."

She sees her work and Bill's (he is a legal counsel for MCI) as an advantage. "I think my children have a very interesting life," she comments. "Interesting people are always coming through the house."

Looking back to the days when she considered a career "something you did until your husband said "I don't want you to work any more," Elaine feels lucky that circumstance forced her out of a limited life.

"SO MANY of my contemporaries are caught in the same thing as I was. Their lives are not intolerable, but how much more fortunate our daughters are. When Kathryn and Nicole play house, they pack their briefcases. To them, that's what mothers do."

As she looks ahead, Elaine sees the enlargement of the MCI laboratory school, which now includes 30 kindergarten through second graders of varied ethnic backgrounds, to 60 students and grades K-6.

She also sees more regional offices, larger teacher-training programs, more application of ethnic studies programs in public schools and more awareness of how the Multi-Culture Institute's ideas can help ease racial and ethnic tensions at a time when they are strong.

Further information about the Multi-Culture Institute is available at 563-6404.

Youngsters Discover 'The Secrets Of Vision' Easily

how these books can find their way into other schoolrooms in California and across the nation.

THE DEVELOPMENT of the unique books involved over two and a half years of Larry Babow's life and considerable personal expense; for during the creation of the books and while raising funds to print them, he sacrificed much of his professional practice.

For Larry, teaching people about vision and, most important, to make them aware of the wonderful gift of vision and the need to conserve their eyes through vision care and vision safety, is all part of the world of optometry — a world he has been associated with all of his life.

Larry's father, Benjamin Babow, also is an optometrist and young Larry never doubted he would follow in his father's footsteps.

A native San Franciscan, Larry moved with his family to Marin County in 1950. After college and two years in the Army, Larry attended the Southern California Optometric College and began practicing in 1962. He now has offices in Marinwood and San Francisco.

In the 12 years as an optometrist, Larry Babow has devoted much of his time to professional affairs. He was Director of Public Information for his state association and later served as a trustee of the COA.

NOW, as the recent past president of the Vision Conservation Institute, he says he can relax a little and spend more time with his family and engage in his favorite pastimes of skiing and volleyball.

That's what Larry Babow says. But, he is already active in the Marin Teen-Beat Commission and one can be certain he will find many other new involvements, for that is the type of man he is.

But right now, a new generation of children are learning far more about the eyes and the miracle of vision than their parents did, thanks to Marin County optometrist Larry Babow.

plane crash. "I was his Sunday School teacher," Lester said.

Considering the lull in his sculpturing, Lester's output is impressive. "I'd rather wear out than rust out," he said.

Busts of Jim Thorpe, famed Indian athlete, and Hank Iba, U.S. Olympic basketball coach have been dedicated in Oklahoma.

"I met Jim Thorpe in Oklahoma City autographing baseballs and I said 'I'll do your bust someday,' and he said, in a soft voice, 'you do that,' " Lester said.

HE IS working on a life-sized bronze of the late Martin Luther King for San Bernardino civic center, a memorial at the San Francisco Hall of Justice in honor of officers killed in the line of duty, and several historical figures for museums in Wyoming and Oklahoma.

"This is one of my favorites," he said as he stopped at a bust of Jesse Chisholm. "He was Cherokee and Scotch. I love the face and the Chisholm trail cut near where I lived. Chisholm, who did some freighting with Conestoga wagons, developed a trail that followed creeks and rivers."

At a bust of "Cry Olompali," which had the hair curling upward, he explained, "The Miwoks would have cremation and then a ceremony burying bones so the spirit could jump off Point Reyes and find peace. This one represented the last one who couldn't undergo the ceremony because none was left to take care of him. The hair up signifies the spirit jumping off."

Along his walls are busts of Mayor Alioto, Cesar Chavez, John Wooden, UCLA basketball coach, and many Indians who played a role in U.S. history.

ONE OF his recent works was his bust of Chief Marin, a Miwok Indian, whose name this county bears.

Lester explained how he tackled the problem of creating a bust of Chief Marin, lacking any photograph as a guide.

"Number one, I wanted him to look like an Indian," he said. "Number two, I didn't want him to look like any other North American Indian. I wanted him to look like a Miwok.

"I got in touch with the great-great grandson of Marin and he had a photo of his grandmother. . .and I made a composite of a Miwok with chopped hair to show grief and the characteristic downturned mouth. I found out from skulls dug out of graves, there was no such thing as a typical Miwok skull."

The bust of Chief Marin will be dedicated to the Novato Pre-history museum at 3 p.m. next Saturday, with attendance by invitation only. The museum will be open to the public Nov. 3 from noon to 4 p.m.

LESTER is finishing a bust of Ishi, "last of the Yana Indians, last known stone age survivor in North America and last wild Indian."

Lester, who holds a master's degree in art is teaching mentally retarded high school students in Pittsburg, commuting 2,000 miles a month. "It's the only job I could find. . .others told me I was overqualified and they couldn't afford it."

His diversity has led him to branch into art therapy, which he said is "used when there is a breakdown in oral communication because in a drawing most draw things they most seek to hide" and include their real thoughts and feelings.

He also has a license as a marriage and family counselor, an undertaking he described as a "labor of love."

Lester advocated "unconditional love. . .that kind of love means no phoniness and no game playing which means even in marriage there is no prostitution."

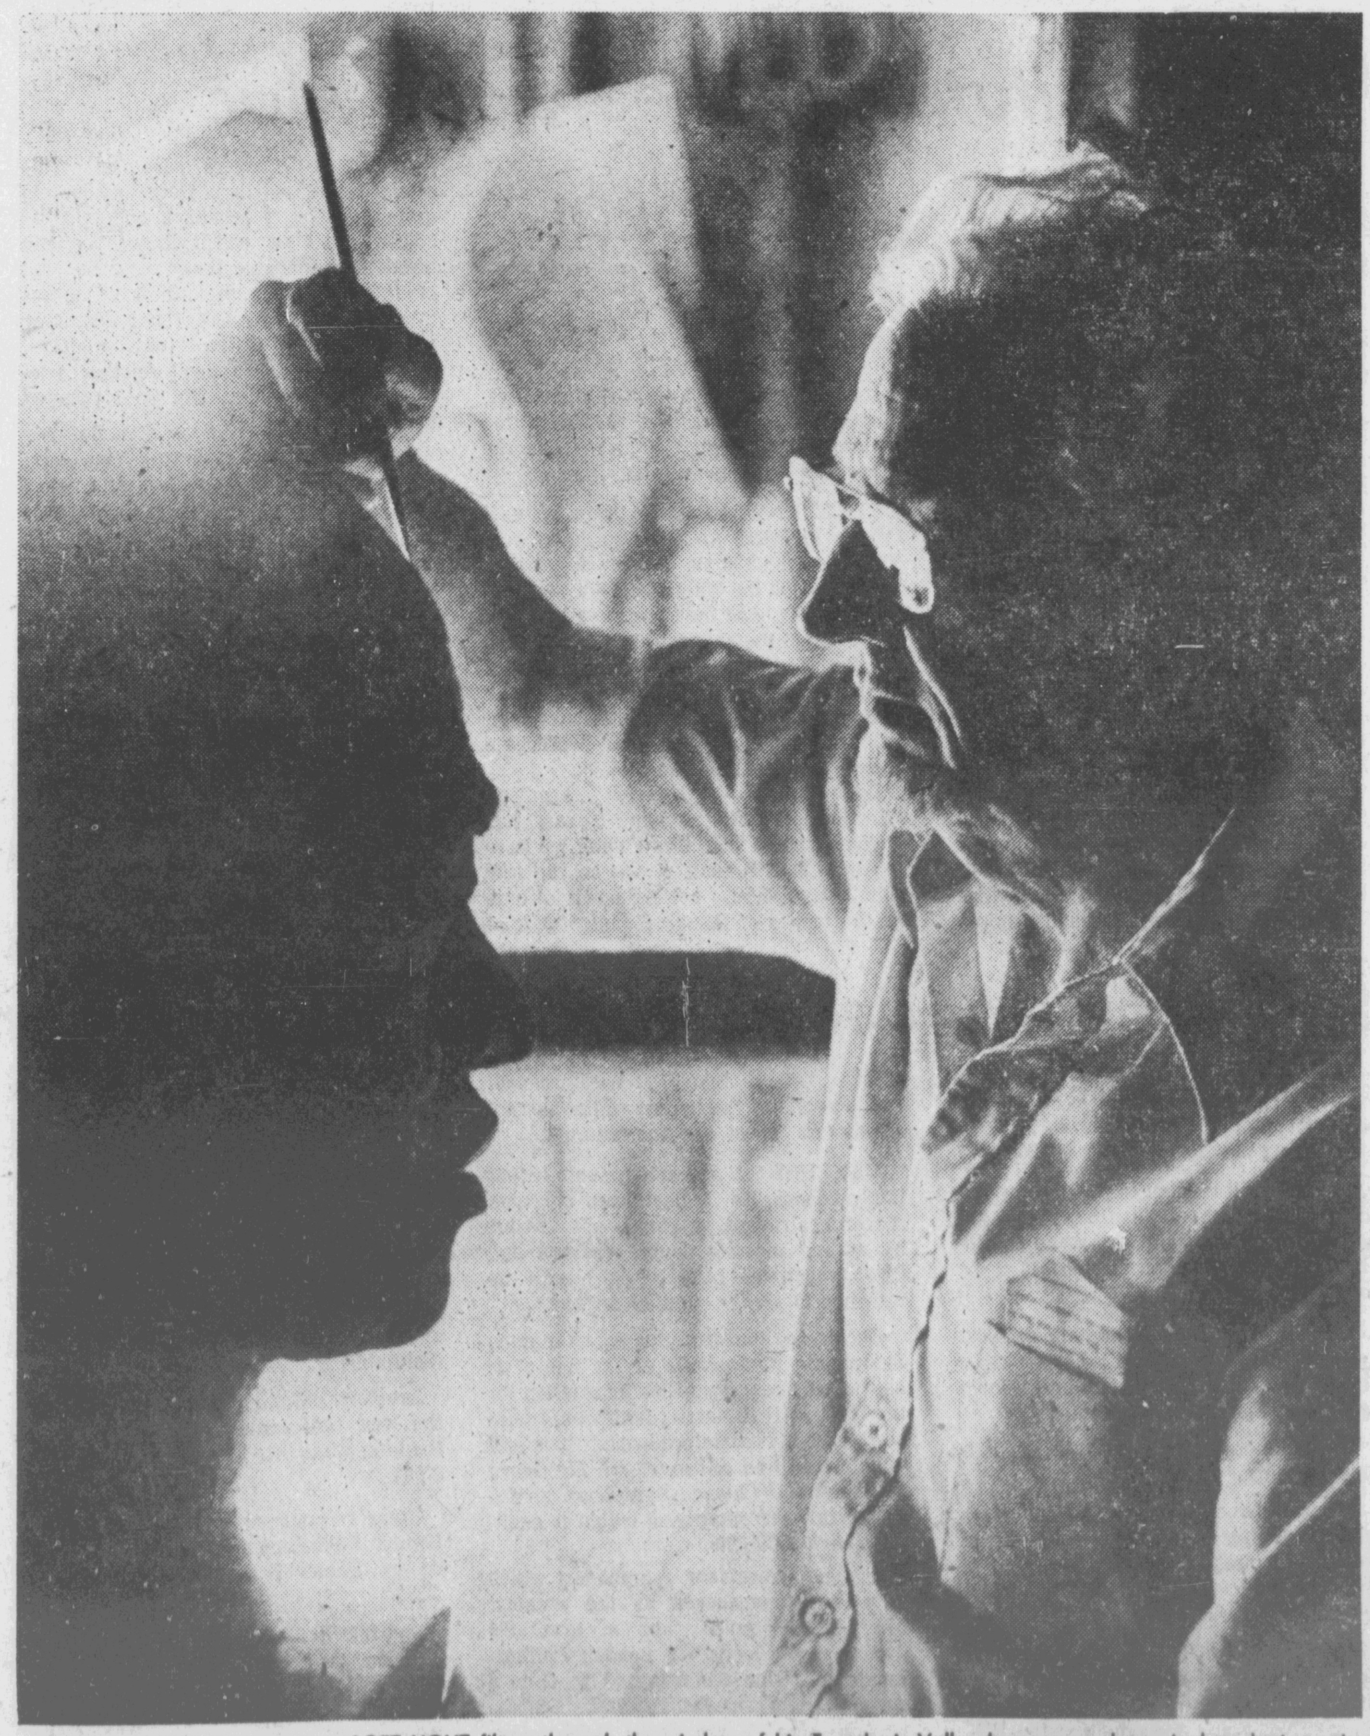
He said he doesn't belong in counseling where "they try to unmask everybody and try to destroy personality. . .to play God.

"I take them where they are, discover where they want to go and help them to become the best person they can become, discovering their own inner resources."

Lester, his wife, Mary Elizabeth, and daughter, Lorraine, six, as one might imagine, have been captured in busts which line the mantel.

MARIN LIVING

"I didn't want him to look like any other North American Indian. I wanted him to look like a Miwok. I got in touch with the great-great grandson of Marin, and he had a photo of his grandmother . . . and I made a composite of a Miwok, with chopped hair to show grief and the characteristic downturned mouth. I found out from skulls dug out of graves, there was no such thing as a typical Miwok skull."



A SOFT LIGHT filters through the window of his Tamalpais Valley home as sculptor Andrew Lester puts a few touches on his bust of Ishi, last of the Yana Indians and last known stone age survivor in North America.

A BUST OF CHIEF MARIN, Miwok Indian leader, which is to be dedicated to the Novato Pre-history Museum next Saturday is studied by Lester who said the downturned mouth was characteristic of Miwok Indians.

T-Shirt Freak Cavorts In Tiburon

History is a little vague on just who is responsible for uncovering the T-shirt. There are those who can still remember a time when no self-respecting individual would be caught with his T-shirt bared. How tasteless!

Now there are few places where the once lowly T-shirt is not accepted as haute couture. Well, almost.

Maybe the blame for this current fad belongs to Beethoven. Remember not so long ago when everywehre you looked, you saw Beethoven's placid face staring back at you, albeit on sweatshirts and not T-shirts.

OR WAS it the counter-culture movement several years ago that gave birth to the T-shirt, making it the medium for the message? Got a protest. Then get it on your chest. And the anti-establishment establishment did just that.

Put the blame where you will. The T-shirt, no longer anti-establishment, is here in all its emblazoned glory, carrying symbols, slogans and in some cases, just plain graffiti. Who knows? It could well replace the classic sandwich board sign as tomorrow's newest form of transit advertising.

No one, perhaps, has taken such advantage of this newest message medium as has Carter Blakemore Smith, the euphoric, eloquent, ebullient and erudite 3 to 7 p.m. man on KNBR Radio 68 in San Francisco.

Carter, to put it bluntly, is a T-shirt freak. And how does one support such a habit, short of expending funds? Carter just comes out and asks people to send them to him. And send they do. In ever increasing quantities.

IT ALL started as a joke when Carter noted that his mail count was getting low in comparison to the other disc jockeys at KNBR. Frank Dill was getting piles of mail each day for his Uncle Frank's Kennel Klub. And Mike Cleary had been peddling his beer and chowder recipes and getting a good response to that.

And then there was fellow Marinite Dave Niles, who is heard on KNBR from 7 PM to midnight. Every so often, Dave pulls out his time-worn beef jerky recipes when his mail count needs a boost. And every time the requests come pouring in. . .in such quantities that Dave has to bring in outside help to fill the requests.

"I can't believe it," muttered Carter each day as he watched Dave gleefully carry in the daily mail. "That's absurd. Can you imagine. All that mail for beef jerky!"

AND EACH night Carter went home to his Tiburon apartment and mulled over the answer to his mail problem. And thus he hit upon the idea of asking his listeners to give rather than to receive, noting that it is more blessed that way. "Send me your shirts," he said.

His collection now numbers in the eighties and is increasing to such an extent that Carter has already donated his collection to the Smithsonian Institution.

In his donation letter, Carter explained that the "T-shirt could well stand as the most significant chronicle of these times. Emblazoned with messages for every cause, every conceivable reason, the T-shirt of 1974 will become a page of history in itself."

In all fairness, it must be pointed out that Carter donated his collection posthumously for to do so now would be to deplete him of his entire wardrobe.

Keeping track of these T-shirts is a science in itself. Each week, Carter lays out his new acquisitions, catalogs them, marks each one down on his calendar with a future "wear" date and then stacks them in his linen-closet-turned-T-shirt-rack. That way, he never wears one more than once. Heaven forbid. That also saves on laundry bills, too.

CARTER does give credit where credit is due. Each day, he acknowledges the donor of that day's T-shirt at a predetermined time, usually 4:15 P.M.

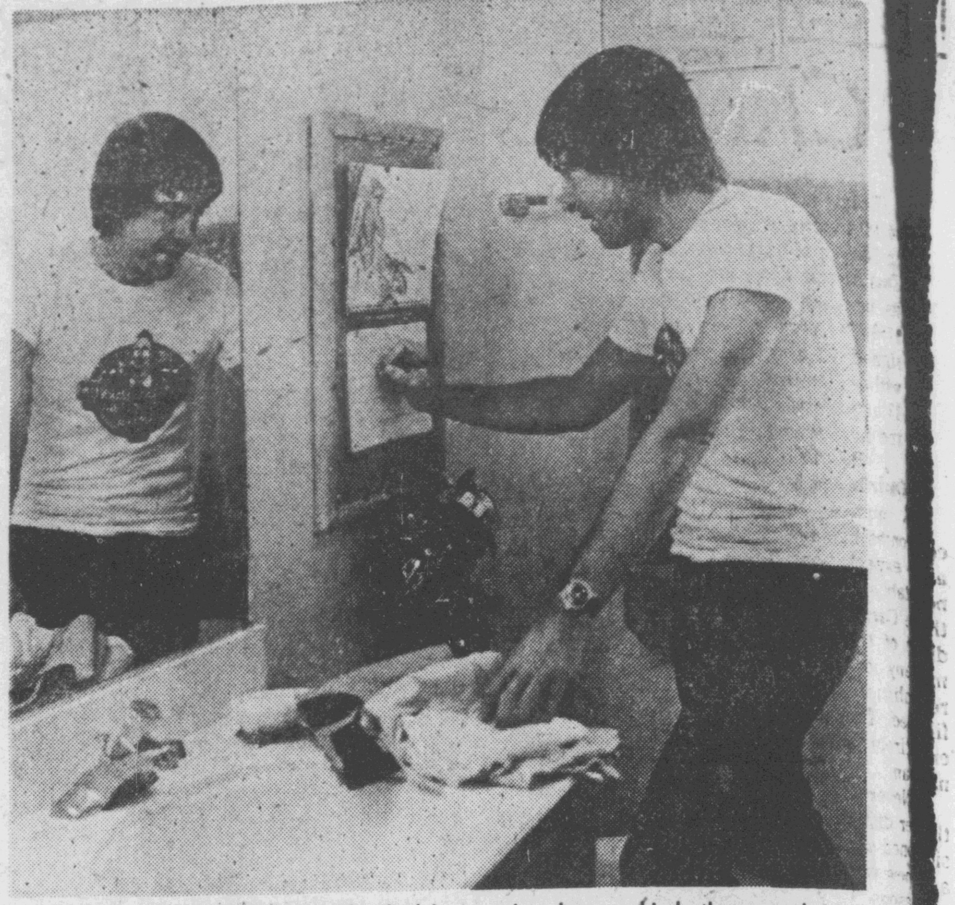
No longer does Carter hang his head in shame when the daily mail comes in. "It's like Christmas every day," he says. Dave Niles can only frown and mutter something about "Isn't that disgusting. Imagine, begging for clothes." As for Frank Dill, all he can say is "Why didn't I think of that?"

How does the public feel about the T-shirt mania at KNBR? Recently, the five KNBR disc jockeys — Dill, Cleary, Niles, Smith and the midnight fantasy man, Les Williams — attended a party celebrating the end of the 1974 KNBR frog jump season. In a party mood, the crowd started yelling for the KNBR-NBC frog jump shirts right off the guys' backs. In the subsequent auction, one female paid $41 for Carter's shirt and a total of $101 was raised from the sale of four shirts and turned over to the Lafayette Youth Adult Council.

CARTER has also evidence that his T-shirt mania has also benefitted some listeners, as evidenced by this letter from one: "Thanks to your T-shirt modeling on KNBR, I am a new person. . .suddenly a social success with all the men, the life of the party. And all because I bought you a full color Howdy Doody T-shirt. Just for kicks, I decided to try it on and as soon as I slipped it over my 36-24-34 body, I made a startling discovery. I can make Howdy Doody's ears wiggle. So now with your T-shirt and my chest, I am a new woman."

And it should also be mentioned that the principal of a Central California Valley junior high school has been seen lately walking around school in her very own KNBR frog-jump shirt.

The variety of T-shirts on the market today defies description. New heat processes allow an intricate design to be applied to a shirt almost instantly. For others, the silk screen method is still the best around.



AS THE COLLECTION grows, Smith schedules wearing days on his bathroom calendar, so he never wears one more than once. As each new T-shirt arrives, he catalogs them and marks each on the calendar with a "wear date."

Herb Alpert Brass Blowing Again With Leeway For Jazz Choruses

By DON FREEMAN

For five years, Herb Alpert's horn was silent. And in that time the Tijuana Brass sound was also rendered temporarily mute, this rollicking, joyously rhythmic sound that had led to the sale of more than 45 million records, an ingratiatingly crisp and yet mellow sound of the mid-'60s.

Last spring, Herb Alpert picked up his horn again and he liked the sound it created. He reorganized a new Tijuana Brass, bringing in Lani Hall, once of Sergio Mendes' Brasil '66, as the vocalist. Herb led his new Brass in a concert tour which began at Harrah's at Lake Tahoe, Nev., and went deep into Texas. The tour brought raves.

The last time I had seen Herb Alpert, a bit more than five years ago, he was in the old Tijuana, Mexico, bullring. They were filming publicity sequences for one of his TV specials. We had sat in the empty arena stands, on the wooden seats, and Herb was congenial, but diffident, soft-spoken, almost shy. There were also uncharacteristic hints of strain.

Five years later, Alpert could explain his low spirits. He could recall his divorce earlier that year and the overwhelming negative feelings that his music had suddenly brought him. "I'd play my horn and nothing was happening," Herb was saying. "The closer I got to the show's taping, the more panicky I became. We did the show but it was a painful experience. It wasn't long after that, I remember, that I put the horn in its case and that's where it stayed."

HERB STILL has the familiar lean look and the easy smile but the diffidence is gone.

He talks now, with directness and candor, about his music and his almost mystical approach to the horn.

"I just couldn't play my horn for those five years," Herb said. "Before I stopped playing, I felt terribly drawn. Maybe the horn was trying to tell me to dial down, relax and find the truth in myself. I needed the time to see what I was all about.

"My trumpet teacher has always told me a horn is just a 'piece of plumbing.' He means that it's just a hunk of tubing you put to your chops, your lips, and make a sound. When things go wrong, so many musicians pick on their instrument when the real problem lies within themselves.

"THE TRUMPET," Herb went on, "is a very personal instrument. It'll do whatever you want it to do. The trumpet has the widest range of the wind instruments and the most flexibility.

"A horn can be loud and piercing and sound like an elephant in a forest or it can sound like a swan on a pond. The trumpet is dynamic and versatile in terms of mood, but for me, the horn must be a positive instrument. It's intended to make me feel good while I'm playing and I want the audience to feel good, too. It should be a warming, happy sound."

Herb says, moreover, that a breakthrough has occurred within himself and this is expressed in his horn and, of course, in the sound of the Brass.

"I used to say I was a trumpet player with a few jazz inclinations," Herb says.

HERB ALPERT
Tijuana brass leader

"Now I say that I'm a jazz musician, period. Before, I'd been afraid to let too much out — both personally and musically. Jazz means freedom, spontaneity. We're playing more jazz, we've taken the old songs and opened them up, with provisions for jazz choruses. So far, it's been fantastic."

WITH THREE musicians from the former Brass — trombonist Bob Edmondson, drummer Nick Ceroli and guitarist John Pisano, plus Julius Wechter, the marimba whiz from the Baja Marimba Band — the nine-piece group retains much of the old Tijuana Brass flavor.

"We haven't made any 180-degree turn," says Alpert. "We're sort of half old way, half new way. The old Brass fans aren't disappointed. And the people who used to think we were corny will be disappointed."

Herb said: "I was listening to some of our past recordings and I could understand why the Brass caused such a commotion. It was more than a sound, it was an attitude that people picked up on. About '68 and '69, the attitude started to wane and the fun disappered. Now it's all back, the sound, the attitude, the fun. The Brass is back."

BICENTENNIAL SET TO MUSIC

The National Symphony has awarded grants to 11 composers who are to create works for performances in honor of the United States Bicentennial, during the 1975-76 and 1976-77 seasons.

Composers are Stephen Burton, Kensington, Md., a song cycle for baritone and orchestra on poems by Sylvia Plath; Luigi Dallapiccola, Florence, Italy, an orchestral work; Robert Evett, Washington, a cantata for small orchestra and choir on texts by Mark Twain; Gene Gutche, White Bear Lake, Minn., an orchestral suite on the theme of Columbus; Ulysses Kay, Teaneck, N.J., a work for orchestra and narrator; Benjamin Lees, Great Neck, N.Y., a passacaglia for orchestra; Frank Martin, who is Swiss, living in the Netherlands, a symphony for wind instruments; Juan Orrego-Salas, a Chilean teaching in Bloomington, Ind., an oratorio on a theme of Genesis; Robert Russell Bennett, New York, a choral work set on themes by William Billings; Gunther Schuller, Boston, an orchestral work, and William Schuman, New York, his 10th symphony and a choral work.

No Substitute For Fleetwood Mac

RECORD PAGE

By BRUCE MEYER

Fleetwood Mac has spent the past several years quietly establishing its reputation for flawless musicianship and non-boogie rock, staying preety much out of the spotlight when not on stage.

Early this year, the band's manager fielded a substitute group using the FM name.

The fans were not fooled, the substitute group was booed off the stage and the real FM finally won an injunction against their by-then former manager to keep the name.

Now, Mac has a new album — "Heroes Are Hard to Find" Reprise MS-2196 — and from the first note there is no doubt that this is the real thing.

THEIR MUSIC is as it always has been: powerful but not overbearing, sophisticated rock almost completely free of its simple blues roots, compelling in the overall feeling of quality.

Some new albums:

Andy Kim — "Rock Me Gently" (Capitol 111318) a very nearly perfect commercial effort from a Canadian-born Top-40 veteran turned Neil Diamond soundalike. A natural to take over Diamond's empty soft-rock throne, Kim wrote all the songs, played guitar, sang and produced this album. Almost every cut is — like the title track — a potential hit single.

STEPPENWOLF — "Slow Flux" (Mums PZ-33093) An amazing throwback. There is virtually no difference between the sound of the reformed 1974 Steppenwolf and the band that hammered its way to the top of the charts in 1968 with "Born To Be Wild." The only real flaw for Steppenwolf fans on this album is a painfully lame and out-of-character topical tune about Nixon and Watergate called "Justice Don't Be Slow."

Doug Sahm — "Groovers Paradise" (Warners BS-2810) Austin, Texas, has become in 1974 the closest thing we have to what San Francisco was in the late 60's. Doug Sahm — better known to some as the leader of the Sir Douglas Quintet — calls it "groovers paradise." This album is the best thing Doug has done in quite a while, a laid-back collection of country rock 'n' roll ballads; you can almost feel that fine Texas sunshine. Alot of the credit for the album's success must go to former Creedence drummer Doug "Cosmo" Clifford, who produced and handled percussion. Another one-third of Creedence, Stu Cook, played bass.

IT'S RUMORED that Elvis Presley's next album will be entirely spoken word — featuring Elvis' "ad lib" stage humor . . . Jethro Tull returns to the British concert circuit in November after a year's "retirement." Tull's new album is called "Warchild" . . . all woman band Fanny backed Who drummer Keith Moon on his solo album . . . Bad Company took everything in sight in the prestigious 1974 Melody Maker readers poll in England.

Mick Jagger reported going through a batch of vintage Rolling Stones tapes for an LP . . . Elton John is embarked on a three-month U.S. tour . . . David Bowie is mixing a two-record live LP. He reportedly told Zoo World magazine the album represents the end of the "first phase" of his career, whatever that means.

Symphony Not Dead, Just Sleeping

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

Like the novel, the symphony is said to be in trouble in a century whose artists are seeking new forms of expression.

Their search is often to the accompaniment of horrified catcalls from the rest of us. And it can be said with some confidence that the symphony is too big to be forgotten.

AFTER ALL it has been the highest type of instrumental music almost since Haydn and Mozart fixed its modern form in the last half of the 18th Century.

The symphony is not really dead; it is only sleeping.

All the above is by way of reflection while listening at random to a pile of recent recordings of symphonies, none of them very new and linked in little else but being symphonies.

Colin Davis has two recent releases of Beethoven Symphonies with different orchestras for different companies — Symphonies No. 5 and 8 conducting the BBC Symphony (Philips 6500 462) and No. 7 conducting the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (Angel S-37027). With reason, Davis is one of the hottest of the current conductors. These are fine readings.

A TECHNICAL and artistic note is that in Symphony No. 5 Beethoven enlarged the orchestra left by Haydn and Mozart by adding piccolo, double bassoon and three trombones. In both Nos. 7 and 8, he returned to earlier, smaller orchestras.

Hector Berlioz wrote his epoch making Symphonie Fantastique at the age of 26 as the musica story of his infatuation for the Irish actress Harriet Smithson, whom he later unfortunately married. It is still vivid, fresh and controversial. Sir Georg Solti and the Chicago Symphony give a masterful performance of it that is exciting (London CS6790).

Brahms wrote four symphonies which have been considered as the greatest after Beethoven in point of time. Sir Adrian Boult leads the London Philharmonic in a fine recording of No. 2 on a recent Angel release (S-37032). On the reverse side, Mezzo Janet Baker sings the Alto Rapsody Brahms wrote as a bridal song for Julie Schumann.

Camille Saint-Saens wrote three fine symphonies. No. 3 has many recordings. Nos. 1 and 2 have just had their first stereo recording by Jean Martinon conducting the National Orchestra of the French Radio Television Angel S-36995.

OTHERS:

Haydn's Symphonies No. 95 and 96 played by the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Leonard Bernstein (Columbia M 32598).

Bruckner's Symphony No. 8 played by the New Philharmonic Orchestra under the late, great Otto Klemperer Angel (SB-3799).

Elgar's Symphony No. 1 played by the London Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Daniel Barenboim Columbia M (32807).

Shostakovich's Symphony No. 3 May 1 and No. 11, 1905 played by the Moscow Philharmonic under the direction of Kiril Kondrashin (Angel-Melodiya S-40245 and S-40244). These complete the Angel-Melodiya releases of Shostakovich's Symphonies.

IN SEARCH OF THE AMERICAN DREAM:

Changes As Colonists Begin To Believe In Themselves

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of 18 articles exploring the theme, In Search of the American Dream. This article discusses colonial life, its ups and its downs, during the 1750-1775 period. The series is designed as a study course with or without college credit. The other 13 articles will follow each week in the I-J's Marin Living section)

By MICHAEL KAMMEN
Distributed by Copley News Service

A number of the North American colonies had been established with utopian expectations of one kind of another, notably in New England, Pennsylvania, the Carolinas, and Georgia. By the middle of the eighteenth century, however, many of their more wistful (and less realistic) aspirations remained unfulfilled. The New Jerusalem had not been entirely achieved; not even a New Canaan.

Nevertheless, the colonists were neither distressed, by and large, nor disillusioned with their progress as pilgrims in a new world. This essay will focus on the reasons why: the American colonists' sense of what they had achieved, who they were, and what sorts of opportunities — and decisions — lay ahead of them.

"Adams quite clearly did not envision America's being or becoming such a 'Eutopia' and his judgment was increasingly rooted in a firm sense of social reality."

In examining the period from about 1750 until 1775, I shall try to distinguish between what was already then immanent, and what would soon be imminent, between what had been accomplished and what was yet impending.

Eighteenth-century life was considerably more secularized than it had been in the seventeenth. Nonetheless Cotton Mather, the Boston clergyman, and his ministerial colleagues prior to 1750 had, in the words of one authority, "inaugurated an era of apocalyptical expectation in America that did not lose its force until after the American Revolution."

While clergymen worked for an immediate conversion of the American Israel as God's chosen people, they also prepared for the millennium and its aftermath. Given such hopes and apprehensions for the world-to-come, therefore, pious pioneers had no great need for earthy utopias. Temporal perfection was fit work only for the nearsighted or the myopic. God's children looked ahead.

Those who were not of an evangelical persuasion also had compelling reasons to doubt the perfectibility of this life. In 1756 John Adams speculated in his diary upon the consequences if "a nation in some distant region, should take the Bible for their only law Book and every member should regulate his conduct by the precepts there exhibited . . . What a eutopia, what a paradise would this region be," he concluded.

Adams quite clearly did not envision America's being or becoming such a "eutopia," and his judgment was increasingly rooted in a firm sense of social reality.

In 1767 he visited a poor family in Braintree, Mass., where the husband, wife, and five children all occupied "one chamber, which serves them for kitchen, cellar, dining room, parlour, and bedchamber . . . These are the conveniences and ornaments of a life of poverty. These are the comforts of the poor. This is want."

Still, if colonial America was not the best of all possible worlds, it was better than most; and many sincerely believed it to be the best that had ever existed. Evidence of population growth in relationship to environmental resources suggested that inhabitants of the colonies, on the average, married younger, had more children, owned more land, stayed healthier and lived longer than their cousins in the Old World.

Benjamin Franklin, in his famous "Observations Concerning the Increase of Mankind," wrote in 1751 that land was so bountiful and cheap in America, that

> "a labouring man, that understands Husbandry, can in short time save money enough to purchase a piece of new land sufficient for a plantation, whereupon he may subsist a family; such are not afraid to marry; for if they even look far enough forward to consider how their children when grown up are to be provided for, they see that more land is to be had at rates equally easy, all circumstances considered."

The quality of life in America was actually more complex, of course, than Franklin in his optimistic mood let on. Death, for example, was not merely a fact of life, but often an ironic one.

Jonathan Edwards, the greatest colonial theologian and philosopher, died of smallpox in 1758 — one month after being improperly inoculated against the very same dread disease. Bloodletting hastened rather than hindered George Washington's demise in 1799. And some suspected that early American medical practices were scarcely an improvement upon those of primitive witch doctors.

"If social stratification had begun to make its appearance manifest, so too had an ethos of egalitarianism, at least among white males in their civic capacities — an ethos that would come to fruition during the revolution."

In July, 1775, one physician remarked of his fellows that "if they live near the sea, (they) order the patient to take a ride in the country; if inland, to take the sea air and perhaps a turn off in a pilot boat."

Even so, there is strong evidence to support Benjamin Franklin's emphasis upon the beneficial qualities of America's abundant environment. The colonies had a very substantial middle class, even in the plantation economies of the Chesapeake and lower South.

Historians have recently discovered that in Maryland, for example, the percentage of planters with personal wealth in the "middling bracket" — between 100 pounds sterling and 1,000 pounds (approximately equal to $2,577 and $25,770 in 1969 purchasing power) — steadily increased during the period 1710-1760.

In the early part of this period, from 1710-1719, 84 per cent of the planter families had a net worth in personal property of 100 pounds or less, while fewer than 1 per cent of such families had a net worth of 1,000 pounds or more.

By the 1730s, those at the lower end of the scale constituted only 73 per cent, with 2 per cent worth 1,000 pounds or more; and by the 1750s, the comparable figures were 67 per cent and just under 2 per cent.

Thus the intermediate stratum of planting families — with personal wealth between 100 pounds and 1,000 pounds — increased from 15 per cent to 25 per cent to 31 per cent in these years, while the lower echelons decreased in size proportionately.

By 1760, two-thirds of the planter class in Maryland were really lesser farmers, and they were primarily responsible for the growth of that colony's tobacco export.

If social stratification had begun to make its appearance manifest, so too had an ethos of egalitarianism, at least among white males in their civic capacities — an ethos that would come to fruition during the révolution. In 1775 Pennsylvania's laws were deemed "the mildest, and most equitable now in force on the terrestrial globe."

And Thomas Jefferson's bill defining citizenship in Virginia declared that

> "The free white inhabitants of every (one) of the states, parties to the American confederation . . . shall be intitled to all rights, privileges, and immunities of free citizens in this commonwealth, and shall have free egress, and regress, to and from the same, and shall enjoy therein, all the privileges of trade, and commerce, subject to the same duties, impositions and restrictions as the citizens of this commonwealth."

Jefferson's stress upon reciprocal arrangements among citizens of the fledgling states was important because Americans on the eve of the revolution had begun to give serious thought to their common heritage as well as to their diversity.

As John Adams noted in 1776, all of the colonies "differed in religion, laws, customs, and manners, yet in the great essentials of society and government, they are all alike."

The most difficult problem during the two decades prior to 1776, however, was not the colonists' relative commonality or variety, but rather their mutual relationships with Britain. Growing awareness of their parochialism spawned a rising sense of provincial chauvinism. Their customary cultural anglophilia — a preference for English styles in dress, furnishings, and manners — began to be offset by a volatile anglophobia in public affairs.

"Even the meaning of being 'American' began to undergo subtle but significant shifts. For most of the colonial period an 'American' had meant an Indian."

Even the meaning of being "American" began to undergo subtle but significant shifts. For most of the colonial period an "American" had meant an Indian. After 1763, however, polemical essays came to be signed with "Britannus-Americanus" and the like, a sign of change and ambiguity in the colonists' sense of identity.

Eventually the "American Farmer" acquired connotations of patriotism and ethnic comprehensiveness broad enough to include the polyglot sons of European parents, yet exclusive enough to strip the native red Americans of their traditional geographic patronym. What's in a name? Oftentimes a sense of identity, and sometimes even a sense of community.

The more articulate leaders of American society attempted to describe their new sense of self and society. Their definitions depended partly upon economic assets and upon rustic simplicity and educational opportunity.

And in part they were predicated upon growing unity in political matters — what one prominent liberal clergyman called, in 1766, a "communion of colonies."

Raising the colonists' cultural aspirations, and raising their literacy rates as well, had ideological implications not fully foreseen or understood before 1775.

Early in the 1770s, Franklin wrote that the numerous new subscription libraries had "improved the general conversation of the Americans, made the common tradesmen and farmers as intelligent as most gentlemen from other countries, and perhaps have contributed in some degree to the stand so generally made throughout the colonies in defense of their privileges."

The provincials thus began to believe in themselves; and, wonderfully but intangibly, the belief helped to transform them. Their rustic deficiencies now appeared as advantages if not, indeed, as virtues.

To wear a "leathern apron" became a high mark of republican status, and no longer the debased condition of boorish journeymen. British subjects were about to become American citizens; and the critical stages in their metamorphosis required both virtue and republicanism. Between 1776 and 1787, therefore, the Americans would have to redefine the meaning and implications of those two concepts.

A GLIMPSE

Music can faintly be heard
Floating down from the open window.
The streets are littered and muddy.
Graffiti is scribbled on the worn fences.
The stairs are old and broken and the door needs paint.
The flat has a pecular smell that I can't make out.
Last week's paper on the table.
Yesterday's dishes in the sink.

Gossip
On the hills;

Like housewives
Wearing
Colored aprons
Leaning over Windowsills;

Exchanging Tidbits on the

Glancing
Towards the Bay;

Flower pots
Chit and chat
And cheer
With what
They say.

Novel Of Prison Life Has Emotional Reality

(Editor's Note: The reviewer, Albert F. Nussbaum is serving a 40-year sentence in a federal penitentiary in Marion, Ill., for multiple bank robberies. In recent years his stories and articles have appeared in periodicals including Arthur Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine, The American Scholar and Harper's.)

LETHAL GAS by Ron Kurz; M. Evans & Co., 247 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

RON KURZ
Tale of prison

The best of the prison novels of the past ("On the Yard," for example), good as they were, failed to convey a completely accurate impression of the subtle, but devastating effect confinement often has on a man's perceptions. For instance, time compresses as though it were under the same pressure as the prisoners — a month may seem like a day to a man who has been locked up for a long time and has more of the same to look forward to.

Once a man adjusts to the prison routine, he fights any changes in it; for, if the routine is broken, so is this spell that has been cast on time. Time will begin to drag until a new routine can be established and he once again speeds toward his release date. Routine, and the illusion of rapidly passing time that accompanies it, is probably the only thing that keeps a man with an excessively long sentence from going insane.

I never thought anyone would be able to capture the prison experience on a printed page. It seemed to me there were far too many things that had to be lived to be believed, and most of them couldn't be described as easily as the time phenomenon. I was certain that no one who wasn't a prisoner, or who hadn't been a prisoner, could even come close.

I was wrong.

Ron Kurz has done a very credible job. Kurz uses beautifully conceived official reports, memos, diary pages, transcripts, newspaper clippings and equally expert narrative to tell his story of an unsophisticated black prisoner and the young white guard who befriends him.

Rather than attempt to show a reality that would seem bland at best, he has recreated the emotional experience. Through the carefully restrained use of black humor, distortion and hyperbole, he makes readers feel the anger, horror, futility and impotence that until now only prisoners and their keepers have ever known.

"Lethal Gas" has many of the same qualities as "Catch 22" while avoiding the major flaw, excessive length, of that modern classic. Actually, page for page, "Lethal Gas" is a far better book. I think Ron Kurz went completely crazy during the last 20-odd pages, but, except for that, I feel he has created a near-perfect book.

Story Of The Archaelogist Who Discovered Ancient Troy

THE DREAM OF TROY, by Arnold C. Brackman, Mason and Lipscomb, 246 pages, $10.00. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Who was Heinrich Schliemann? Discoverer of ancient Troy, avid amateur archaeologist, wild wielder of pick and shovel, business genius and multi-millionaire.

Arnold C. Brackman has written an objective account of this brilliant, dedicated and difficult man and has, in a small way, also explored the mania that must motivate all archaeologists.

Schliemann, destined to be the world's best-known digger of ancient civilizations, was for years the bane of professors and scientists. Only recently has he gained their reluctant acceptance.

Yet during his two decades as a practicing archaeologist — 1870 to 1890 — he brought to their dusty science the glamour and publicity that has made life easier, via public interest and ensuing financial grants, ever since.

In the beginning Schliemann was poor. But he made millions, then concentrated on proving that Homer's Troy actually existed. His methods were crude and wasteful. He cut a vast trench straight through a hill, wrecking centuries of ruins. Yet he found hoards of golden treasure and, though he didn't recognize it as such, he located the Troy of "The Iliad."

Writer Brackman throws a bright light on some of the more shadowy aspects of Schliemann's career: his first, unhappy marriage; his second, idyllic mail-order marriage to a Greek girl half his age; his business ventures, which included gun-running and the amassing of a second fortune during the California gold rush.

Brackman is no Richard Halliburton and this biography is more factual than romantic. Nevertheless, his style is crisp and his story recommended to all Trojan, Schliemann, and archaeological buffs.

The Future Is Closing In On Man

MY PETITION FOR MORE SPACE by John Hersey; Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., $5.95, 182 pages. Reviewed by Rucha Robinson.

The future becomes less fantastic to us the closer it resembles the world we live in and our visions of futuristic chrome monsters ruling and controlling us are replaced by a mroe realistic vision of man reaping his own foolish karma.

Such is the world John Hersey shows us in "My Petition for More Space:" people living elbow to elbow, shuffling to work in never-ending masses, subsisting on protein allotments, assigned jobs, petitions entered and denied, a faceless bureaucracy. It is not yet our world, but it is not so difficult to imagine.

People crowd upon each other so densely packed that privacy is no longer defined as being alone, but as feeling alone. They live and sleep in communal halls, and are given space according to the size of family (which is never larger than three) and the quality of the living quarters.

Samuel David Poynter has stood in line for six days to enter his petition for more

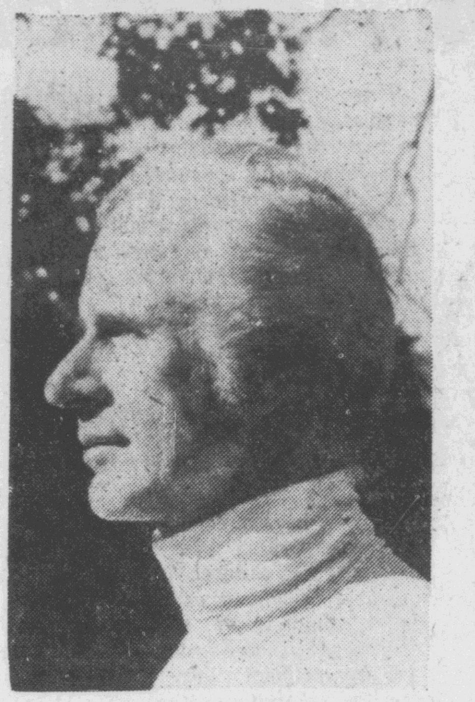
Identity, however, is not such an easy thing to establish. It is not simply how others see us, or how we see ourselves; it does not rest only in what we own, or even what we wish for or hope for or feel we need. Perhaps it is a combination of all of these. The masses around him and the swarms trudging off the work each bear their own mark, and "the thought of being lost in fusion with vivid individualities is far more terrifying then, let us say, facelessness, ego-failure, anomie, exile."

By the end of his wait, Samuel David Poynter has indeed been given more space. It is not the physical space he is petitioning for, but psychic space, a kind of self-induced anomie that separates him from the masses. And in a world where success has different names and guises, this can be called succeeding.



JOHN HERSEY

space in the sleeping-hall. He lives in an area seven by eleven feet. He wants his space increased to eight by twelve which is the maximum for a single person. Each previous day he has had to leave for work before reaching the windows. Today he hopes to succeed.

The book covers the last hour he spends in the waitline before reaching the windows. If reaching the windows can be termed success, he does in fact succeed.

Petitions, one gets the feeling, are never granted. Outright success is never assured, or doesn't seem to exist, so it must be given different names and guises if it is to exist in any form. "I wonder how I am going to start off," Sam thinks. "I will clear my throat and say, 'My petition is for more space in the sleeping-hall.' That is direct, but it sounds weak. I must assert my right to what I want. I must get across to whoever or whatever is behind the window that I am special."

What is being special? It is not so simple as having an identity. Everyone, after all, has an identity. After four hours of the waitline, Sam begins to see people by the parts of their bodies he can identify.

Florida History Strong But Writing Monotonous

SATAN'S BACK YARD by Sam J. Slate; Doubleday, 254 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Paul Helford.

Sam J. Slate's "Satan's Back Yard" is not another "Exorcist"-spinoff. The title refers to the state of Florida, an area which was a center for pirates, outlaws, and mercenaries before it was purchased by the United States.

A good historical novel should present familiar places as they once were and historical figures as they might have been. There is plenty of both in "Satan's Back Yard." Author Slate takes his readers from Washington D.C. (where the capital building, after four coats of paint, has just been nicknamed the White House) through South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida.

A fictional character, Jonathon Ames, is sent by President Madison, Thomas Jefferson, and Secretary of War, William Crawford to join General Gregor MacGregor who plans to free Florida from Spanish rule.

Slate knows his history and obviously put a great deal of effort into research. Unfortunately the same cannot be said about the writing.

The writing is dull, and the tone, monotonous. The conversations are unbelievable and are conveniently used to add historical tidbits or heavy-handedly further the action. None of the characters have depth, and some are painful stereotypes.

There is for example, a black slave who not only has common sense and saves his white master's hide over and over, but also has knowledge about everything that comes up — the sea, liquor, Indians, weaponry, women.

There is a lustful Spanish woman whose husband is old and away, thus giving her the opportunity to teach the way of flesh to a young Puritan. And despite their accents, the slave, the woman, a French captain, and a Scottish general all sound alike.

"Satan's Back Yard" is less dry than a history text book, but unless historical novels are a passion of yours, I wouldn't recommend it.

Mysteries About Poe Base Of Clever Plot

A SINGULAR. CONSPIRACY by Barry Perowne; Bobbs-Merrill, 209 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

Two mysteries surround the life and work of Edgar Allan Poe. The first is his whereabouts from January to May 1844. And the second is the extraordinarily high reputation his work enjoys in France, where it was first translated by Poe's contemporary, the dark minded poet Charles Baudelaire.

Veteran novelist Barry Perowne has entwined these two enigmas into a flawed but entertaining novel entitled "A Singular Conspiracy."

Through a melodramatic but plausible device believable when applied to a man so histrionic as Poe, "A Singular Conspiracy" takes our bending and tippling author of "The Gold Bug" and other tales to Paris to fill the five-month gap in his biography.

Once in Paris, Poe, a failed West Pointer with dreams of glory, is turned down in his application to join a group of officers going to the assistance of the Polish movement for independence from Russia. The general who emphatically rejects Poe has a stepson, none other than Charles Baudelaire, whom he treats with the same disdain.

Poe and Baudelaire, already united in their pursuit of bigger than life dissipation, complete their budding friendship with shared hatred of the general, and plan a conspiracy.

What ensues is a very clever plot, the kind of audacious scheme that Poe just might have concocted. Barry Perowne takes his two strange characters around and about the gas lit diversions of nineteenth century Paris, weaving a good escapist tale.

Perowne's only drawback is his sometimes excessive prose, full of old fashioned adjectives and similies. Scarlet ladies wear diaphanous garments, diadems are regal, hair is raven, and a black girl's body glows like burnished ebony. All this takes the reader back years to the thrillers of Sax Rohmer and Edgar Wallace, though it is a rather nice time trip.

Diamond Theft At Tiffany's

THE TIFFANY CAPER by Joseph Purtell; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Joseph Purtell is a writer — a former Time magazine editor turned weekly newspaper publisher — who has authoried a history of Tifany's, the famous jewelry firm.

In Purtell's novel, "The Tiffany Caper," his chief character is Robert Castle, a writer, commissioned to do a history of Tiffany's.

Purtell thus began with a considerable amount of his spadework already done.

In his freewheeling story, Castle is pressured by a jewel thief into participating in the theft of the 128-carat Tiffany diamond. Only Castle's inside knowledge and access will make the heist possible. And if Castle won't cooperate, the thief will kill the writer's kookie but lovable girl friend Jennifer O'Shea.

The heist comes off, but that is just the beginning. Castle and Jennifer decide upon a counter-ploy to recover the gem and clear their names. What follows is fast-paced and hectic, told in a breezy, humorous style. The dialogue is often witty and funny. Yet it would be overpraise to say "The Tiffany Caper" succeeds completely. There are spots where the humor doesn't come off. And times when the whole thing seems too shallow even for a spoof.

Summed up, the novel is enjoyable enough. But also forgettable. As these kind of things usually are, and perhaps as they should be.

SENATOR SAM ON WATERGATE

"I think that the Watergate tragedy is the greatest tragedy this country has suffered. I used to think that the Civil War was our country's greatest tragedy, but I do remember that there were some redeeming features in the Civil War in that there was some spirit of sacrifice and heroism displayed on both sides. I see no redeeming features in Watergate." Sen. Sam Ervin in "The Wisdom of Sam Ervin," published by Ballantine.

Thorp Dissects Suburban Life

Thorp, who zeroed in on police work in his best-seller, "The Detective," has in this new novel broadened his scope to cover many lives in a contemporary suburban community.

In an accurate reflection of life in such communities, he presents a story that could apply aptly to Marin, leaving the reader with a feeling of familiarity with the characters.

The story, centered around the killing of a teen-ager by a young police officer, reaches into the lives of the young and old, parents and children, officials and rebels.

The impact of conflicts and events, however, are diffused by the seeming multitude of characters and the device of switching from place to place a la television cuts.

Joan Kennedy Seeks Self Away From Family Aura

"JOAN THE RELUCTANT KENNEDY" by Lester David; Funk and Wagnalls Publishing Co. 264 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Joan Lisetor.

In the final sentence of the book, "Joan the Reluctant Kennedy," author Lester David sums up the entire book, "No longer intimidated by the Kennedy name and dazzle, Joan is learning to be her own woman now, seeking fulfillment, not in what the family holds dear and expects, but in her friends, her music, her children, her own life."

At 26 Joan Bennett Kennedy came to Washington, D.C., the wife of a handsome young senator, sister-in-law of the President and the Attorney General. She lived a brief fairy tale life until the day tragedy struck for the first time since she had become a Kennedy — Nov. 22, 1963. The tragic events she has faced since that day are history, but less known are the personal frustrations with which Mrs. Kennedy has struggled.

David has woven into the book interesting anecdotes about other members of the Kennedy family and about other Washington women, which serve to further illustrate the personality of Joan Kennedy, showing her in contrast to those around her.

Quotes from many persons close to her and from psychologists and psychiatrists who have never met her delve into the personality of this woman portrayed as an individual struggling for self confidence, for attention and to overcome her insecurities and anxieties.

Unfortunately, the well written and interesting book is a masterpiece in poor timing. Written while curiosity was growing and Americans were asking, "What is this woman really like who might be our first lady?" its publication date coincided with her husband's announcement that he will not seek the presidency in 1976.

THE NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

For "philodendron phans," Joel and Lynn Rapp (Mr. and Mrs. Mother Earth) have followed their highly successful "Mother Earth's Hassle-Free Indoor Plant Book" of 1973 with a sequel, "Grow With Your Plants the Mother Earth Hassle-Free Way."

J. P. Tarcher Inc., 9110 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, is the publisher, and Hawthorn Books the distributor.

In their new book the Rapps emphasize the pleasures and personal growth that can come from the plant-growing experience. "This is not just a book about what you can do for your plants," they advise. "This is a book about what your plants will do for you."

But along with the philosophizing, there is also some practical advice on growing plants indoors. The drawings, again, are by Marvin Rubin. And the whole thing is kept at a chatty, breezy level, although you are given to understand that the Rapps are serious about their mission as "missionaries of the green."

ALFRED A. KNOPF puts out annually a diary featuring a selection for each week from "The Prophet" and other writings of Kahlil Gibran, and the 1975 diary is out, beautifully bound and designed as in the past. "One May not reach the dawn save by the path of the night," reads the quotation for the week of March 24. And for June 2-8: "They deem me mad because I will not sell my days for gold. And I deem them mad because they think my days have a price." But the diary has a price — $5.

THE BIG NEW thing in gardening is hydroponics or the substitution of water and mineral salts for soil in the growing of plants. James Sholto Douglas has written extensively upon the subject, including "Beginner's Guide to Hydroponics," now published as a $2.95 paperback by Drake Publishers.

"JUNK SCULPTURE" is a new Sterling Little Craft Book Series title, $2.95, by Gregg Lefebre, teacher and sculptor, using projects created by his own sixth grade students from materials picked up in vacant lots and out of trash cans.

PAUL WOOD offers instruction and inspiration for beginners in his craft in "Starting With Stained Glass," published by Sterling at $2.95.

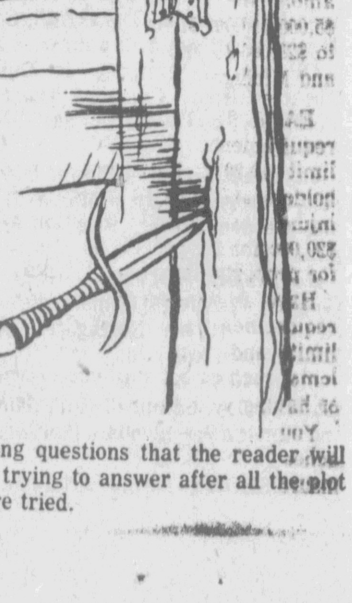
Father Quelloni died over his solitary spaghetti dinner. For an old and corpulent priest this death did not seem remarkable.

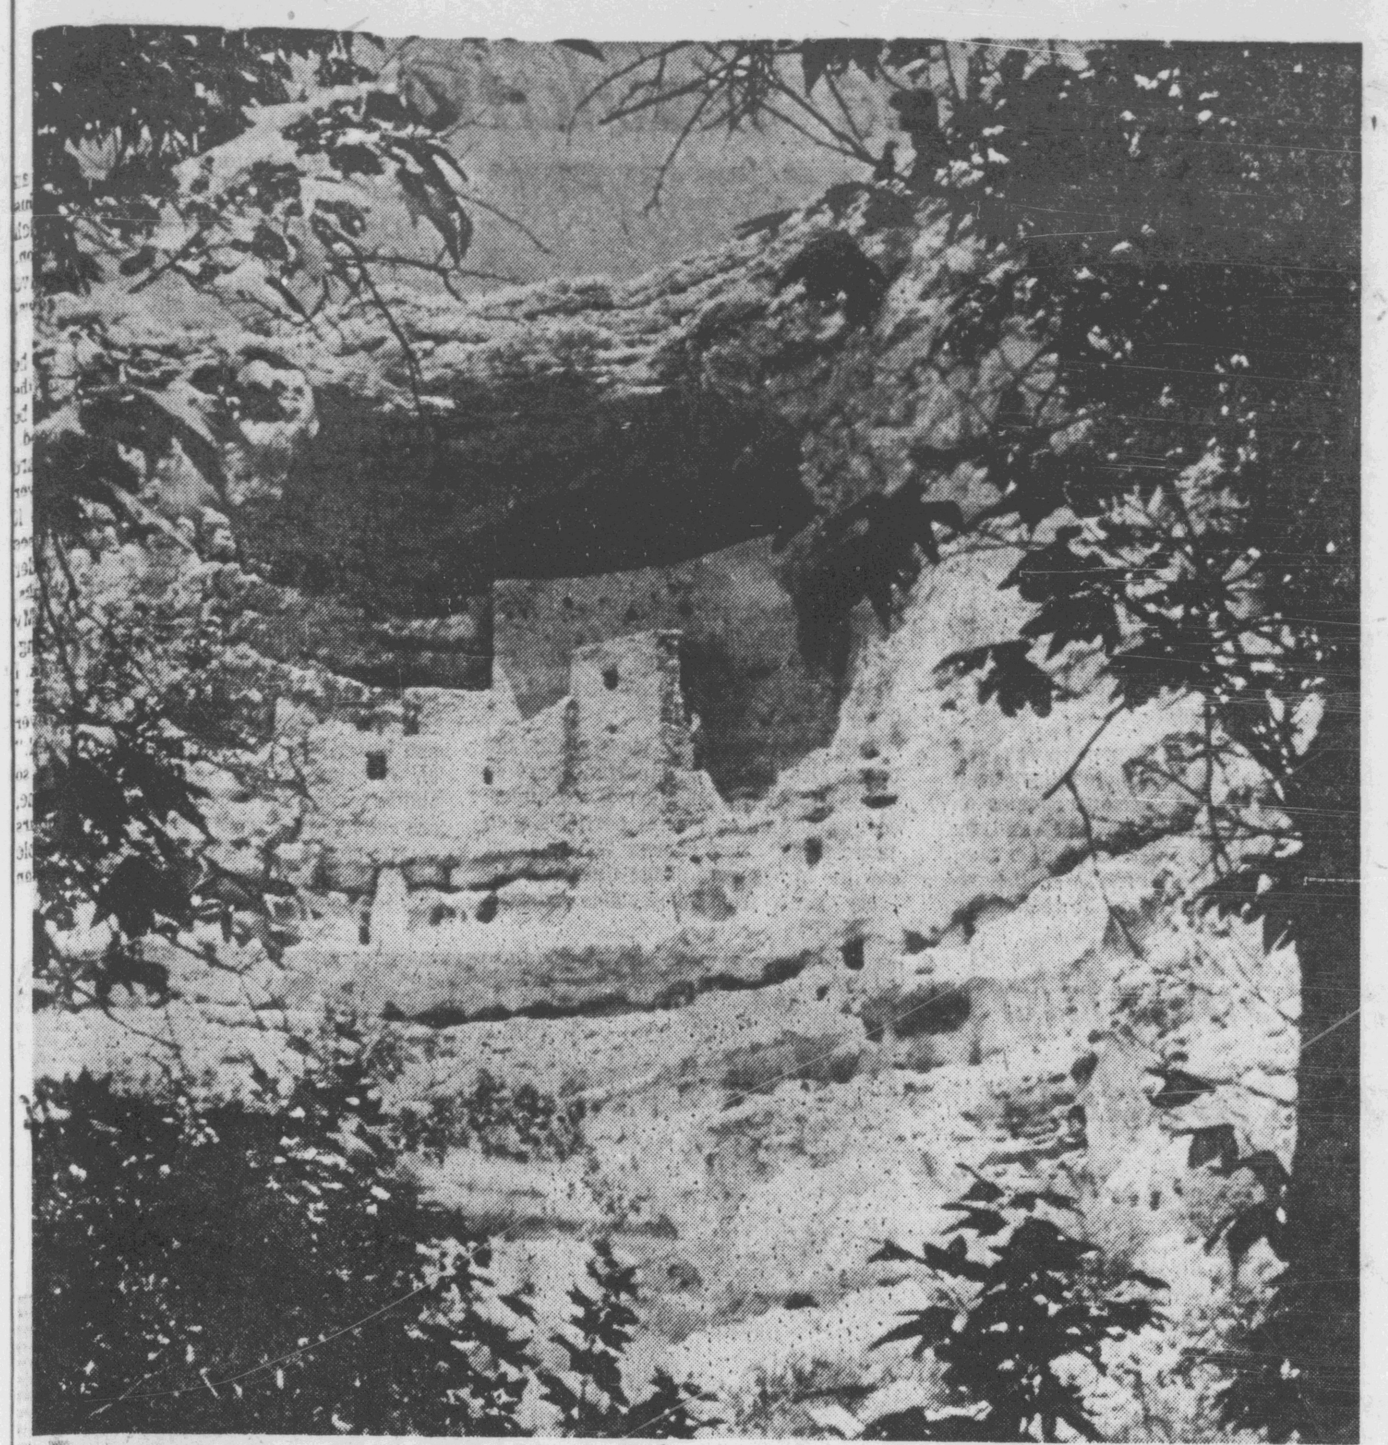
It was remarkable for Pete Reno, an ex-New York Cop with his own security business, to be summoned to Italy to launch a secret probe into Father Quelloni's death and the last years of his life.

His parishioners embraced the simple theory that their priest was needed in heaven. Wasn't he a saint . . . having dispensed to the villagers operations, artificial limbs, tractors, even modern kitchens, to the tune of what Pete Reno ticketed at near a half a million dollars in value?

Reno's increasingly dangerous investigation of this Robin Hood of the church leads him to hoods of less holy mien and more violent means.



This expert tale of the eternal war between avarice and purity asks some provoking questions that the reader will still be trying to answer after all the plot lines are tried.



ONE OF THE BEST preserved Indian dwellings in the Southwest is Montezuma Castle at Montezuma Castle National Monument in Arizona. The pueblo is a five-story structure which could have accommodated 12 to 15 families.

Montezuma Castle Quiet

By RONALD H. WALKER
Director, National Park Service

TRAVEL PAGE

"Think of gettin' clear up there with a jug of water and dropping it!" The youngster standing 100 feet below the lowest rooms of Montezuma Castle shook his head in sympathy.

The 19-room ruin, one of the best preserved Indian dwellings in the Southwest, is the major feature of Arizona's Montezuma Castle National Monument.

The monument also includes Montezuma Well, a nearly limestone sink, and a second set of ruins known as Castle "A." The monument can be easily reached from Interstate 17 between Phoenix and Flagstaff.

NATIONAL PARK rangers at the monument explain to visitors that 250 people probably lived within the castle boundaries somewhere between 110 and 1450 A.D.

The people, called Sinagua (Spanish for "without water"), were farmers. They lived high in cliffs and grew corn, squash, beans and cotton in the fertile Verde Valley below them.

The valley and the cliff dwellings haven't changed much during the intervening centuries. A pleasant modern development at this ancient site is the warm hospitality displayed by the uniformed park service personnel on duty.

They have an enthusiasm for the place that is catching, and respond eagerly to visitors' questions.

Twice a year, Dan Murdock of the park staff leads inspection trips up into the castle to check on the stability of the structure. He says it's quiet up there and the view is great.

DAN GREW up in the valley and remembers playing in the ruins as a child. Visitors could tour Montezuma Castle until 1951 when it was closed to the public for safety reasons, and to protect the fragile state of the ruins.

Even today, falls are a major safety hazard and visitors are cautioned to stay on the marked trails.

Today, Bob Huncilman says that the first question people ask him is how the residents got up to the cliff "apartments." The answer is ladders. Bob is a VIP at Montezuma Castle. VIP stands for Volunteer-In-Parks, as well as Very Important Person. He was an Indianapolis stockbroker for 34 years before moving West to get out-of-doors.

Now he spends several days each week helping visitors imagine what went on in those cool, quiet rooms, when the Sinaguan people lived in them.

DOWN ON the ground, the path leading through the monument is quite level. Montezuma Castle is one of the few Indian ruins that's easy to negotiate in a wheel chair or with a stroller; indeed, the park service keeps a wheel chair handy to lead to handicapped visitors. Guided tours are always available to groups.

Another special touch from those helpful people is an informational brochure that is published in four foreign languages — French, German, Spanish and Japanese. An Italian version will soon be ready.

Not long ago, Barbara Monroe, of the monument staff, had an experience with a different type of communication: interpreting Castle "A" (which is still open to the public) to a group of blind visitors.

The tour she gave to these 90 sightless persons now helps her give more fortunate visitors another dimension in "seeing." They felt the rocks and mortar and even climbed steep staircases so they could crawl into small rooms and feel the cool air inside the 12-inch-thick stone walls.

NO ONE really knows where the Sinaguans came from or where they went. The castle ruin, 90 per cent of which is original, is a clue to their life and stands like a sentinel over the sun-soaked land.

Only seven miles up the road, Montezuma Well is a water-filled limestone sink that looks like a turquoise mirage in the desert. The sink hole is 125 feet deep, measures 470 feet across, and is about half-filled with water.

A million and a half gallons flow into the well each day from underground springs, and the same amount flows out through ancient irrigation ditches. The irrigation system was built by the Hohokam Indians as long as 11 centuries ago, even before the Sinaguans arrived.

Today, the ditches have become cement-lined by the limestone in the water. They are testament to the farming methods and life-styles of the people whose homes lie at the edge.

NEITHER the well nor the castle are associated with the Aztec emperor of the same name. A legend tells that the first people here were Aztecs, escaping from their Spanish conquerors in central Mexico. The tale has been disproved; the name has hung on.

Both areas have rest room facilities and shady picnic grounds. In nearby Camp Verde, six miles away, all services are available. Phoenix is 94 miles to the south and Flagstaff 54 miles north.

There is excellent camping in the Verde Valley and nearby points of interest include Tuzigoot National Monument, a Sinaguan site with a wonderful museum; the ghost town of Jerome, perching on the side of Mingus Mountain; Fort Verde State Park, and Oak Creek Canyon. All are open the year-round.

Motorist Liability Insurance Varies

By MURRAY J. BROWN

It costs more this year, what with higher gasoline and other prices, but the family car is still the most popular means of travel for Americans, whether on vacation, weekend holidays or daily recreational trips.

LOWER SPEED limits imposed to combat fuel shortages have been credited with cutting down highway deaths. But with millions of vehicles on the roads, accidents are bound to happen.

So motorists are well advised to take precautions before starting out, including making sure they carry enough liability insurance to protect them in case they are among the unlucky ones.

Financial responsibility requirements for personal injury and property damage as a result of automobile accidents vary among the states, ranging from a low of $5,000-$10,000-$1,000, or 5-10-1 in Louisiana to $20,000-$40,000-$10,000 20-40-10 in Maine and Michigan.

EACH STATE sets its own minimum requirements with the most common limit 10-20-5. That means most policy holders are covered for up to $10,000 for injuries to an individual but no more than $20,000 for all persons injured and $5,000 for property damage in a single accident.

Have an accident in a state with higher requirement than your current insurance limits and there could be serious problems, such as being forced to post a bond or having your license suspended.

You can help avoid such possible headaches by checking in advance with your insurance agent or broker, said John P. Kennedy, vice president of Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

"It shouldn't take long — they know the requirements in the different states and can tell you if your policy limits are high enough for where you plan to drive," he said.

He added that motorists also should find out whether their policies comply with No Fault insurance laws now in effect in states on the itinerary.

If you plan to rent a car, Kennedy noted that most rental firms include insurance. In addition, he said most motorists are covered by their own auto insurance when driving rented or borrowed cars so it may not be necessary to purchase extra coverage.

"Again," he said, "the traveler planning to drive someone else's car should call his insurance agent and make sure he is properly covered against personal injury and property damage resulting from an accident on the road."

Kennedy said most domestic policies will cover U.S. motorists visiting Canada and agents will provide a card showing proof of such protection when asked.

FOUR provinces in Canada require motorists to carry $50,000 "inclusive" coverage while eight others have a $35,000 limit. The "inclusive" means that up to those sums must be available to settle either bodily injury or property damage claims, or both.

If you are planning to drive south of the border, however, you will have to buy extra insurance. Your U.S. policy will not be recognized in Mexico. Mexican law requires automobile liability insurance policies be written by Mexican companies.

Short-term policies can be purchased at most U.S. border cities if your agent is unable to obtain the necessary coverage in advance.

At any rate, Kennedy said: "Wherever the driving is done, motorists should keep handy the name, address and telephone number of their insurance agent; the name of their insurance company; their policy number, and copies of insurance claims forms."

And don't forget your ownership documents and driving licenses.

Viewing nature

Buckeye leaves are dropping. Watch for the light brown velvet textured seed pods taking shape on curving, down-bent branch tips. Listen for the grey squirrels chattering in bay and oak trees, and watch for their rapid running movement when the leafy branchlets bend, as if blown by a sudden gust of wind.

Take a canoe or bike trip or walk along Richardson Bay to observe early migrating waterfowl. Pintails are arriving on the marsh at shoreline and have been seen in early flight. Remember migrating waterfowl fly at night and rest during the day.

IN FLIGHT watch for the dark brown head of the pintail as contrasted to its long, thick, white neck. The first coots have arrived. Observe the small white bill, the velvet black head and dark grey sateen-like body. Watch how they stroll so easily, lifting each green lobed foot gracefully from the soft mud. And as they paddle in the water notice the jerky movement of thin heads.

Watch the soft brown colored, long-legged godwit probe the shore with its six-inch, upcurved, black tipped orange bill, and watch how he maneuvers his catch along the bill to his throat.

Watch the least sandpipers, so tiny, yet so capable, walking slowly, and at other times, so rapidly, they seem to float over the earth's surface.

Watch their quicklittle jabs, made with their tiny bills, as contrasted to the probing of the larger longer billed clay-colored willets, who, when not in motion, match the shore on which they stand, silently hiccoughing. Listen for their loud la-la-la call when in flight, and the questioning single high bleep when alone, as though wondering if any of his kind are near. Look for Scaup ducks, grey sided and black headed, floating quietly and smoothly on the water.

AN IMMATURE black crowned night heron, dressed in brown and beige stripes may be seen poised in Blackie's Pasture Creek paying no heed to bicyclists or quiet watchers, as he awaits a chance to snatch a passing meal.

Listen for the high cry of the killdeer, a robin sized, white bellied bird, with black chest bands and sand colored back and tail. Watch for the jerky low flight of the tiny spotted sandpiper, and listen for his plaintive repeated single note. See how he teeters up and down, as though all out of breath, after landing.

Some pickleweed is just starting to turn reddish orange. A few branchlets are putting forth minute pale yellow blossoms. Sea lavender, whose long oval dark green leaves form a rosette base for the slender tall stalks which support the lovely lavender blossoms, is growing just higher than salt water level. Feel the soft texture of the leaves and their coolness.

Cord grass is in full head, its long pointed leaves a gorgeous yellow-green, and as the wind and soft waves move against it and through it, remember it grows further into the bay than any other plant. The movement is like the rhythm of a symphony. And when the water is still, the reflection of the cord grass, on the water, resembles a beautiful painting.

Oregon Coastline Spectacular, Practically All Public Shoreline

Many veteran travelers have proclaimed Oregon's magnificent coastline the most beautiful in the world. Others, a bit more cautious, simply say it is one of the most spectacular coastlines anywhere.

But all agree on one thing; it is the most accessible coastline the motorist will find anywhere. The full length of the 400-mile shore is paralleled by U.S. Highway 101, swinging gently along glistening crescent beaches, climbing over forested headlands that plunge abruptly into the sea, pausing to join in the bustle of busy fishing ports and resort communities and curving easily around sheltered coves. And, all but a few miles of the beaches are public shorelines.

THE OREGON coast offers activities to match its views — Salmon fishing on chartered craft offshore, golfing on lush green courses where the ocean is out of bounds, horseback riding or bicycling on forest trails and surfwashed beaches, sunbathing on smooth white sand, camping in forested state parks and beachcombing amid artistically shaped pieces of sun-bleached driftwood.

Some of the nation's finest parks adorn the shoreline like a string of emeralds. There are almost as many reasons for parks as there are parks — huge sand dunes, unique geological formations, a lighthouse, fresh water lakes, picturesque bays, wild flowers and unusual trees.

From the lily and azalea flower center of Brookings on the southern end of the coast northward to Gold Beach, Highway 101 is flanked by colorful mountains and foothills on one side and dramatic seascapes on the other along one of its most scenic stretches.

Between the communities of Gold Beach and Wedderburn, the famed Rogue River empties into the sea. A ride on a jet boat upstream into the heart of the wilderness along this Oregon Scenic Waterway is a popular vacation attraction.

FURTHER NORTH, Cape Blanco lighthouse towers above what is the furthest point west in Oregon. Most intriguing rock formations and forested headlands dominate the setting between here and Coos Bay, the largest lumber shipping port in the world. The Coos Bay-North Bend area also is the site for Myrtlewood factories which convert the hard and rare wood into polished gift items.

The giant sand dunes of the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area separate Highway 101 and the ocean for the next 21 miles after leaving Coos Bay-North Bend. At Honeyman State Park, children find a dream come true in acres and acres of high dunes dotted by a series of clear blue freshwater lakes.

Only a few miles away, a National Forest visitor's center and camp atop Cape Perpetua offers a spectacular view of miles of undulating shoreline.

Northward, the Sea Lion Caves are a popular gathering spot for both Stellar's Sea Lions and thousands of human visitors. A modern elevator takes guests from the high bluff into the caves where the marine animals take refuge from ocean storms.

AT HISTORIC Newport, fishing craft sail in and out of the bay while visitors watch from Yaquina Bay State Park overlooking the entrance. An undersea aquarium takes one to view sea life at its own level. Across the bay, the Oregon State University Marine Science Center has its own aquarium and display on oceanography.

A few miles north, at Lincoln City, is Devil's Lake, holder of many small boat speed records. Connecting it to the ocean, just a few yards away, is the D River, shortest river in the world.

Create A Color Portrait With Tulips In Garden

Want to plant a color garden? You can plant your landscape like a portrait with tulips. As for color, you can go bold and paint one whole section of your garden in yellows, golds or reds, or go wild and create the All-American quilt effect by planting a mass of different varieties and colors.

The name tulip comes from the Persian word "Toliban," meaning "turban." About four centuries ago they were brought to Europe from Turkey and since that time they have become the best loved of all garden bulbs.

ONE OF the nicest things about tulips is there is such a wide assortment of varieties. There are 15 classes of these bulbs and over 4000 named varieties. This wide selection insures varieties suited to every type of home and garden.

The hardest decision in tulip planting is figuring out where not to plant the Dutch treats. They can be planted as borders, in flower beds, as spot color effects throughout the garden, in containers, window boxes, or, what just might be considered the most elegant type of tulip planting. . .a mass of tulips with other bulbs, annuals and perennials.

It is a spectacular sight indeed to see tulip varieties mixed with hyacinths, daffodils, narcissus, grape hyacinths, forget-me-nots, crocus, alyssum or lobelia.

TULIPS grow best in a rich sandy soil says the California Association of Nurserymen. Plant them four to eight inches apart; depending upon the ultimate size of the varieties and about two and one half times as deep as the width of the bulbs.

In most parts of California, especially if fall weather is still warm, tulip bulbs should be refrigerated at about 40 to 45 degrees for about six to eight weeks. They should be planted in the garden in mid-November or early December.

The reward of planting tulips now will come this spring. You will feel like you are vacationing in Holland. . .and you don't have to go any farther than your own back yard.

Pyracanthas Put On Show, And Are Versatile Shrub

Many trees and shrubs are putting on a color extravaganza this fall . . . the ginkgo's fan-shaped leaves are turning a buttery yellow, the American sweet gum and Chinese pistache are displaying shades of bronze, burnt oranges, and reds. But, perhaps the most spectacular fall color show is being put on by the pyracanthas.

These firethorn shrubs set gardens ablaze with light orange to red berries. They are truly plants for all seasons — displaying firey fruits from late summer and early fall, right through winter. In early spring these glossy green leaved shrubs set a mass of sweet smelling white flower clusters into bloom.

PYRACANTHAS are as versatile as any garden shrub. Varieties range in size from three feet to almost tree sized shrubs growing to about twenty feet high. In the landscape, they may be used as ground covers, informal or formal hedges, espaliered along walls or fences, or as a barrier plantings — their thorns tend to make even the most persistent neighborhood dog change his mind about coming into your yard.

When trained as bonsais, pyracanthas are a spectacular sight and now is the time to select already trained miniatures or shrubs for dwarfing at your local nursery.

ANOTHER big plus point for pyracanthas is that they are low maintenance shrubs says the California Association of Nurserymen. They thrive in full sun and do not like much water.

As for pruning, cut the oldest wood down to the ground after the shrubs have set the last of their winter berries and before new spring growth appears. While the bright fruits are on the shrubs you may "selectively prune" berry-laden branches to decorate your home. This is beneficial to the plant and the clippings add bright, festive color to your home.

Espaliered Plants Right

Espaliered plants — those grown in a flat pattern on trellises, fences or walls, are just the thing to put in cramped garden areas. There is a vast selection of plant material already trained on trellises at your local nursery — just right for fitting into those narrow confines.

For those of you with ample room, espaliered trees and shrubs will really liven up blank walls and fences. Greenery and flowers ambling up a once stark wall or fence will constantly remind you of your good decision to plant an espalier in that area.

IN COOLER coastal climates, the use of espaliers enables gardeners to mature certain fruits, such as citrus, not usually prone to bearing fruits in cool, sea side places. Planted against a warm, sun-reflecting wall, they will receive the right kind of heat.

For an outstanding late winter to spring flower show, try planting an espaliered star magnolia — a magnificent sight when in bloom. For fall and winter color use a pyracantha. It will steal the show with its fiery berries. A spot that receives full sun and little water is just right for this shrub.

An espaliered wax leaf privet, with its dark, glossy green leaves, is a perfect choice for an espaliered evergreen. It will grow well in full sun or part shade and may be espaliered on a small trellis or along a fence.

Trees, Shrubs Provide Insulation

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

You can actually plant your house insulation and pollution control.

Studies recently released by the American Association of Nurserymen reveal that trees, shrubs, and vines properly planted around the house can reduce fuel consumption up to 40 percent during a single winter.

THIS DRAMATIC result occurred in the Plains states, where the wind sweeps across the open countryside. But the same studies conducted in the more sheltered Eastern states, where cities and houses closer together affect the situation, yet showed a 10 percent saving in fuel.

First consideration is planting a windbreak of trees, especially in more open regions. Most cold winds come from the north or west, so shelter plantings should be located on those sides of the house. The south side should be left open to winter sun.

Experiments have shown that wind reduction is at a distance of from four to six times the height of the windbreak. A windbreak of 20-foot high evergreen trees should therefore, for maximum benefit, be located 80 to 120 feet from the north side of the house.

SHADE TREES properly placed on the south and west sides of the house will keep it cooler on hot summer days, thus reducing the need to run air-conditioners. Tests have shown that a building surface shaded by trees will be about 8 degrees cooler than the same surface unshaded.

Vines used to be a part of every landscape but in more recent years homeowners have rather gotten out of the way of planting them. Now with the focus of conserving energy, vines have achieved an importance in addition to their grace and beauty.

We are told that vines growing on masonry walls, or on trellises at frame walls can serve effectively to save energy — air-conditioning in hot weather and heating fuel in winter.

EVERGREENS on the north side of the house will deflect the wind and help keep the house warmer. Deciduous vines on southern and western sides will help keep the house cooler in hot weather and having dropped their leaves in the autumn will let winter suns do their thing during the cold months.

GARDEN PAGE

If your house is of brick or stone a deciduous vine like Boston Ivy or Virginia Creeper on southern or western walls and an evergreen like English Ivy on northern walls will cling and grow fast. On a frame house clinging vines should not be used.

An effective placing of trellises, however, with a planting of twining vines like wisteria or climbing roses will help. The trellises can be swung away when the house needs to be painted.

Trees, shrubbery, and vines around the home also play an important part in helping to control pollution. It is estimated that 12 million tons of particles such as dust, grit, and cinders are released into the atmosphere of the United States every year — from automobiles, industrial plants, incinerators, jet planes, and home furnaces.

PLANTS AROUND the house serve as traps for this dirt. The hairy texture of leaves on trees, bushes, and vines catch the falling debris in the air. Then, come good rains or a vigorous wielding of the hose, this pollution is washed into the ground where it does no harm.

Many of the shrubs and trees you can buy are balled and burlapped, so can be planted at any time. Bare rooted trees, shrubs, and vines are planted in early spring or late fall.

This is a good time of year also to feed your existing trees. Make a series of holes with a stake or a crowbar in a circle out around the leaf-dip area, the holes about 18 inches deep.

Pour in plant food up to about two-thirds of each hole, fill with good soil, and water. There are food sticks available in some nursery and garden shops, and in several mail-order catalogs. These are called Jobe's Tree Food Spikes. They can be pounded in at intervals below the branch spread dripline.

How To Have Poinsettia Bloom Through Holidays

By EARL ARONSON

Someone gave you a poinsettia last December and you have managed to keep the plant alive in your garden or home. Want it to flower again during the holiday season?

Bring the plant indoors now if you had it in the garden. Spray it thoroughly with an insecticide to get rid of pests that may come indoors with it. Keep the plant in a sunny spot at a temperature of 65-70 degrees, water it and feed it a soluble plant food.

POINSETTIA flowers, the experts say, are photoperiodically induced. This means that flowers begin to form when the days or nights reach a definite length.

The poinsettia flowers about 10 weeks after the length of daylight shortens to 11 hours or less. The plant thus must have complete darkness between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. daily to Dec. 15.

Short-day conditions may be discontinued after Dec. 1, but if the plant is exposed to lights — such as street, flash or bedroom — during the dark hours, flowering will be delayed.

You could keep the plant in a dark closet or opaque box for the dark treatment, which would be continued until the bracts are almost fully expanded.

THEN THE temperature should be 60-62 degrees at night and 70 to 76 in the daytime. Keep the plant near a sunny window during the day. Fertilize until mid-December, but don't overfeed since the growth is slower indoors.

Did you ever hear of allelopathy? It is the ability of certain plants to inhibit the growth of other plants, such as weeds, by releasing into the soil chemicals toxic to other plants.

This would be a new biological control for weeds that would avoid the use of selective herbicides now sprayed on food and fiber crops.

"If this allelopathy is an inherited trait, which is likely, attempts could be made to incorporate weed resistance to commercial crops in the same manner that insect and disease resistance were bred into plants," according to Alan R. Putnam, of Michigan State university and William B. Duke of Cornell University.

THE RESEARCHERS note that successful biological control of weeds has been limited to a few cases where insect predators have been introduced to reduce certain weeds. Plant scientists usually fight weeds by selecting crops for their ability to outgrow weeds.

Crop losses due to weeds far exceed losses attributed to disease or insects, said Duke.

In the experiments, two weedlike plants, mustard and millet, were tested for ability to grow with 41 varieties of cucumber. They found several lines of cucumber restrained weed growth and they suspected that these cucumbers were releasing a chemical that inhibited weed growth.

Testing, they planted seeds from two lines of cucumber that grossly inhibited weed growth, and collected root drippings from their pots. These leachates, when applied to seedlings of mustard weeds, inhibited their growth. But more testing is necessary.

Near harvest time, when birds and other creatures forage in your corn, you can protect the ears by sliding a narrow paper bag over each about a week before picking time. By this time the corn will have pollinated. Birds won't be able to peck at the top of the ears.

Succulents Reputation, Camels Of Plant World

Succulents are the camels of the plant world.

Their ability to store water in stems, roots, and leaves enables them to thrive in dry, hot areas. This fact alone makes it clear to see that succulents make excellent plants for use indoors — where dry heat fills the rooms on winter days.

THE JADE PLANT is a favorite among indoor gardeners. Almost oriential in appearce, it is a striking accent for many spots — both indoors and out. The jade plant (Crassula argentea) is a bold and outstanding succulent with a stout trunk and fleshy, thick dark olive green leaves that are often edged with red.

If given a choice, jade plant likes four or more hours of direct sunlight a day. However, it will do well in filtered or indirect light. As far as care is concerned, this succulent requires very little.

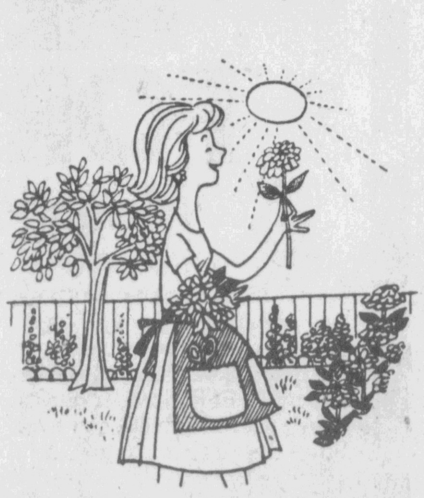
Let the soil dry out in between waterings and then soak it well. It should be fed every 3-4 months. Wait about 5 or 6 months before feeding new plants.

JADE PLANT is easily propagated by leaf cuttings. Pick out a couple of medium-sized leaves and break them off where the leaf joins the stem. Plant the leaves at about a 35 degree angle (so the tender new growth doesn't get too much shade) in rooting soil mixture of one half peat moss and one half sharp sand.

Set your new potted cuttings in bright indirect light until the new leaves are just under one half the size of the parent leaf. Then separate them from the old leaves and transplant into another pot; planting in an all-purpose potting mixture.

For you do-it-yourself soil mixers, The California Association of Nurserymen suggests a mixture of 2 parts good garden loam, 1 part peat moss or leaf mold, and 1 part sand.

The jade plant is a fast grower. If you keep transplanting it into larger containers it will grow to several feet or it an be kept small by confining it to a small pot.



A Hanging Box Is Storage Boon In The Garden

A wall-hung storage box can save thousands of steps in a summer's span, depending on distance from supplies indoors to an intensive care garden spot, such as a cut-flower bed.

A pre-existing solid board fence is the best support, for it lends privacy for the user and keeps the unit unobtrusive.

A box 40 inches square and built of one-by-12-inch western cedar or pine boards will store quite a variety of small items. Its capacity can be expanded by deepening sides and shelves with one-by-fours added beside the one-by-12s.

But it makes the job more complex.

Design the front as a work surface that folds down on hinges across the bottom. It should be about three feet high. To support the weight of pots, sprays and fertilizers, legs should be installed near the corners.

These can fold down on hinges when the unit is closed, or can be made removable by fitting them with dowels that fit into holes in the table top.

TWO YOUNGSTERS enjoy the marigolds, which have been suggested as the national flower for the United States.

Make Your Suggestion For National Flower

By BILL MEACHEM

Perhaps one of the nicest 200th birthday presents our country could have by 1976 would be a national flower. It seems almost impossible to believe that this great country of ours can put men on the moon, but has not yet designated a national flower.

Over the years there has been much talk about our having a national flower. For some time my friend David Burpee worked valiantly with the late Sen. Everett Dirksen to have the marigold named our national flower.

EVEN today, Mr. Burpee would like to see his favorite flower as our national flower. His claim is that the marigold can be grown in all sections of the country and is known to all.

On the other hand, it has been reported in trade publications that there are several bills pending in Congress that are aimed at establishing the rose as our national flower.

But the rose is already the national flower of two countries, England and Iran. Our neighbor to the north, Canada, has the maple leaf, and Mexico to the south the cactus. The cattleya orchid is the national flower of Brazil and Costa Rica. Russia and Peru chose the sunflower. In Egypt and India the national flower is the lotus.

HERE ARE a few more: kapoc, Argentina; golden wattle, Australia; poppy, Belgium; Chilean bellflower, Chile; narcissus, China; forget-me-not, Denmark; yucca, El Salvador; fleur-de-lis, France; cornflower, Germany; violet, Greece; and twinflower, Sweden.

There are some flowers that we seem to associate with particular countries that have also been adopted as their national flower. For instance, shamrock, Ireland; chrysanthemum, Japan; tulip, Netherlands; and thistle, Scotland.

Edibles get involved, too. Consider the leek, of Wales, and the pomegranate, of Spain.

Even though we select a national flower that is the same as another nation's we will not be setting a precedent. Also, if we select something that is edible, this, too, has happened before.

What should our national flower be? Some additional suggestions from polls of a local nature include the violet, geranium, petunia, chrysanthemum, phlox, corn tassle, hollyhock, zinnia and azalea.

I AM personally surprised that there are no trees and shrubs mentioned among the possibilities. White oak, flowering dogwood, magnolia, white pine, birch and the giant redwoods are trees that come to my mind. Among the shrubs there are the holly, rhododendron, camelia, mountain laurel and hydrangea. And there are wildflowers like goldenrod and buttercup.

What would you like to see as our national flower? I feel that the choice should reflect all the people and not just a few. Why not jot down your selection for a national flower on a postcard and send it to me, Bill Meachem, c/o Johnson Wax, P.O. Box 3788, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

YOUR selection doesn't have to reflect any symbolic meaning; if you simply like the flower, tree or vegetable, that's reason enough. Don't be persuaded by anything that has been done in the past; our Yard 'N Garden poll will stand on its own.

When the results are tabulated I will let you know in a future column which flower, tree, shrub or vegetable is the favorite. But that's not all. I will also personally see that all of your selections are made known to those in Congress who are deliberating the question at this time.

If you care to make any comments on your card as to the reason you made a particular selection, I will also be glad to hear about it. These comments, too, will be sent to the proper authorities.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Many cool season vegetables are available as seedling transplants in nurseries. Onions may be sown for next summer's crop.

✓Green-up your lawn with a feeding of complete lawn food. Your nurseryman will recommend a fertilizer for the type turf you have.

✓When selecting bulbs for spring color, get top quality ones — sturdier specimens and more blooms will be the reward.

Plumbing Out Of Mind

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

Competing for homeowner's interest, plumbing is a poor second to just about anything in the house — except when it doesn't work.

Actually, in many societies through the ages, reliable plumbing has been a luxury rather than an accepted way of life.

BACK IN the days of the early Egyptians, for example, private baths were reserved only for royalty — and the Pharoah's female favorites. In Greece, bathing privileges were accorded mainly to star athletes or gladiators.

It took the Romans to introduce public baths — but the masses still couldn't afford such facilities in their own homes. And it wasn't too long ago in American history that bathing was an awkward, once a week ritual.

Today, howevr, we take for granted instant hot and cold water in all parts of the home. The one bath household is becoming the exception; many homes have two or more and additional facilities in powder rooms and mud rooms.

Automatic dishwashing, clothes washing and drying, sophisticated heating and cooling systems, swimming pools, even automatic lawn watering and snow melting systems involve plumbing.

MOST OF us don't think about any of it except when something goes wrong and we have to call the plumber. If he can't respond immediately, many of us are lost.

Frank McGrath, vice president for American Standard, plumbing products manufacturer, offers some emergency tips — things to do until the plumber comes — for the homeowner and part-time handyman:

The first step in every case of plumbing failure is to shut off the water supply. This requires knowing in advance the location of key valves — especially the main supply valve. It is a good idea to tag them.

Keep elementary tools on hand for minor repairs. These include a hammer, a rachet type screwdriver with replaceable bits, slip joint pliers, adjustable wrenches, a plunger and a snake.

Leaky faucets are the most common plumbing problem. Look for worn out washers as a likely cause. Replacing them is simple, or the difficulty can be eliminated by using faucets with ceramic discs.

SCALDING WATER, chemical cleaners, a suction cup plunger and a plumber's snake are recommended methods for opening clogged drains. If you have to clean out the trap or U shaped pipe be sure to protect eyes and hands from chemical cleaners. Never use a plunger after chemical cleaners have been used.

If tub or sink won't hold water, inspect the stopper mechanism to be sure the drain lever engages the plunger.

For toilets that won't flush properly, a simple adjustment of the handle trip arm, the replacement of a water logged float ball or a reseating a misaligned stopper ball may be all that's needed.

THERE ARE, McGrath said, other simple operations the handy homeowner can do himself. A good book and a freindly plumber will help. If you're not handy, a friendly plumber is even more important.

Plumbing contractors helped to write a book that tells how to keep plumbing efficient, what small jobs can be done by the handy homeowner and what should be left to experienced contractors and their journeymen. It is available from the Plumbing Heating Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601. Include 35 cents plus 10 cent stamp.

Home Improvement Spending Up, Building Supply Business Booming

By ANDY LANG

HOMES PAGE

A recent nationwide survey of more than one thousand representative home-owning families forecasts record spending of $35.4 billion on home improvements this year, up 14 per cent from last year's $22.3 billion.

By outdistancing the 12 per cent annual rate of inflation, this spending represents real growth in a booming market for building supply dealers.

How are people spending this money? More than $3.4 billion will go for kitchen remodeling, $2.7 billion for add-a-room projects and $1.6 for new roofing, with the rest divided among a wide variety of home improvements, the major one the remodeling of bathrooms.

Paralleling the growth in home modernization is a surge in the number of do-it-yourself projects. Of the most frequent remodeling projects, the survey found that nearly three out of four respondents who finished their basements did the work themselves.

Almost two-thirds modernized their bathrooms by themselves and slightly more than one half made kitchen remodeling a do-it-yourself project.

WHAT LIES behind the "bull market" in home remodeling? "Making the home a more enjoyable place to live," according to Harold Sugarman, publisher of Building Supply News, is listed as the prime motivation for modernization by 81 per cent of the respondents.

This probably is a reflection of the growing tendency among homeowners to spend more of their time at home due to uncertainty generated by the energy crunch.

Double-digit inflation also is forcing many prospective homebuyers to shelve their moving plans. Experts estimate the cost of moving, all things considered, at about 10 per cent of the price of a new home. According to the Wall Street Journal, the median price for a new single-family home has jumped a phenomenal 50 per cent since 1970, to $35,000.

That means a consumer who purchases a home at that price faces an extra bill of $3,550, which includes a lot of things besides the physical movement of household goods.

Remodeling could be cheaper. The most expensive home improvement, according to the survey, is adding a room. Its average cost is $3,221. Expanding an attic into a living area costs an average of $2,354. Putting a room in the basement averages $837.

Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Building A Bird Feeder Can Help Clear Insects

By VIVIAN BROWN

Whittling bird feeders under a shady tree might be a good act for the family while the weather is still nice.

Some of the work can be done in the tool shop, but scooping out the little feeding holes and the placement of the little dowels and the gluing might be outdoor enterprises.

MOST BIRDS pay for the ownership of the little feeders and houses you might provide, not only with their songs, but by ridding your surroundings of insects.

For example, the U.S. Department of Interior reports that 98 per cent of a little house wren's diet consists of harmful insects, beetles, caterpillars, bugs and spiders.

In fact, all your little backyard birds — robin, bluebird, catbird, chickadee, titmouse, sparrows, towhee, phoebe, brown thrasher and even the pesky blue jay — manage to clear out a large portion of the insect population.

BIGGER birds like the bob-white busily rid farms of those agricultural pests — potato and cucumber beetles, bean leaf beetle, squash ladybug, corn billbugs, weevil, wireworms, cutworms and cotton boll weevil. The nighthawk's diet is 100 per cent insects and other destructive crawling things.

In his book "How to Attract, House and Feed Birds," Walter E. Schutz covers the whole bit. He tells how to start your own bird club and how to find and identify the birds, what to feed them and what kind of houses they like. There are directions for making a wide variety of feeders and houses and even one for a concrete bird bath.

A very useful chart gives the dimensions of bird houses for individual birds, and there are recipes for concocting one's own bird feed and suet cakes.

Some feeders are easy-does-it. A suet log feeder 19½ inches long and four inches wide might have a number of one-and-one quarter inch holes drilled in it. A dowel is put under each feeding hole as a perch. An eye bolt is put at the top so that the feeder can hang from a tree. A long wire can discourage squirrels.

A HANDSOME platform feeder can be made with twin suet logs. One feeder holds suet cakes and the other contains loose seed. A number of feeders are made from pantry items — cider bottles, mason jars, gourds and other things that might be on hand.

A mason jar is inverted and the seeds spill out on a triangular board. Large holes are put in the jar's lid so that the seeds can come through. The screw end of a two-inch bolt is then put in the center of the jar's lid and attached to the feeder floor by a nut underneath to support the jar and provide enough room for the speeds to spill out. The floor is made of three-quarter-inch stock and is suspended by three chains to a single hanger at the top.

Certain trees and shrubs attract birds, making them easier to spot. In fall and winter when the mountain ash has its red and orange berries you can find robins, waxwings, woodpeckers and orioles among the branches.

And bushes such as bayberry, dogwood, elderberry, winterberry and the like attract many species of birds. Of the vines, Virginia creeper and wild grape are very popular in the bird world.

MANY people grow sunflowers for a supply of seed for the birds in winter and some use the seed in suet cakes.

Schultz's recipe for suet cakes goes like this: Grind up the suet before cooking. After it hardens, cook it again to make it even harder. On the second melting pour the suet over one or more of these: millet, sunflower seeds, raisins, corn meal, oatmeal, rice, cracked corn, chopped peanuts, cooked noodles, cooked spaghetti. Using little flat forms made out of heavy aluminum put a quantity of the mixture in and then pour the suet. These could probably be frozen and thawed out before offering to the birds in winter when they are needed.

Suet can be placed in open mesh — onion or potato sacks — and nailed to trees if one does not have a feeder. But suet feeders are much better, Schutz advises, and they look attractive.

A comfortable warm retreat for birds in winter can be made by nailing a box to a tree. Schutz uses apple boxes. The box is complete closed with an overhang at the top and an extending perch at the bottom. An opening is also at the bottom at the perch. Make it large enough for the bird to get in. Before nailing the box closed, Schutz suggests equipping its interior with a number of dowels one-quarter inch for perches, and filling the bottom of the box with straw, excelsior or wood.

AN APPLE box with one long side open nailed to a tree makes a very good feeder, he points out. One end might have a wire mesh for the suet, and there should be a strap across its front to keep the seeds from falling out. Winter feeders should always be put where they are protected from north winds, he advises.

If you begin to feed birds, you must continue to do so. To deny them food after they get in the habit of visiting your feeder could result in their deaths, especially in freezing weather.

To find out what your particular birds like to eat, you might start out with a window feeder that can be served from indoors. Using one-half-inch stock or a piece of plywood, put two support brackets on it so that several compartmentalized frozen food trays may be put on it. Into each compartment could be a different food. From your window you can then observe the preference.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. I am getting ready to buy some kind of stationary saw, but I can't make up my mind whether to get a bench saw or a radial arm saw. Which is better?

A. — Woodworkers have conflicting opinions about this.

Each saw handles the same kind of work in a slightly different way. With a bench saw, the lumber is pushed into the blade, which cuts the wood from below. With a radial arm saw, the saw is moved across the lumber, which is held in place while the blade cuts from above the wood. The radial arm saw usually costs a bit more than a bench saw of comparable size and quality, but it is preferred by those who don't like the idea of pushing lumber across a table. Isn't it possible for you to try out both types of saws, either in the homes of friends or in one of those woodworking shops which permit tools to be used for a certain period of time for a fee?

Q. — I'm planning on building an extra room that will be used for rehearsals for a group of teen-age musicians. I intend to use soundproof ceiling tiles. The walls will be of gypsum board. Would it add soundproofing to the room to use a double wall of such material?

A. — Yes. But you would accomplish the same result with a single wall plus floor-to-ceiling drapes of an absorbent material. And it would be a lot less work.

Q. — We're getting new window screens soon. How do I keep the mesh from getting rusty?

A. — These days, most new screens come in rust-proof materials. For a slight extra cost, such screens will prevent headaches about future rusting.

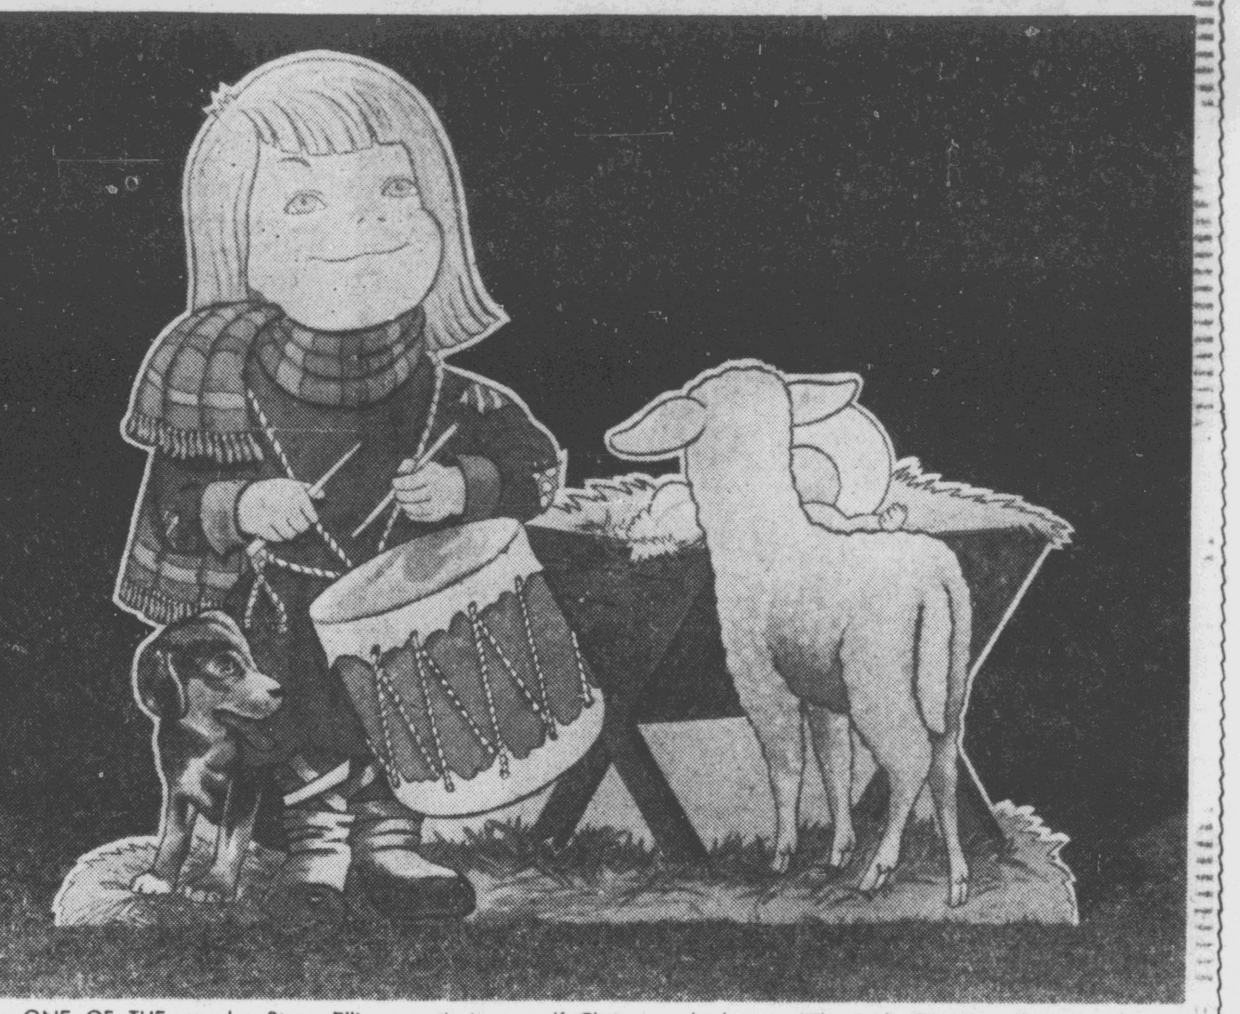
POPULAR DRUMMER BOY



ONE OF THE popular Steve Ellingson, do-it-yourself Christmas displays is "The Little Drummer Boy," which he believes is an easy project to undertake. The full color poster, 42 inches by 59 inches, is glued on plywood and then sawed out and propped up with a wooden stake. It can be dramatized with a spotlight and is suitable for churches, office buildings and store windows and is waterproof. The pattern can be obtained by sending $3.50 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409 and asking for Decoration No. 509.

Amateurs Should Stick To Enamel

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

So you have decided that paint is the right finish for the piece of furniture you are restoring?

Your next decision, then, must be what kind of paint. You have a number of choices, but my suggestion is that unless you are a pro you stick to enamel.

ENAMEL has many advantages. It comes flat, semi-gloss and high gloss — in a wide range of colors. It provides a very durable finish that is resistant to staining, wear, chipping and general abuse.

Basically, enamel is a pigmented varnish. The techniques for applying it are very much the same as for varnish. The first step in enameling, as in all furniture finishing, is to sand smooth all surfaces to be painted.

If you are working with wood that has sappy spots or knots or has been stained, a sealer is indicated to prevent subsequent bleeding through the enamel.

YOUR next step is to apply an enamel undercoat. This should be a flat primer. When working with enamel it is well to pour small amounts of the paint into another well-cleaned can for immediate use.

This keeps the main supply free of dust. Paint a relatively small area at a time, brushing in all directions. Smooth out the undercoat to remove excess enamel.

Let the undercoat dry about 24 hours and sand lightly with extra-fine paper. Dark surfaces may call for a second undercoat. If so, follow the same procedure. After the second coat has dried about 24 hours you are ready for the finish coat.

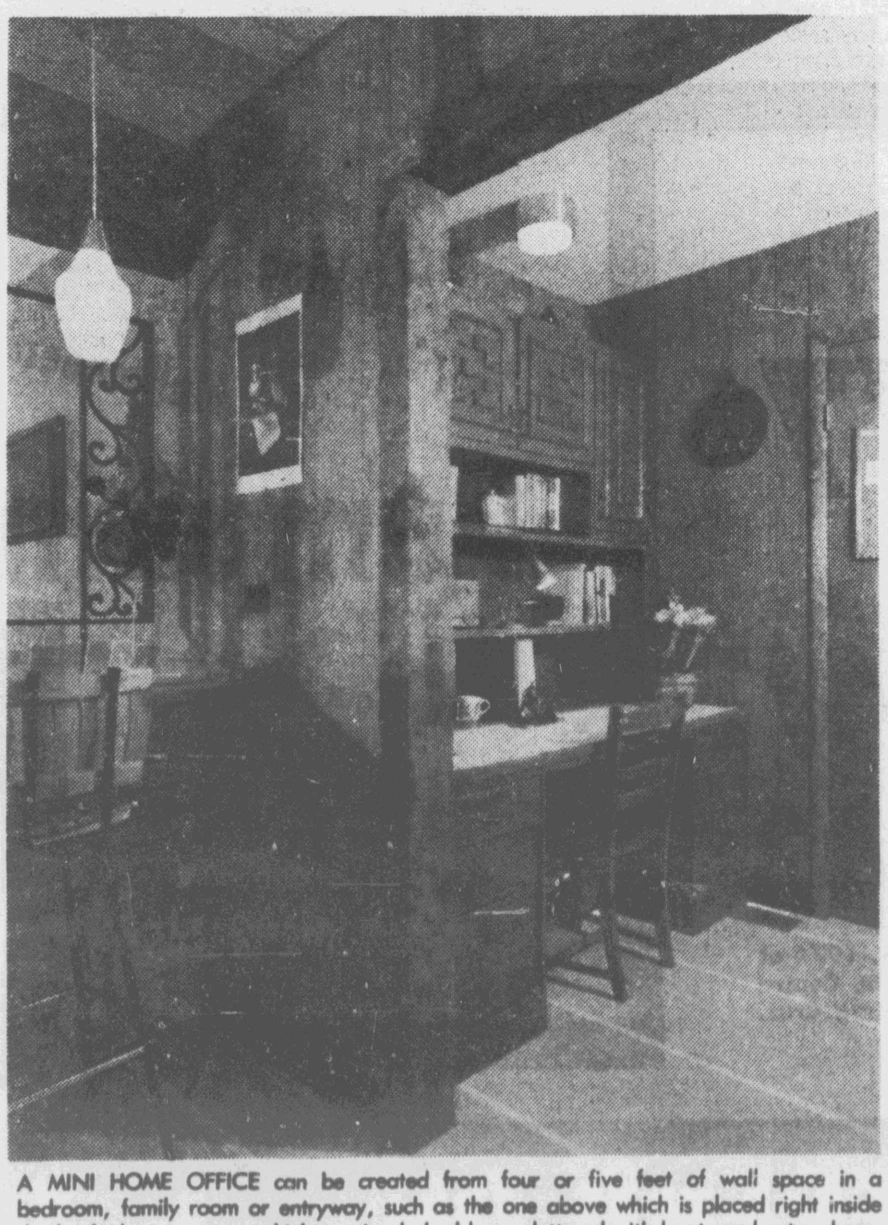
IF YOU have chosen a gloss or semi-gloss enamel, don't stir it too vigorously — you may cause bubbles in the finished surface. Apply the finish coats the same as the undercoats, but don't overbrush, as the enamel tends to flow itself even.

The chances are that your job will call for a second finish coat. After drying, the first finish coat should be lightly sanded and then repainted in the manner described for the first finish coat. The final coat must be very thoroughly dried. This may take several days.

The final step in producing a good enamel surface requires some rubbing if your goal is a finish with low luster, sometimes known as a satin finish.

The dried enamel should be rubbed with pumice. A clean felt pad is ideal for the rubbing. Keep working in the same direction until you get the degree of satin finish you want. You may have to do it several times to meet your own specifications.

OFFICE SPACE



A MINI HOME OFFICE can be created from four or five feet of wall space in a bedroom, family room or entryway, such as the one above which is placed right inside the back door, an area which previously had been cluttered with boots and extra shoes. There is storage space in the drawers, shelves and cabinets and the home office blends in with the adjacent kitchen through the use of paneling installed right over the old walls.

Winter is coming . . .
Can you heat your cold room economically?
Intertherm electric's
HOT WATER HEAT WITHOUT PLUMBING
It's portable for home, apartment, office

Yes, you now can heat your cold room economically because this remarkable portable heater gives off warmth from the warmed water even after the built-in thermostat has shut the electricity off. It also adjusts the amount of heat given off according to how cold the room is.

And it's absolutely safe because the electric element is inside the permanently sealed copper tubing containing water and anti-freeze solution. You can put this heater behind drapes, furniture . . . a child can stuff tissue into it . . . all without the slightest danger. Comes filled, never needs refilling. Plugs in and gives off soft, wonderful hot water heat, without the need of pipes and plumbing.

- Keeps floors nice and warm with summertime comfort.
- Doesn't use up the oxygen in the air.
- Fireproof.
- No noisy fans to blow dust and dirt around.

Location Shooting Empties Hollywood

EDITOR'S NOTE — Studio back lots just aren't believable as bangkok or darkest Africa. That's why 10 television series are being filmed on location far from Hollywood. It may cost more, but directors agree the realism is worth it.

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Where is everybody?

Never in the history of television have so many series and movies been filmed in so many different places.

Ten series this season are being filmed entirely on locations far removed from Hollywood.

"Born Free" is shooting in Kenya. "Movin' On" is moving all over the West and the Pacific northwest. "Harry O" is anchored in San Diego.

"Petrocelli" practices law in Tucson, Ariz. "Paper Moon" connives in Hays, Kan. "Nakia" is in Albuquerque N.M. "Hawaii Five-O" is in Honolulu. "Sierra," the first of the season's new series to be scratched, was shot in Yosemite.

"Streets of San Francisco" was filmed in — you guessed it. And "Kodiak," though not filmed in Alaska as called for in the script, was produced in Bend, Ore. — far from a TV studio.

Nearly every dramatic series this year has filmed some scenes on location, even if it's only around the corner from the studio. "Kojak" filmed six shows in New York. "Gunsmoke" went to Tucson for four shows and to Kanab, Utah, for three more. "The Manhunter" went to Colorado. "The New Land" also visited Bend, Ore.

The late Cecil B. De Mille is reputed to have once said, "A rock is a rock, a tree is a tree. Let's shoot it in Griffith Park."

Those days are gone. It's difficult now to shoot on a studio back lot and made audiences believe it's exotic Bangkok — or even Cleveland. For one thing, people travel more. They're not so easily fooled or satisfied with back lot wizardry.

For another thing, a number of studio back lots have been bulldozed into shopping centers and high-rise complexes.

"It's good for us to be out there," said Barry Weitz, executive producer of "Movin' On." "You can pick up the reality and the sense of the moment. You can't get that in a studio. The actors and directors respond to that reality. It's stimulating."

Aaron Spelling, producer of "The Rookies," said his crew spends three days on location for everyshow. He said, "We just shot a scene in a gunshop. This place must have been 200 feet long and was lined with rifles. You can't duplicate that on a stage. When you're doing a police show you can't just talk about the street. You have to see it."

Spelling said he keeps a camera in his car, as does every member of his production crew. Any time they spot an interesting house, church, or other building, they take a picture and note the address.

Quinn Martin prefers to shoot on location for his four series, "Streets of San Francisco," "The Manhunter," "Barnaby Jones" and "Cannon."

"I can make a show look five times better on location," Martin said. "I do more location shooting than ever before because we've got better equiopment. It's more portable and the film is faster."

"Born Free," which debuted this year, is the first American TV series filmed in Africa. "I don't think NBC would have bought the show if we'd done it here," said David Gerber, the executive producer.

He said he believes "Born Free" is the most expensive one-hour series ever made because of the tremendous cost of going to Africa. "We're in all kinds of businesses — catering, hotels, transportation, politics. We couldn't even rent cars," he said, "We had to buy them."

Gerber said he could write the story of his series in red ink. He sells the show to NBC for $215,000 an episode, but some of the early shows cost $300,000 each. Average cost is now about $250,000 per show. The only way to make that money back, he added, is when the show goes into syndication in three or four years.

Other producers say the costs of location shootings are either "expensive" or about the same as studio shooting.

One reason costs go up on location is that the regular studio day of 10 hours is extended to 14 hours. That's to compensate for the time it takes to move the equipment out and back each day.

"You also have to pay for lunch," Benson said. "You've got eight to 10 pieces of equipment and that's drivers, more grips, more electricians."

Quinn Martin, who also had crews filming movies in Chicago and the Caribbean, said producers should not depend on locations to make a show successful.

"It's just one sign of quality," Martin said. "A show is successful because of the stars and the scripts. I think location shooting adds about 20 per cent to the intrinsic value of a show."

Gary Collins Really Acts In Lions' Den

By ARTHUR UNGER

Opening night is like walking into a cage of lions for some actors. For Gary Collins, every day is opening night. And the lions aren't even caged. He's the co-star, with Diana Muldaur, of the new series "Born Free" (Mondays, NBC, 8-9 p.m.) based on the true adventures of George and Joy Adamson of "Born Free," "Living Free," and "Forever Free" fame.

Kenya calling! On the telephone from Nairobi (it's 1 p.m. here; 9 p.m. there), Collins is talking about working with lions.

"I really look forward to it. I get up for it — like opening night. There's an air of expectancy, danger. You never know exactly what might happen. You just can't completely control the lions' reactions.

"I've learned you can't lie to them either — like children, they know what you are feeling, when you love them and when you're scared of them. Fright comes zooming out of you at 300 miles an hour and they pick it up right away."

Is Gary Collins scared of them? "Well, let's say wary," he chuckles over the amazingly clear connection. "We all came here to Kenya a month or so early so we could work with the lions, get used to them — and have them get used to us.Let's face it, I don't go around playing with them unless I am paid to do it. I'm not about to spend my time off with them. I figure the less exposure, the better my chances are of nothing happening.

"Their trainers are the first to tell you that the cats cannot be trusted 100 per cent. If you play around with them and think you're going to become real palsy-walsy with them — that's a mistake. I did a scene with one of them for the trailers which set up the show each week (we go back to Elsa in all her growing stages).

"A 200-pounder — a little one — and I were roughhousing while we did the filming and the little cat nearly bit my arm off. She was having a marvel-

Just Another TV Star

In that event they would see Tom Bosley playing the rumpled father, Howard Cunningham, in the ABC-TV situation family comedy.

But his means of earning a living is really the only thing that sets Bosley apart from the professional people and businessmen who tenant the partment house. He's not colorful. He's not really famous.

When Bosley and his wife Jean — they were married in 1962 — came to Southern California eight years ago they moved into the spacious apartments as if they weren't sure they'd stay. Neither has a desire to own a home.

The Bosleys brought four or five pieces of furniture west and have since bought early American fittings, along with colorful red and green couches, easy chairs and all the rest.

Bosley spends a great deal of time in his den, a retreat he defines as an ego booster.

ous time and it was all a game for her. For me, it was a close shave."

Aren't the lions fixed in some way so as not to harm the stars? "No, most of them are not declawed or defanged or fixed in any way. They're just, well, disciplined. . .I hope."

"Born Free," produced for NBC by Columbia Pictures television (formerly Screen Gems) is one of the most costly TV series ever made. Everything is shot on location in Kenya in East Africa — mostly in the area called Naivasha, an hour and a half outside of Nairobi on Lake Naivasha, part of an extinct volcano.

Collins and his wife, former Miss America Mary Ann Mobley and their five-year-old daughter Mary Clancy, live in a marina close by.

There's a 300-acre compound for the animals — with a little island which is used for most of the lion shots. "So we can cut off their exit in case something goes wrong," says Mr. Collins.

"Have things ever gone wrong," says Mr. Collins.

Have things ever gone wrong? "Well, not often. There have been loads of visiting firemen and tourists. Jacqueline Onassis, for instance, and her two Kennedy children.

"The lions are easily distracted. They think people are game — that's one thing we haven't been able to breed out of them. Children, especially, are interesting to them.

"One day when Diana and I were shooting with one of the eight lions who plays Elsa at various stages in her life, an African teen-ager and two tots came up to the 8½-foot-high fence. The boy had a snake which he wanted to sell to one of our trainers. The lion was completely docile and we were rubbing and scratching her when suddenly she turned around and saw the children.

"Immediately her eyes glazed over and she started to stalk them. The trainers started hollering for the kids to get out of there. When I protested that the fence would protect them, the trainer told me that the lion would go over it in two seconds. So the kids took off screaming and the trainer managed to catch up with the stalking lion. He put a little ammonia in her nose to slow her down — that's the quickest way to regain a lion's attention."

Ford, Brezhnev To Hold Siberia Summit Parley

For The First Time, Westerners Will Be Allowed In Bolshevik Site

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev will meet and talk for the first time Nov. 23 and 24 near Vladivostok in Siberia, the White House said today.

A joint U.S.-Soviet announcement issued by the White House said Ford and the Soviet Communist Party general secretary will "exchange views on matters of mutual interest."

It will mark the first time an American president has visited Asian Russia and one of the rare times the Soviets have allowed westerners to visit the area near the area since the Bolshevik revolution.

The Brezhnev meeting will be Ford's debut in face-to-face major power politics.

Diplomats said the Russians are anxious to get the feel of Ford as the late Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev measured President John F. Kennedy in Vienna and Brezhnev sized up former President Nixon in Moscow.

Ford will go to Siberia following a Nov. 19-22 visit to Japan and a Nov. 22-23 visit in Korea.

The joint announcement said: "It has been agreed that a working meeting between General Secretary of the Central Committee of the U.S.S.R. Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Ford wwill take place on Nov. 23-24, 1974, in the vicinity of Vladivostok to exchange views on matters of mutual interest.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger currently is in Moscow and made the final arrangements for the announcement. His work on pushing nuclear disarmament perhaps could figure in the Siberian summit.

The Kremlin has been anxious about Ford since the resignation of Nixon. Brezhnev designed his part of the East-West detente based on meetings with Nixon.

Diplomats say Brezhnev apparently wants to know, despite intelligence reports he receives, the stand of Ford on major issues such as disarmament.

In recent speeches Ford has stressed the priority of defeating inflation. But at the same time has stressed the need to continue a foreign policy drive aimed at what he again and again called in speeches "world peace."

Meanwhile, held a fifth meeting with Brezhnev before his scheduled departure for India tomorrow morning. U.S. officials said a joint communique on the results of four days of negotiations was expected tomorrow.

U.S. officials said both sides were still far apart on the Middle East, question, with the United States promoting talks between Israel and Egypt and Jordan on military disengagement and the Soviet Union calling for an early Geneva conference on the Middle East with the participation of Palestinian representatives.

$5 Billion In Utilities Hikes Ahead

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Americans may be facing more than $5 billion in hikes in phone, gas, electric and water bills.

On a yearly basis that's more than $40 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

A UPI state-by-state survey of rate increase requests under consideration by public utility commissions shows that the $5 billion figure is a very conservative estimate. For example, Texas does not regulate public utilities. Other states could not furnish dollar figures on requested price increases.

What's more, many of the requested hikes are already in effect, pending official approval. In many states, earlier rate hikes have been pumping up monthly bills, and millions in other increases are being passed on to the consumer in the form of automatic adjustments to the cost of oil and gas.

In California, the state Public Utilities Commission is faced with a whopping $946.9 million in rate increase requests from electric, gas, telephone and water companies. New York state's rate hike bids total $446 million, Illinois' $400 million, New Jersey's $426 million, Pennsylvania's $350 million, Michigan's $276 million, and Ohio's $205 million.

Utility companies around the country are claiming that the price increases are absolutely necessary.

VA Hospitals Said Inadequate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Veterans Administration said today that a former servicemen is "taking a chance" by seeking emergency treatment at a VA hospital because critical staff and space shortages have compromised the agency's ability to offer medical care.

In a report as thick as a telephone book, the VA asked Congress for an immediate $190 million increase in this year's badget and a $236 million hike next year so it can attract more staff and retain the medical personnel it now has.

The money would also be used to improve the physical facilities of the nation's 171 VA hospitals.

Dr. John D. Chase, chief VA medical director, told a news conference the most urgent need "unquestionably" was to provide more staffing so a veteran could get adequate emergency care at any hour of the day or night.

"In some situations it's our feeling that he's taking a chance of getting it now," he said, identifying nights, weekends and holiday periods as the times when the problem was at its worst. Asked if any patient's life had been jeopardized by the situation, Case replied: "No. What we are addressing ourselves to in the report is the assurance that quality care can be given."

In at least one hospital, he said, a single registered nurse had been required to care for four wards during the night shift.

"Many of the deficiencies that have been identified in this study are of this type and represent a clear compromise of that hospital's ability to guarantee high quality and timely care to every patient," the report said.

Former President Richard M. Nixon ordered the VA to survey the conditions of its hospitals last March in the wake of widespread reports about inadequate facilities and care.

Chase said President Ford had seen the report and "recog-

Cong Claims U.S. Ordered 'Heavy Raid'

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong said South Vietnamese bombers raided its headquarters north of Saigon today on instructions froo the United States, causing "very heavy" damages and casualties.

The South Vietnamese command was unavailable for comment.

Viet Cong press officer Maj. Phuong Nam said there were "many air raids" during a 30-minute period this morning on Loc Ninh, 75 miles north of Saigon.

"The Nguyen Van Thieu regime and the United States which controls the air raids and issue the commands to carry them out will bear full responsibility for every result of this brutality they caused," am said.

TURN BACK THOSE HANDS OF TIME . . .

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten straight months of Daylight Saving Time will end tomorrow when the nation goes on standard time for the four winter months.

The nation will set back its clocks one hour at 2 a.m. tomorrow, the result of congressional action that ended the nation's experiment with year-round daylight time.

Under the new legislation, the nation will stay on standard time until 2 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, 1975.

The year-round daylight time experiment was designed to save fuel during the country's energy shortage. The Senate Commerce Committee reported the experiment resulted in about 100,000 barrels of oil per day being saved during the first four months of 1974.

The change will not affect eastern Indiana, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa, all of which remained on standard time during the experiment.

New York Wakes Up To Series Of Bombings; No One Is Hurt

NEW YORK (UPI) — Five bombs, apparently set by Puerto Rican nationalists protesting the "murderous policies of the Yankee government," exploded minutes apart in Manhattan today, shattering windows of banks and large corporations.

The Armed Forces of Puerto Rican National Liberation, who claimed credit for the blasts, demanded the release of five Puerto Ricans, including Oscar Collazo, convicted of an assassination attempt on President Truman in 1950.

No injuries were reported. Most of the damage consisted of broken windows, except in a midtown blast where the explosion ripped a steel door from its hinges.

"It sounded like the world was coming to an end," said Connon Washington, who works near the site of one of the explosions.

At 3:40 a.m., a man called the Associated Press offices in Rockefeller Center and said "listen carefully."

A woman took the phone and —in a thick Spanish accent — said she was a member of the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puerto Ricana (the Armed forces of Puerto Rican National Liberation) and "we have just bombed Yankee imperialist banks. Free all Puerto Rican political prisoners."

In a statement left for the newsman in a telephone booth on Broadway, the group said, in part:

"These actions have been taken in memory of the Oct. 30, 1950, actions in Puerto Rico against Yankee colonial domination.

"These bombings are also to accentuate the seriousness of our demands to release five Puerto Rican political prisoners, the longest held political prisoners in this hemisphere and the immediate and unconditional independence of Puerto Rico.

"These corporations are responsible for the robbery and exploitation of the Third World" and for the "murderous policies of the Yankee government in Puerto Rico and Latin America."

In a nationalist uprising Oct. 30, 1950 in Puerto Rico, 27 persons were killed and 51 wounded.

At 9:25 a.m., a man with a thick Puerto Rican accent telephoned the offices of United Press International and announced: "I want to tell the people of the United States, I'm going to blow up all of Washington and New York unless the five political prisoners are released in 30 days."

"There's going to be trouble," the man said. "All the banks, all the big businesses in Washington and New York. I got a lot of people."

Two days later, Collazo and another man tried to shoot their way into Blair House next door to the White House where then President Truman was living while the White House was under renovation.

A White House guard was killed and two other persons were injured. Collazo's companion also was killed.

Collazowas sentenced to die on Aug. 1, 1952, but his sentence was commuted to life in prison.

Arms Race Heating Up After Test

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Arms control specialists say the Air Force's test launching of an intercontinental ballistic missile from an airplane may mean the nuclear arms race will be harder to control.

The Pentagon announced yesterday that a Minuteman missile —the kind now installed in underground silos — was rolled out of the back door of a C5A cargo plane off the California coast and then ignited and launched in midair.

Pentagon strategists have been concerned for some years that the Soviet Union's even larger and more powerful missiles could be targeted on American missiles buried on silos across the plains states.

"Mobile" missiles carried in trucks, railway cars or planes would always be in different positions, so the Soviets would never know where they were and hence be unable to destroy them in a first strike.

Officals of the Arms Control Association, a private a group pressing for weapons limits, said yesterday that any move to deploy air-launched missiles would rapidly make meaningless the Soviet-American limits

Ford Flayed On Freedom Bill Stance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has sent Congress his suggestions for changes in a bill extending the Freedom of Information Act, but his effort was promptly denounced as an outright attempt to kill the bill.

Ford vetoed the measure last week but promised he would send Congress a list of changes that would make it acceptable to him. An effort to override the veto will take place as scheduled when Congress returns Nov. 18, according to congressional sources.

In a letter to the leader of each house, Ford said the bill he vetoed would have the effect of "depriving a defendant of a right to a fair trial, invading personal privacy, compromising our law enforcement operations and endangering the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel."

The bill would have reduced the number of investigatory files and other materials that government agencies could keep secret. The agencies also would have had to prove disclosure of their files would have cut their effectiveness.

A congressional staffer said Ford proposed technical changes that would gut the purpose of that section of the bill and in effect retain the current secretiveness of the law enforcement and other investigatory agencies.

Ford also suggested that Congress change its bill to increase the time limit for agencies to respond for requests for information from 10 to 30 days. He would expand the time limit from 10 to 15 days for those cases which involve "unusual circumstances."

The bill sent to Ford by voice vote in the Senate and 349-2 in the House would have required the government to offer proof in court that release od certain files would damage national security or law enforcement effectiveness and would allow a judge to decide without limitations whether the material had been justifiably classified.

Brown, Flournoy Exchange Charges, Court Black Voters

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Houston Flournoy brought their gubernatorial campaigns to Santa Barbara today after a day of courting black voters and exchanging sniping charges.

Democrat Brown told a Watts rally yesterday that the Ronald Reagan administration has failed to keep its promises to curb crime in California. Flournoy is more of the same, Brown added.

Republican Flournoy told black ministers in San Francisco that his record of public support for civil rights dates back to 1964, when it was not popular for a Republican to favor open housing laws.

Both candidates ranged over a score of other issues yesterday — breaking little new ground on either side.

Although they are slated to address the same audience today — an editors conference sponsored by United Press International — Brown and Flournoy are separated by several hours. Democratic U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston and his Republican rival, state Sen. H. L. Richardson, are also on agenda of the UPI editors.

Flournoy told businessmen at San Francisco's Commonwealth Club that development of land use planning at the state level would be one of the top priorities of a Flournoy administration.

He said he supported leaving planning in the hands of local government, but added: "The state must have the tools — injunctions or otherwise — to protect its overall land plan from non-conforming uses at the local level."

Flournoy also repeated his promise to regularly set time aside as governor to meet with citizens and hear their complaints and suggestions.

Brown emphasized the law and order issue in his Watts appearance.

"Are the streets any safer after eight years of Ronald Reagan?" he asked.

"No," the predominantly black audience replied in unison.

Later, in an interview at his $70,000 home in the Laurel Canyon district of Los Angeles, the 36-year-old secretary of state said he has made no final decision on who he would appoint to any state post if elected governor, and that he might form a committee to screen and recruit prospective candidates.

"I've given it some very tentative, tentative thought," Brown said. But he wouldn't take it any further than that.

"It's presumptious, it's just not the right time to do it before the election," Brown said. But, he added, "at 10 p.m. or 11 p.m. election night, come back and I will elaborate my thinking on this issue."

'Toy' Explodes Killing Child

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A 7-year-old girl Thursday found what she thought was a toy wrapped in newspapers, brought it home and hid it beneath her bed.

The toy was a bomb.

It exploded yesterday, killing her and injuring her mother and two sisters.

Dean Ends Testimony After Nine-Day Stint

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Dean III concluded nine days of testimony yesterday in the Watergate cover-up trial, during which he cited names, times, places and discussions allegedly linking the five defendants to the early stages of the cover-up.

Dean's testimony offered no new "bombshells" in the complex case of political conspiracy, and defense lawyers could do little but sit and listen as Dean — his voice unwavering and his composure never failing —went over and over the charges that have made him the star prosecution witness.

When it was their turn to question Dean, defense lawyers didn't really seek to refute his evidence but instead tried to discredit Dean as a witness — bringing up his own crimes for which he is now in prison and attempting to convince the jury that his clear memory was part of a deal with the prosecution for a lighter sentence.

Tempers flared during Dean's stint on the stand, prompting Judge John J. Sirica continually to interrupt the proceedings to confer with lawyers in private bench conferences and often lecture the attorneys on proper courtroom procedure.

When yesterday's session ended and before the jury was ushered from the courtroom, Sirica asked Dean how long he had been on the witness stand. "Nine days," replied Dean.

That was a slip of the tongue by Dean, who was on the stand three days last week and five days this week.

"My advice to you is this — you get off this stand as fast as you can and get out of this courtroom before some other lawyer thinks of another question to ask you," Sirica told Dean.

The defendants in the case are former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, who headed Richard Nixon's re-election effort at the time of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters; former White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, and former Nixon campaign aides Kenneth Wells Parkinson and Robert Mardian.

The second witness, who will take the stand on Monday morning, will be convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

Driving Cases Not Hampered

Approximately 50 drunken driving cases in Marin Municipal Court will not be hampered by a California Supreme Court decision on chemical alcohol tests, Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales said yesterday.

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported Thursday that the decision could result in dismissal of the cases because it ordered the chemical test results excluded as evidence.

Bales said the court actually ruled that Marin and other counties now must save breath samples of persons who select the "breathalyzer" machine test when arrested for drunken driving.

But the ruling will apply only in the future and not to past cases, he said.

Marin has not used the breathalyzer machine for more than a yar, Bales said.

Ford Pay Cut Proposal Aired

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — President Ford should set an example for Congress and the nation by taking a $25,000 salary cut, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said yesterday.

Symington told a news conference that such a move might inspire members of Congress to vote themselves a 10 per cent salary cut to help curb inflation and hold down the cost of running the government.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Vault Guard Charged

CHICAGO (UPI) — An Armored Express Corp. guard with alleged crime syndicate contacts yesterday was charged by the FBI with taking part in the $4.3 million looting of the company's vault last weekend.

Marrera

Richard Held, special agent in charge of the Chicago FBI office, said Ralph Marrera, who was the guard the night the vault was looted, was being sought on charges of burglary, larceny and theuse of explosive devices.

The FBI issued a nationwide bulletin for Marrera, and said he was considered armed and extremely dangerous.

The filing of charges against Marrera, 31, was the first big break in the effort to solve the heist of cash exceeding any previous burglary or robbery in U. S. history. The haul was second only to the $7 million take in England's Great Train Robbery.

Chicago police last night read a bulletin quoting the latest loss estimate in the burglary as $4.3 million — up about $400,000 from the previous estimate.

'Financial Deal'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Confessed assassin James Earl Ray testified yesterday he incriminated himself in the murder of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. "for a few dollars" and was forced to plead guilty in a financial deal with his attorneys.

Conclave Ends

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Roman Catholic bishops from around the world wound up their month-long conference at the Vatican today satisfied with their efforts to improve the church.

The bishops voted last night on the final text of their recommendations for evangelization in the modern world to be presented to Pope Paul VI, who will deliver the closing address.

Protesters To Parade

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Leaders of an antitextbook crusade which rought violence, mine strikes and school boycotts to this region are planning a parade for Monday in an effort to gain sympathy for their cause.

The Rev. Marvin Horan, a spokesman for protesters against "dirty" textbooks in Kanawha County schools, said yesterday he expected hundreds of parents to march.

Horan called on "all industry in the Kanawha Valley" to close down so employees could join the parade.

Fanfani Quits

ROME (UPI) — The center-left coalition that ruled Italy for 12 years is dead and the dominant Christian Democrats will have to choose between their feuding partners, politicians said today.

Christian Democratic leader Amintore Fanfani yesterday gave up trying to get the Socialists and Social Democrats back together in another government and resigned as premier designate.

Mercy Slaying

READING, England (UPI) — Mrs. Elizabeth Wise, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth, has been given a year's probation for the mercy killing of her blind and deaf 10-month-old daughter.

Mrs. Wise, 37, granddaughter of Princess Alice of Athlone, the Queen's aunt, yesterday pleaded innocent to murdering her daughter, Emma Charlotte Abel Wise, last June, but admitted manslaughter on the grounds of diminished responsibility.

The defense told the court the daughter developed a virus shortly after birth, causing blindness and loss of hearing.

When the baby was 10 months old, doctors told the mother there was no more hope.

Plans Still On

ST. PETER PORT, Guernsey, Channel Islands (UPI) — Michael Wilson, 29-year-old son of a Welsh miner, said today the publicity will not stop him from marrying Pennsylvania millionairess Rachel Fitler, 76-year-old aunt by marriage to Vice President-designate Nelson Rockefeller.

Wilson told newsmen, "I'm not calling off any marriage. The publicity doesn't worry me."

Crisis In Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, accused of amassing an enormous fortune while inflation rocked Japan, today faced his worst political crisis since coming to power more than two years ago.

Sources close to the prime minister said the dismissal of parliament or even the resignation of the Tanaka cabinet is possible.

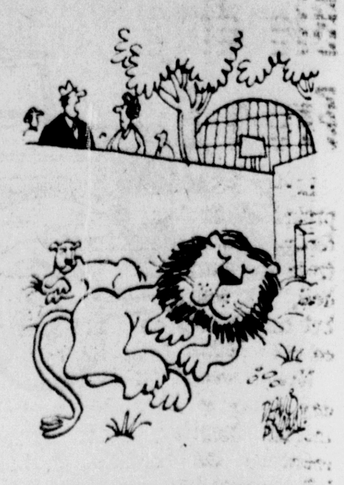
Blacks Assured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has assured black civil rights leaders that the Justice Department will prosecute persons illegally resisting school integration in racially troubled South Boston.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP's Washington office, told reporters Ford "made it abundantly clear that federal power would be used against people who unlawfully interfere with school busing in Boston. . ."

Ford met with eight civil rights leaders for 70 minutes yesterday.

TODAY'S WORLD



"You'll notice that in the animal world there's never any nonsense about who the boss is."

Pair Arrested

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Two men were arrested by police yesterday in connection with the abduction of a prominent businessman who was forced to pay a $20,000 ransom for his release. Police recovered $19,788 of the $20,000 ransom.

Teen Gunned Down

BELFAST (UPI) — Six months ago a Roman Catholic family fled the predominantly Protestant Rathcoole suburb of Belfast after Protestant extremists hurled a gasoline bomb into their home and threatened to murder the children.

Last night the family's 18-year-old boy slipped back to Rathcoole to visit the girlfriend he left behind.

He lay in critical condition in a hospital today, gunned down in the street by an assassination squad, police said.

Nixon Said Bleeding From Gums

LONG BEACH (UPI)-Former president Richard Nixon, suffering from phlebitis, bleeds from the gums and "looks like hell," it was reported today, but his doctors have not decided yet whether to operate.

Nixon went into his fourth day today in Long Beach Memorial Hospital, under treatment for the condition in his left leg that has grown steadily worse over the past four months.

Nixon's physician, Dr. John Lungren, said yesterday that he and a consultant "are satisfied with the progress former President Nixon is now exhibiting,"but that "the potential for surgery is still a possibility."

Nixon is being given anticoagulant drugs to thin his blood, combatting the clots that have formed throughout the veins of his left leg.

"A minor side effect consists of a small amount of bleeding from the gums," Lungren said in a statement to newsmen. The bleeding is not serious enough to halt use of anticoagulant drugs that cause it as long as the drug therapy is "closely monitored," he said.

The Los Angeles Times today quoted an unidentified person who had seen Nixon in the hospital as describing him as pale and drawn.

Nixon had "the look of a man in pain. Frankly, he looked like hell," the observer said.

Mrs. Nixon visited her husband for three hours at the hospital yesterday and was expected to return today. He spoke by telephone to his daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox.

Nixon, who entered the hospital unexpectedly Wednesday night, is undergoing tests to determine whether he is among the approximately 9 per cent of phlebitis patients who cannot be helped by drug therapy.

The phlebitis is a disorder of the veins which causes clots to form. The danger is that a large clot can break loose and drift through the vein to lodge in a vessel feeding blood to a vital organ, such as the brain, heart or lung, cutting off circulation and causing death.

Nixon spent 11 days in the hospital for phlebitis treatment, and was released Oct. 4 to return to his estate at San Clemente.

Even before the most recent flareup, Lungren had said that Nixon would not be well enough to appear as a witness at the Watergate coverup trial for at least a month, and perhaps three months.

Master Plan Review Set

The Novato City Council will hold a hearing on a proposed neighborhood shopping center when it meets at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House.

Councilmen will review a master plan for the 5.4 acre shopping center at the northeast corner of South Novato and Redwood boulevards.

The council also must select a meeting place for future council meetings since the council chambers in the community house are being remodeled.

TIME MACHINE — Colette Pratt of Strawberry, a publicist for Western Airlines, took a trip in a "time machine" this week. It took her from San Francisco to Anchorage, Alaska in only two hours, three minutes.

Space Scientists Find A 'Still' In The Skies

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A scientist reported yesterday that alcohol has been identified in space.

It turned out to be ethanol, or ethyl alcohol, the kind made on earth from grain.

Palmer called the discovery a "milestone," saying scientists have been searching for four years to find ethyl alcohol in space. The 12-man research team, working with newly installed instruments that made the observatory's radio telescope 10 times more sensitive, discovered alcohol in clouds of hydrogen near the center of the Milky Way.

Alcohol is formed in space by a complicated chemical process far different from the fermentation employed to make alcoholic drinks on earth, Palmer said.

The research team included scientists from the University of Chicago, the University of Maryland, the Center for Astrophysics at Cambridge, England, the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization of Australia, the National Bureau of Standards and the observatory.

Horse Rules To Be Studied

Staff members from the Marin County Planning Department will discuss a new ordinance aimed at regulating the keeping of horses Monday at 8 p.m. at the Civic Center.

The proposed ordinance, an amendment to the county zoning code, would require a county use permit for the grazing, breeding, boarding or training of more than one horse per acre or more than 25 horses.

Following Monday's discussion, the ordinance will be forwarded to the county planning commission for its consideration.

3 Minutes To Anchorage

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Colette Pratt took a trip this week on what she calls "the time machine."

Actually, is is a machine that saves time in large chunks by gobbling formidable distances with a speed faster than sound. Twice as fast.

It is the current state of the art in the commercial aircraft industry: The Concorde Supersonic Transport.

Consider: Miss Pratt, a publicist for Western Airlines, left her apartment in Strawberry Wednesday morning for San Francisco airport. After coffee, juice and champagne, she boarded the needle-nosed jet at 9:30 a.m. At 9:33 a.m., she and the other 31 passengers were in Anchorage, Alaska, a distance of 2,700 miles.

(There is a two-hour time difference between San Francisco and Anchorage. When the plane left the Bay Area, it was 9 a.m. but only 7 a.m. in Alaska. The trip took two hours and three minutes.)

"Had we been on business in Anchorage, we could have left home after breakfast, boarded the Concorde, worked six hours in Anchorage and been home for late dinner in either San Francisco or Los Angeles," Miss Pratt said.

"The fare, according to estimates, would have been the same as first class on a conventional airliner, between $400 and $450. No overnight hotel at $40 per night, no extras, yet a day's work done.

Impressive, to be sure. But, according to Miss Pratt, the actual flight was nothing unusual, and that's the beauty of it. "You expect to be flattened against your seat by the G forces," she said yesterday morning over coffee at her home. "When you land, you expect to be thrown out of your seat by the braking action. In reality, you cannot feel a thing. I didn't even know I had landed."

To her, comparing the $50 million Concorde with present commercial planes, say the 747, is like comparing apples and oranges. For one thing, the Concorde is relatively small, "almost dainty and very feminine," she said. "Everyone referred to the plane as 'she.' "

Built jointly by British Aircraft Corp. and Aerospatiale, a French firm, the plane is 204 feet long and 40 feet high at the rear fin, with a wingspan of 84 feet.

The inside is tubular and a little cramped. There certainly isn't the space to stroll or hang out at the piano bar, as on the 747. But seats are leather and plush and the interior appears to have been designed by a French courturier, she says.

The main difference, though, is speed. The 747 cruises at about 570 miles per hour, considerably below the speed of sound. The Concorde, powered by four Rolls Royce engines capable of 38,050 pounds of thrust each, cruises at 1,400 miles per hour, roughly twice the speed of sound or, in pilot's jargon, Mach 2. It gathers this incredible swiftness within 20 minutes of takeoff.

Because of the thunderclap it creates when smashing the sound barrier, it is permitted to reach supersonic speeds only over the ocean. It is expected to be in service on trans-Atlantic flights, carrying about 100 passengers, in 1976.

Miss Pratt, 40, is an experienced air traveler, having logged more than a million miles on planes. And like most other long-distance flyers, she suffers from the almost paralyzing physical and mental malaise known as jet lag. The supersonic transport cuts in half the duration of long-distance travel, she says, permitting its passengers to arrive with a minimum of discomfort.

"On a conventional jet, it takes about six hours from New York to Paris," she explained. "That's 12 hours on the clock. So if you leave New York at midnight, you arrive in Paris for lunch. The Concorde can make the same flight in about three hours. In its case, you would arrive in Paris for breakfast, about 9 a.m. That's one of the beauties, you can eat meals at approximately their proper time."

Earlier this week, the Concorde hustled from Mexico City to San Francisco in two hours on its introductory West Coast flight. After a brief stopover in Anchorage on Wednesday, it headed for Los Angeles and then for Acapulco.

"As a postscript to my trip," she wrote in an article for Travel Agent magazine, "I left Anchorage after lunch at 3 p.m. on the fastest direct flight back to San Francisco. . .I was home at 11:30 p.m. With the two-hour time change included, the Concorde would have had me back in San Francisco at 7 p.m., home at 8 for dinner."

Victimless Crime Bill Is Proposed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Board of Supervisors Monday will receive a proposal that local police cite — instead of arrest — persons charged with possession of small amounts of marijuana or with certain sex offenses.

A committee Thursday approved the plan, under which cited persons would still face prosecution.

Reinecke Flays 'Whitewash'

PLACERVILLE (UPI) — Former California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, a Republican who lost his office in the Watergate scandal, says the pardon of former President Richard Nixon was a "whitewash" and he wouldn't accept one if offered.

Reinecke, convicted of lying to a Senate investigating committee, told a high school class Thursday that Nixon "hasn't any more rights as an individual in breaking the law than you or I do. It was wrong to whitewash it."

After the Nixon pardon, Reinecke said he called a friend at the White House and said, "I don't know what else you've got in mind, but I don't want one."

Reinecke, who had been Gov. Roald Reagan's pick to succeed him in the governor's mansion, was forced to resign his post after conviction of lying to the committee about an ITT offer to help bankroll the last GOP convention originally planned for San Diego.

Parlor Protest

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nude encounter parlors, which charged men hourly rates to "converse" with nude females, said police violated the Constitution's free speech provisions by shutting them down.

Power Due

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Electrical power was expected to be restored during the weekend through lines damaged in the recent bombing of 11 towers, a Bonneville Power Administration spokesman said yesterday.

HE FLEW TOURIST

Wornum's Wife Used Air Ticket

By ERIK INGRAM

Marin County Superviosr Michael Wornum did not use a first class ticket he bought to fly to Washington, D.C. on county business in August.

Instead his wife used the accommodation, while Wornum flew tourist class in another plane, the Independent-Journal has learned.

Wornum, a candidate for the state Assembly, earlier this month drew sharp criticism over use of the first class ticket from his Republican opponent, A. Alan Hill charged Wornum with wasting taxpayers' money by traveling first cabin instead of Tourist.

Wornum responded by saying it was the practice of the Board of Supervisors to fly first class.

He said he thought it was worth an extra $100 to arrive rested and refreshed.

Yesterday, however, he acknowledged that his wife, who had decided to go along at the last minute, had used the more expensive seat.

Wornum said that originally only he, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. and Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino were planning to go to Washingto to talk about proposed expansion of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Then Arrigoni decided to take his wife along at his own expense. Wornum's wife and son decided to go too.

There were no more seats available on the first flight, so Wornum said he tried to get three tourist class seats on another non-stop flight, but found only two available.

He said he decided he and his son would take the second flight, while Mrs. Wornum would accompany the Arrigonis and Godino in the first class seats.

The second flight was scratched because of mechanical problems. Wornum and his son hopped a "milk run" which stopped in Kansas City and Cleveland before touching down in Baltimore.

From there, the supervisor traveled to Washington by taxi to meet his wife who had arrived five hours earlier.

Burton's Record On Voting Told

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — John L. Burton, D-Sixth District, voted for a bill appropriating $4.5 billion this fiscal year for public works and water power development by the Army Corps of Engineers, Atomic Energy Commission, and various Interior Department agencies.

Burton also voted for a bill authorizing $1.7 billion over two years for health revenue sharing, family planning, community mental health centers, and migrant health.

He voted for a bill appropriating $3.29 billion this fiscal year for the Department of Transportation and related agencies.

He voted for a bill increasing detention benefits for American civilians interned during the Vietnam War.

All these bills passed the House.

However, Burton voted against an amendment making the auto seat belt interlock system optional rather than mandatory. This bill, with the amendment, also passed.

John Burton's votes on these roll calls, as tabulated by Government Research Corp., were identical with those of his brother, Philip Burton, who represents the Fifth District in San Francisco.

Austin Seeks LBJ Play Funds

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Austin's parks and recreation department is seeking $4,650 from the National Endowment for the Arts to produce a play about the early life of Lyndon B. Johnson as part of the bicentennial celebration.

City councilmen approved the grant application Thursday.

Total cost of the project will be $9,300. The parks department is expected to provide $3,952 in services and $1,058 in cash.

2 Persons Hospitalized After Crashes In Marin

Two persons were hospitalized and three others suffered minor injuries in two traffic accidents in Marin in the last 24 hours.

A San Francisco man who stopped on the Golden Gate bridge to change a flat tire early today was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital with a broken jaw received when another auto plowed into the rear of his car.

The Highway Patrol said Frank Martin Yates, 21, was a passenger in a car driven by Diane Carrigan, 30, of Mill Valley. Both were changing the tire when the southbound car was hit by an auto driven by Willie Andrew Anderson, 47, of San Francisco, according to officers.

Anderson was treated for minor injuries at the hospital, then booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of drunken driving. He was released on his own recognizance to appear Friday in Marin Municipal Court.

In the second accident a 15-year-old Novato youth was hurt when his motorcycle and a car collided at 3 p.m. yesterday on a private road through the Pacheco Ranch in Novato.

Kenneth Ashley Sullivan was reported in satisfactory condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael with broken wrists and a broken leg.

Officers said Sullivan was hurt when his motorcycle collided with a car operated by David Alan Gralish, 19, of Albany. A passenger, Michael Peters, 15, of Novato, was treated at the hospital for minor injuries.

Tam Board Plans Study

The Tamalpais High School District boad will hold a special meeting at 8 p.m. Monday to discuss a study of its programs, staffing and fiscal problems.

The study, aimed at cutting costs, was presented to trustees last week. On Monday the district board will review the draft and appoint a 12-member planning board to determine how best to cut district expenses.

Trustees are trying to figure out which programs or personnel can be eliminated to keep the budget within the limits imposed by state law, declining enrollment and inflation.

ARMS

on silo-launched and submarine-carried missiles that were negotiated in 1972.

They said a mobile system is unnecessary because the nation's submarine missiles are already immune from attack and carry enough nuclear punch to destroy everything of value in the Soviet Union, even if all the Minutemen in silos were wiped out.

Pentagon officals emphasized that the test launch Thursday was purely a test. They said there were no plans at this time to build a fleet of such aircraft. The development could be used as a bargaining chip in Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with the Soviet Union. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Moscow Wednesday to pursue those negotiations.

Arms control specialists said mobile missiles if deployed would complicate arms negotiations because they would make it very difficult to count the number of missiles involved. Now spy satellites can count silos and also missile submarines.

Five Slain

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Five persons were shot and killed and three other persons wounded early today when a man opened fire with a automatic rifle during a birthday party on the city's east side, police said.

LAW IN ACTION

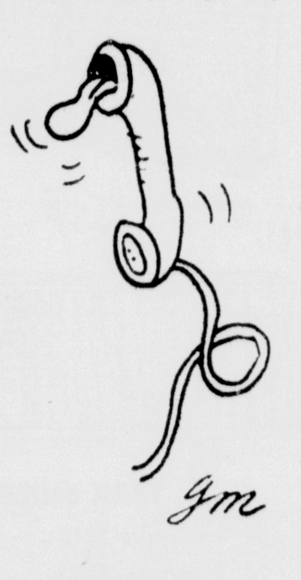
From the State Bar Of California

Phone Pests Hard To Stop

"Hello. We want you to give some money for the Children's Fund. Are you listening?" "No!" Clunk.

Telephone sales people can be a bother. They sometimes bother citizens at home, businesses and policing agencies. Isn't it possible to pass a law against them as nuisances? Well, there are problems if we do. Many are in fact legitimate charities. Denying them the use of telephones may violate their first amendment rights. Everyone has the right to speak. Government can't stop them without very exceptional reasons. And religious charities have the right to preach and sell their religious materials. Licensing those sales would be an undue restriction on religious activity and on free speech.

Can't we do something about telephone pests? Very little, say the courts.



About all the lawmakers can do is license business activities. When churches, charities or other civic groups go into a business, then regulations are proper. Such licensing must be narrowly drawn. The law cannot be used to censor a legitimate telephone call.

In one case, police thought a telephone subscriber was using his phone to promote gambling business. The police chief asked the phone company to cut off his phone. The subscriber objected vehemently. He sued and won. True, the phone may not be used for illegal activites. But the phone is also a way of exercising free speech. Before the phone could be cut off, the Public Utilities Commission should at least give the person a due process hearing.

In another case, the PUC adopted a rule that recorded phone messages must identify the sponsor. One group has recorded far out messages — often filled with hate. The PUC wanted to make them identify themselves. The court said this was a form of censorship. The right to free speech includes the right to remain anonymous. If there was any slander or harassment, there were other ways to deal with it later. The State could not cut off the recordings in advance.

There are laws against obscene phone calls. Civil remedies are available for invasion of privacy, harassment, or disturbing one's peace. To cut off the use of the phone in advance runs afoul of the first amendment.

Meredith Seeks Spot On Ballot

GULFPORT, Miss. (UPI) — A three-judge federal panel is scheduled to hear arguments Monday in Jackson on a petition by civil rights activist James Meredith requesting that he be allowed to run for Congress in the 4th District as an Independent.

Meredith's qualifying petition was rejected by the state Election Board on grounds he gave up his right to run as an Independent when he participated in the June 4 Democratic primary.

Churchill Book

NEW YORK (AP) — The hundredth anniversary of Winston Churchill's birth is Nov. 30, and among the books to commemorate the occasion is Rand McNally's new "Winston Churchill: A Pictorial Life History." According to the book, 18-year-old Winston once complained to his mother, "I can never do anything right." Yet on his 90th birthday, greetings poured in addressed simply "To The Greatest Man Alive."

Dr. Pike Quits As Health Chief

Dr. Catherine C. Pike, chairman of the Marin County Mental Health Advisory Board, has resigned because of dissension on the board.

Dr. Pike announced her resignation as chairman in a letter to county supervisors. She said she will continue to serve out her term as a regular board member.

"In recent months, dissension on our board has become increasingly difficult. This has contributed, within the past four months, to the decision of three of our most experienced board members to resign and of a fourth to refuse reappointment," she said.

"Under the circumstances, I can no longer continue to carry the responsibility of chairmanship . . ."

In her two-page letter she complained of internal fighting within the mental health community.

BLASTS

car near Chase Manhattan Plaza shattering windows in the Chemical, Chase Manhattan and Marine Midland banks. A car was demolished and several others were damaged. Windows broke in nearby buildings, up to the eighth floor in one building.

A third blast went off at 3:20 a.m., outside the Banco de Ponce; and a fourth at 3:30 a.m on posh Park Avenue at the Union Carbide Building. At 3:35 a.m. a fifth bomb exploded, also on Park Avenue, near the Lever Brothers Building.

"They are not playing," one officer said of the terrorist group.

Passersby standing outside the Exxon Building began running when they heard the blasts.

One youth shouted, "the revolution has started," as he ran from the area.

He Forgot Most Important Part Of His Wardrobe

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill wore a dark suit and black tie Wednesday night, but one member of the audience thought something was missing.

"Where is your WIN button?" Sawhill was asked.

"That's a good question," he replied. "I'm embarrased I don't have it on."

Sawhill said the button was in his briefcase.

The buttons boost President Ford's "Whip Inflation Now" program.

Sen. Rodda To Speak

Dr. George Stone, Fairfax School District trustee, will persent the county schools education and legislative interests at the meeting, sponsored by the Marin County School Boards Association, the county schools office and the Tamalpais Union High School District legislative task force.

Dinner cost is $6.50.

nizes its importance."

Ford ordered the VA to work closely with the Office of Management and Budget to determine how much extra funding should be requested. Chase refused to say if the Administration fully supported all the money proposals.

The report found the following problem categories facing VA hospitals:

Difficulty in recruiting doctors, nurses and other staff members because of lower pay than that offered by private hospitals or private practice.

Limited numbers of surgeons who can provide such highly specialized skills as caring for paraplegics. He said the VA must compete with private and public hospitals for such specialists, but can not provide them either the salaries or the expensive facilities of private hospitals.

A shortage of space and adequate equipment, which results in overcrowding and reduced standards of care.

Complex eligibility standards which confuse veterans. The report asked Congress to simplify what Chase called "a hodgepodge of requirements" established over the last 50 years.

The report was quick to state that VA care meets standards of the medcical profession, and said that VA hospital employes give quality care under the burdens of lack of staff and outdated equipment. The problem, it said, is to assure that each veteran gets good care.

"Care on a drab, crowded, noisy ward may be excellent from the technical viewpoint of treatment of the disease but is clearly inadequate for treatment of the whole patient ..." the report concluded.

"Space deficiencies may typically produce crowding, but commonly also create situations in wtich the provision of care is compromised through delay and lack of convenient necessary facilities or services," it said.

In the situation of one nurse for four wards the report said "we know that the quality of care is compromised —whether or not it has been for any specific patient on the wards at the time of a survey."

Chase said the VA was losing its full time doctors because of a $36,000 salary ceiling imposed by Congress.

OBITUARIES

Ecologist Mrs. Nelson Dead At 62

Margaret Nelson, a longtime conservationist and a Marin resident for more than 20 years, died yesterday at a local hospital after a long illness. She was 62.

A native of Bismarck, N.D., Mrs. Nelson lived in Rhinelander, Wisc., much of her life. She and her husband, Kenneth, moved to Marin in the early 1950s. The couple, who had been married 39 years, had lived in Mill Valley for the last 15 years.

Active in conservationist affairs, Mrs. Nelson was a member of the Sierra Club. She used to spend much of her time hiking on Mount Tamalpais. So a private memorial gathering will be held on the mountain soon.

In addition to her conservation work, Mrs. Nelson was active in Democratic Party affairs, and in local school district issues.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by two sons, Robin R. Nelson of Berkeley, and Gregory G. Nelson of Mill Valley; two daughters, Jennifer J. Marvin and Deborah D. Nelson; both of Mill Valley; a brother, Thoralf (Ted) Hornboe, and a sister, Jennie Berry, both of Mill Valley; and three grandchildren.

No funeral is planned.

Contributions to the Leukemia Society of America, Bay Area Chapter, of 323 Geary Boulevard, San Francisco, are preferred.

GRACE M. WILKINSON

Grace M. Wilkinson, a 10-year Marin resident, died Thursday at a local retirement residence after a lengthy illness. She was 72.

A native of New York City, Mrs. Wilkinson lived most of her life in Freeport, Long Island, N.Y., and worked 34 years as a secretary in the comptroller's office in Nassau County.

After her retirement, she moved to Greenbrae to be near two sons living in the Bay Area. She moved two years ago to The Redwoods in Mill Valley.

Mrs. Wilkinson is survived by her sons, Louis A. Wilkinson of Sausalito and Coast Guard Capt. John M. Wilkinson of Hayward; a brother, George R. Mortimer of Arlington, Va.; a sister, Lorene M. Rogers of Victor, N.Y.; and two grandchildren.

Bomber To Make Its Debut Today

PALMDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Climaxing 12 years of design and debate, the prototype of the B1 bomber, the most expensive weapons system in history, rolls out the hangar door today to face flight tests to see if it works and controversy over whether it is needed.

IN MEMORY OF PAM

The family of Pamela P. Ettinger of Fairfax, who was killed last month in an automobile accident, has offered to donate nearly $80,000 to the county of Marin to acquire this scenic ridge overlooking downtown Fairfax. The family will give $79,758 to buy 175 acres of the Floyd W. Elliott property in Cascade Canyon if the county agrees to designate the area "Pam's Blue Ridge" and place a plaque there in memory of the 24-year-old woman who died in a crash in San Mateo County. Miss Ettinger had lived in Fairfax about six months prior to her death and was a student at the College of Marin. A family spokesman said the gift was chosen because of Miss Ettinger's interest in open space and ecology. The county already has purchased 261 acres nearby, according to Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni and Parks Director Pierre W. Joseke who announced the offer yesterday.

Hearing On Fired Planner Continues

The Marin County Personnel Commission will resume its hearing Wednesday into charges that County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell improperly fired a staff planner.

Margot S. Parke, who had worked half-time in the planning department before she was dismissed earlier this month, protested Thursday that the action did not conform with county regulations. She requested reinstatement.

Her attorney, Richard H. Breiner, said his client was fired without cause after her one-year probationary period ended.

He told commissioners she was hired Oct. 5, 1973 and fired effective Oct. 5, 1974 — one day over the 365-day period in which an employee can be released without cause.

Additionally, he said, Mrs. Parke received only one evaluation of her performance — after nine months — even though county personnel rules require three evaluations at different times during the year.

Commissioners have asked that Von Gundell appear at the next meeting to explain his failure to make the required evaluations.

Asst. County Counsel Richard V. Godino, representing Von Gundell, argued that since Mrs. Parke was a half-time employee, the 365-day probationary period in the Civil Service ordinance does not apply to her.

Instead, Godino read a section of the county's personnel rules which say a part-time employee's probationary period is 2080 hours. Thus, he continued, Mrs. Parke was still on probation at the time she was released since she had worked less than 2080 hours.

Two personnel commissioners, Ben Farlatti and Robert B. McCreadie, indicated they were willing to uphold Mrs. Parke's appeal because of "a moral obligation in this gray area."

"If she is fired (at this late date), it should be for cause," McCreadie said.

She had spent the year working on the Tamalpais Valley and Stinson Beach community plans. The Tamalpais plan was reviewed by the county planning commission on Monday.

The commission will consider the appeal again Wednesday at 6 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Energy Team Turns To Wood

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Wood could supply as much as 20 per cent of the nation's energy use, according to a Stanford University research team.

It especially suggested increased use of eucalyptus, a tree which grows quickly and can flourish on poor land. The team said eucalyptus wood could be converted into gas and electricity for a little less than energy produced from coal.

The team of students and faculty from Stanford's Institute of Energy Studies focused on feasible energy sources on the year 2020 when oil and natural gas resources are no longer expected to be able to supply much of the world's energy needs.

San Quentin Guard Is Exonerated

A San Quentin guard accused of illegally shooting an inmate during a melee will not be charged by the Marin district attorney's office, a spokesman said yesterday.

A review of prison reports showed the guard, J. H. Andrus, acted properly in shooting inmate Lawrence Alexander in the stomach on Aug. 3, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Joshua W. Thomas.

Two prison reform groups last week asked Thomas's office to investigate the matter and file criminal assault charges against Andrus.

In an affidavit, Alexander, 31, said he was standing against a fence during a disturbance in the B Section exercise yard when Andrus shot him from a gun rail with a high-powered rifle.

But Thomas said prison reports showed Alexander was well away from the fence and about six feet from a guard grappling on the ground with another inmate when he was shot.

Andrus said he shot Alexander because he thought the inmate was attempting to assault the guard on the ground, Thomas said.

New Measures

OTTAWA (UPI) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde announced yesterday new measures, including an increase in the number of meat inspectors, to protect consumers against the sale of contaminated meat.

CHURCH HAS INDICTMENT LIST

Uncertain Evaders Get Quiet Check

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Draft resisters in exile or underground who are uncertain of their legal status can now find out if they have been indicted or are under investigation without checking with the government.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the United Church of Christ announced yesterday that after five weeks of "extensive and intensive" efforts, they had received from the Justice Department the complete list of pending federal draft indictments.

"This list is crucial in preventing thousands of American war resisters from being unnecessarily shanghaied into the punitive clemency program," Henry Schwarzschild, amnesty director of the ACLU told a news conference.

During the Vietnam era, over 200,000 young men were adjudged draft delinquent by the Selective Service System and their cases turned over to the Justice Department for prosecution.

More than 90 per cent of them were never indicted, yet many of these men "went underground or into exile for fear of arrest and prosecution," according to ACLU.

"Now that we have the list," Schwarzschild said, "war resisters no longer have to call the Justice Department to find out whether they are in legal jeopardy. They can call the amnesty movement."

Many people in the pro-amnesty movement had expressed concern that the only way a resister could find out if he was in legal jeopardy was to contact the Justice Department or a U.S. attorney's office.

Guidelines sent by Attorney General William Saxbe to all U.S. attorney offices state that an individual who is neither under indictment nor investigation for an offense "but who reports ... and admits to such an offense will be subject to prosecution unless he makes an agreement" to perform alternate service.

This provision would apply to those individuals whom the Justice Department had earlier decided not to prosecute.

Both Schwarzschild and Rev. Barry Lynn of the UCC were critical of the Justice Department for not informing individuals who had been cited by the draft system but whose prosecution was not pursued by the Justice Department that they were not in legal jeopardy.

They said they would attempt to obtain a list of the names of the approximately 180,000 cited for draft violations but never indicted. They said the list would be available at the Clemency Information Center established by the National Council of Churches in Indianapolis. The Center accepts collect calls from resisters.

Philippines Eases Media Rules After Two Years

MANILA (UPI) — Two years of martial law in the Philippine islands was eased slightly today when the government abolished two agencies for regulating news media and turned the job over to two councils to be created from among print and broadcast journalists.

The government of President Ferdinand Marcos announced it had abolished its Mass Media Council and its Bureau of Standards for Mass Media.

Foreign correspondents have been exempt from government control except for a period of 41 days shortly after martial law was imposed in September, 1972, when they were required to submit their dispatches to a censor.

"The prevailing national situation has become appropriate for the removal of government participation in media activities," it said.

When martial law was proclaimed in September, 1972, Marcos shut down 15 major newspapers, seven radio-television networks and about 40 radio stations, accusing them of participating in a conspiracy to topple the republic.

Since then eight newspapers and five networks have been allowed to operate on six-month licenses. Most radio stations also are back on the air.

Longshoremen Ask Pay Talks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — West Coast longshoremen are demanding a reopening of wage negotiations because of inflation.

The Dispatcher, a newspaper published by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, disclosed yesterday that the union leadership has asked the Pacific Maritime Association to reopen pay talks.

Dock workers are to receive a 12 cents an hour pay boost Jan. 1 under a cost-of-living formula, but the rise in the cost-of-living has been so rapid the figure should be 30 cents.

The ILWU also said it wanted the current cost-of-living ceiling removed.

CHILD CARE BUSINESS IS BOOMING

The Belvedere-Tiburon Child Care Center, started this summer with funds from the two cities' councils, is now self-supporting, caring for an average of 25 preschoolers daily. The drop-in facility is being studied as a model by Larkspur mothers. Here Sandra Foote of Tiburon, 15, draws a "body map" for Lisa Pratt, 5, to paint. The Redwood High School junior is earning work-experience credit for her child care class. Watching are (from left) Sarah Levy, 4; Binkie Moore, 3; Joel Pratt, 2; Scottie Hames, 2; and Tyler Fonarow, 3 (back to camera).

Frenchwoman Advises Tender Care Of Male Ego To Hold Friendship

By BETTY FROST

Putting a little "joie de vivre" back into the relationships of men and women was the message Monique Benoit brought to the Outdoor Art Club membership and guests Thursday.

Mme. Benoit, columnist, model and lecturer, advised the audience, which packed the Mill Valley clubhouse, on "Men: What Every Woman Should Know About Them." She proposed harmony, "an entente cordiale" between the sexes, warning that the militant female may not be successful either in a career or private life.

The Frenchwoman's view of woman as the tough but tender manipulator, ever watchful of wounding the man's delicate ego sounded antediluvian in 1974. But as the French say, "the more it changes, the more it remains the same."

"A man's ego motivates all his actions," the speaker said. "At the end of a relationship there is not so much concern for breaking his heart as hurting his ego. A wise woman will let the man be the one to end the relationship. She will keep her former lovers as friends and let the man have the regrets."

Ego plays its part in a man's infidelity, she continued. "He wants to see if he can still score." Such amatory detours do not always mean that the man no longer loves his mate. The woman should realize that in losing a battle she has not necessarily lost the war, according to Mme. Benoit.

"In all of the animal world, the male is the aggressor. Female aggressiveness leads to impotent men. In sexuality, whatever happens below his belt, starts in his head," she said.

Women should also realize that men don't like to see a woman cry. They can deal better with anger than tears. It is also better for a woman to shout than to sulk. Usually the man has no idea why a woman is sulking, or even that she is. Shouting, apparently, attracts his attention.

Mme. Benoit quoted George Eliot, "A woman's love is made for her by the man she chooses." She warned against certain kinds of men — a sexual windbag, who is invariably a bully; men who are afraid of women and who will lure a submissive woman into a master-slave relationship, and vulgar, obscene men who will be cruel because they actually dislike women.

However if a man is truly gallant, intelligent and decent, he will treat a woman as an equal.

Social reforms to improve the status of women, the Frenchwoman sees as desirable, but as a part of life removed from amorous attachments.

One white haired woman confided after the lecture that the advice was awfully good but had come too late for her.

Her expertise on men, Mme. Benoit claimed, was from observation. A former newspaper columnist, she interviewed over 1,000 men in the San Francisco Bay area.

As a lecturer she finds that the two most requested topics are discussions about men and food. Her principal work the past five years has been as an instructor on nutrition, skin care and posture for organizations and companies. In these courses the slim Frenchwoman calls upon her background as a physical education teacher and fashion model.

By DOROTHY NEWELL

Chewing bubble gum, spraying whipped cream, and pouring bottles of liquid over each other's heads — was this a kid's party or a fraternity bash?

No, it was the televised baseball World Series at Oakland, and the winners of the World Series, of course, were the Oakland A's. But the Los Angeles Dodgers could not be outdone. Steve Yeager of the Dodgers won the bubble gum chewing contest. One of the announcers said Yeager was embarrassed at having won the contest three years in a row.

Certainly is more interesting to watch the antics of the players on the sidelines than it is to watch the actual game. But then, I'm not a baseball fan.

SOAP OPERAS on TV are another story. If you've ever been confined to bed with a cold and don't feel up to reading, there is always the television to turn on — you can sleep right through it during the day. How many women can watch these dramas day in and day out and not become neurotic, is a question.

It seems that many women watch "As The World Turns," which follows the noon news. (Wonder if the women bother to watch the news.)

Here is Lisa, who was married to Dr. Bob Hughes — every soap has a doctor and hospital — then she had a couple of more husbands. Dr. Bob Hughes is now married to Jennifer, who is the sister of Kim, who became pregnant by her brother-in-law, Dr. Hughes, and they are all still friends! And this is just one of the few of the soaps that mesmerize the public.

As if that isn't enough, there is a woman who now puts out a weekly soap opera paper that keeps viewers posted on all the horrible details, in case they have to miss an episode.

Let's hope Marin County women are more intelligent than to spend their time watching this type of program.

WITH HALLOWEEN just around the corner, wonder who gets more enjoyment out of "trick or treat," those tricking or those treating. The very little kiddies are the sweetest as they come to the door with masks on, and when asked "who are you?" they automatically drop their masks and say "see!" The family dog also becomes the welcoming committee as each group of youngsters comes to the door. But let's hope this year, the older kids, other than escorting young brothers or sisters, find another way to enjoy the evening.

Sue Magee of the Marin Country Club Estates in Novato is suggesting an idea for the Halloween treats. Many women will be making cookies and candy, not only for the joy of it, but because of the high cost of the treats in the stores. She suggests putting the goodies in a baggie and putting the doner's name and address on the bag, so when the children bring the treats home, they won't be thrown in the garbage because of fear of something not being edible.

Baby Doctor Boom's Still On Upswing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The baby boom is long gone but the pediatrician population is still exploding, health officials reported Thursday.

The growth in the number of baby doctors, coupled with a decrease in births, may lead to an oversupply of pediatricians, Michigan officials Dr. Kurt Gorwitz and Dr. Donald C. Smith said.

"The number of children and adolescents is decreasing about 500,000 per year. This downward trend should continue for most of the balance of this century," the report said.

There are an estimated 3,445 children for one pediatrician today, the researchers said, but present trends will take the ratio to 1,869-1 by 1985.

Marin Cyclists End Italian Bicycle Tour

Five Marin cyclists recently returned from a month-long bicycle tour through Italy where they averaged 35 miles a day.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Girtler of Tiburon, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Foster of Greenbrae and Ed O'Neil of Mill Valley traveled a carefully planned route by bike, train and steamer.

Girtlers' daughter Susan, on leave from her law studies at University of Denver, accompanied the cyclists by car.

The party arrived in Milan on Sept. 13, bought new bicycles and pedaled off to the lakes area on the Swiss boarder. They rode to Arona on Lake Maggiorre and then to Lake Como and crossed to Lugano by steamer.

They took another steamer to Nobiallo and pedaled to Lake Garda and the surrounding countryside, then on to Verona. Here the friends, all Marin Cyclists members, divided; some traveling by train, others by bicycle, to Venice.

All went by train to Florence, where they biked to Siena and met Kathleen Graves of San Anselmo who was biking alone through Europe.

The Marin cyclists were joined by four Frenchmen, charter members of the International Bicycle Touring Society, in a ride through medieval Italian towns between Florence and Rome.

It was an easy tour, according to Betty Girtler who compared it with a much harder ride she had made through the south of France a year ago.

The newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Drange — Stuart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Drange of San Rafael — are living in Los Angeles following their wedding in early September in Tahoe City.

Stuart's bride is the former Janice Danielson, whose family lives in Omaha, Neb. She is employed as a nurse at the UCLA Hospital in Los Angeles.

Stuart is a dental student at the UCLA School of Dentistry. He was graduated from San Rafael High School and University of California at Berkeley.

IT WAS an evening of nostalgia for members of Donald V. Westlund Post 7816, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Ladies Auxiliary at the dinner last Saturday evening at Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club.

The occasion was the 25th anniversary of the founding of the post.

Present and guest of honor was Marie Westlund, known as the "mother of the post" and mother of the late Donald V. Westlund for whom the post was named. His two sisters, Alice Mazzolini and Fern Askim, and two brothers, Virgil and Clyde Westlund, were also present.

Twenty-five year pins for continuous membership in the auxiliary were given to Marie Westlund, Blanche Eckhardt, Rozella Owen, Wilma Thompson, and Mmes. Askim and Mazzolini.

Other charter members of the auxiliary present were Mary Rechsteiner, Lorrie Kidder and Donna Westlund.

It was announced that the auxiliary will present the post with a plaque naming all past commanders of the local organization.

Dr. John Rockwell of New York was the honored guest at a dinner party given by Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wynn of Belvedere at their home Thursday.

Dr. Rockwell, who is a music critic with the New York Times, was speaker at the Opera Preview at Del Mar School, Tiburon, later that evening. The previews are sponsored by Marin Opera Action, of which Anna P. Wynn is chairman. Jules Massenet's "Esclarmonde" was the opera discussed by Dr. Rockwell.

Other dinner guests were Dr. and Mrs. Algerd Monstavicius of San Francisco and Dina Richards, of San Francisco president of Bay Area Opera Action.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pompei of Mill Valley will entertain 10 couples with a cocktail party at their home this evening before attending the Sunny Hills benefit, "Prisoner of Second Avenue," at Ross Art and Garden Center.

Among the Pompeis' guests will be Messrs. and Mmes. Tony Alioto of Novato, Victor Udaloff of Novato, Ed Dill of Mill Valley and Gayne Conyers of Mill Valley.

"Jewels of Espana" is the theme of the ball which annually raises funds for the hospital, known world wide for its treatment of children with cancer and other disabilities.

Meeting Slated For Roundtable

Marin Community Roundtable will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Corte Madera Library, according to Chairman Lois McLain, for an information exchange among representatives of women's interest organizations.

Individuals or women's group's representatives are welcome.

The roundtable is an offshoot of the ad hoc committee which helped organize the Status of Women Commission. It is designed as a forum for exchange of information and ideas of participating organizations. It publishes a master calendar of organization events every three months.

Golden Anniversary Party Set For Roy Coopers of Greenbrae

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cooper returned from Atlanta, Ga., late Thursday evening and are taking it easy for a few days at their home in Greenbrae prior to a dinner dance in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary tomorrow.

The party at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco will be hosted by their daughters, Paula Harris of Mill Valley, Susan Gillespie of San Francisco, Barbara Mannheimer of Foster City and Carol Farber of Fremont.

The couple met as teen-agers, when they were neighbors in Seattle, Wash. Cooper was born in Canada and moved to Seattle with his family when he was 14. His wife, the former Adelaide Salinger is a native of Seattle. They eloped on Oct. 28, 1924.

Cooper began a career in the motion picture industry 50 years ago in Seattle. With their four small daughters the Coopers moved to San Francisco in 1937, where he worked for the Golden State Theater chain, now United Artists Theater circuit. In 1954 he formed his own company, Roy Cooper Co., Inc., West Side Valley Theaters.

Cooper was president of the National Association of Theater Owners from 1962 until 1967 and has been on the board of directors for 30. He and Mrs. Cooper were in Atlanta attending the association's annual convention. Cooper is also a charter member of Tent 32, San Francisco Variety Clubs International. The tent supports the Blind Babies Foundation, which provides professional counseling for the training of preschool blind children. Cooper is also a member of the Mayor's Advisory Committee for Bay Area Rapid Transit and the Beautification of Market Street.

Mrs. Cooper was president of the Women of Variety, Tent 32, in 1966 and for many years has been a volunteer at the Blind Babies Bazaar store in San Francisco, run by Women of Variety, which sells donated merchandise to help raise funds for the training and care of blind babies. She is also a member of Greenoaks Unit, Marin Foundation, Friends of Arequipa.

Also attending tomorrow night's party will be the Coopers' grandchildren, Philip III, Randall Cooper and Janet Harris; Karen and James Mannheimer Jr.; and Lori Ann Gillespie.

The daughters have arranged for Dr. Morris Goldstein, former rabbi of Congregation Sherith Israel, to officiate at a special ceremony during the party, recreating portions of the traditional Jewish wedding ceremony the Coopers missed when they eloped 50 years ago.

Halloween Parade For Greenbrae

Greenbrae's annual Halloween Frolic will begin Thursday at 5:30 p.m. with a costume parade of youngsters and end with free doughnuts, cider and hot dogs at the Greenbrae School.

The event is sponsored by the Greenbrae Property Owners Association.

Youngsters in costume gather at the corner of Eliseo Drive and Via LaCumbre, parade to the school grounds where they are judged in age groups for prizes. Members of the association will serve the food to be eaten on picnic tables in the school yard.

RAP:

Jayn, Karen and I have been friends for five years. Karen is extroverted, tries anything (including drugs), and I go along with the crowd, but Jayn is unique. She has kept her own dress styles and her own values and she's comfortable with them.' We love her for it. It's kind of like she's the rock and we're the sand.

Jayn is a parent's dream — or was. She told her folks everything, treated them like friends, asked their advice, and even took it. But they blew it!

They let us give a big summer party at her house. Karen and the heads split off from the rest of us, and pretty soon went off to toke. They showed up later, stoned out of their heads. And Jayn, in tears, went upstairs to tell her parents how worried she was.

Well, Karen got around her folks okay, but Jayn, who didn't do anything except confide in people she thought she could trust, has been grounded. She's not allowed to go anywhere with us anymore, and she doesn't tell her folks anything now. I'm very glad she stopped before I started doing dope, or they wouldn't even let me come over to her house. They're so suspicious of all her friends they won't let her even walk to the park.

The irony of it kills me. My parents trust me absolutely, and I abuse their trust horribly. Jayn is just what her parents always wanted her to be, and they don't trust her with an inch of her life. Don't they know Jayn is strong enough to turn down drugs — and we'd never influence her. What do they think — that we'll slip acid in her drink?

Can't they see that beyond the dope, we're all individuals and just possibly nicer than some straights? Can't they see:

Here's a girl who never conformed "just because everybody else does it," and they're literally driving her to drink. (When they shout that all her friends are on drugs, she comes back, "Well, all your friends are on booze" — and pours herself one.)

Please give me a bucket of cold water to throw in Jayn's parents' faces. — JUDY

JUDY:

Not a bucket — only a few drops for Jayn's folks — the rest goes to you and Karen — the ones who really blew it. Everything was cool until you started doing heavy dope.

It's too bad her parents use Jayn's honesty against her, but I don't think they've cut her off from the heads because they think she'll become one. It's just that many times a reputation can be built on the type of people you hang out with — and they're afraid she'll get busted through association.

Putting myself in Jayn's folks' place, I doubt they are trying to punish her, but only keep her away from something that in the long run she may have to pay for — heavily. — SUE

P.S. There's always the chance that Jayn may be using her parents as an excuse. When a girl decides her friends have taken one road and she prefers the other, it's easier to say "I'm grounded" than "I've outgrown you."

RAP:

I'm only 12, but I look older. The choir director at our church made passes at me, and he isn't the only one. Men my father's age try to get me to have an affair with them. It's got so bad that I'm scared to kiss Daddy, and when men stand behind me in line at a movie or bank or something, I practically die. Why can't a young girl trust any kind of man? — CAN'T TRUST

C.T.:

Imagination can play strange tricks, when you're scared. We think one bad experience may have turned you fearful of all men, and if you don't talk this out with an expert, you may keep a complex that could twist up your life. Confide in your mother and let her help you. — HELEN AND SUE

Gale Whedon's Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Whedon Jr. of Kentfield have announced the engagement of their daughter, Gale, to Stephen D. Ferrone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Ferrone of Northbrook, Ill.

Gale is a graduate of Bronxville High School in Bronxville, N. Y., and Northwestern University. Stephen, a graduate of Loyola Academy in Northfield, Ill., also attended Northwestern. He attends Loyola School of Law in Chicago.

The couple plans a June wedding.

Use Of Herbs

In general, one fourth to one half teaspoon of most dried herbs and spices is enough to season two cups of vegetables. For maximum flavor, crumble whole herbs to release their oils before adding to food.

Damp Cloth

To shine the chrome on a toaster or other kitchen appliance use a cloth dampened with clear ammonia.

Salvage Shop Taps Sausalito Woman

ELAINE SQUIRES
Salvage shop

The shop was founded in 1940 in response to a need for Bundles for Britain. It is staffed by volunteers and all proceeds are designated for charities.

In the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1974, the shop donated $8,969.40 to 39 different organizations. It supports four foster children, a Little League team and the Tam Junior Indians and donates to Guide Dogs for the Blind and Project Hope.

This year nine $200 scholarships will be awarded to nursing students at the College of Marin.

Members of the Sausalito Salvage Shop, all residents of Sausalito, volunteer one half day each week at the shop, located at 16 Princess Street. Donations of usable items are constantly being sought, according to Mrs. Squires.

A native of Medford, Ore., Mrs. Squires was graduated from the University of Washington. She and her husband, G. Robert Squires, a food broker in San Francisco, have lived in Marin for 10 years, the past three in Sausalito.

She has been active in the programs at Marindale School and was Marin County chairman of the American Field Service foreign exchange student program for four years. She is on the board of the Sausalito Woman's Club and a member of the Sausalito School District Advisory Board. Mrs. Squires has also served as cochairman of the salvage shop.

Other new officers are Betty Modlin, cochairman; Martha Trudell, secretary; Anna Purnell, treasurer; Shirley Elkington, membership; Jacquelin Wejman, publicity; Shirley Carrillo, pick up; and Miriam Rixford, counselor.

A British Tea Slated For Guy Fawkes Day

The Robert Louis Stevenson Chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire will hold its third annual British tea from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday, Nov. 4 at All Saints Lutheran Church, San Marin Drive, Novato.

The tea will celebrate Guy Fawkes Day, when a plot to blow up King James' Parliament was foiled in 1605. The day is remembered in Great Britain every year with a Guy (or a scarecrow type effigy) to burn on a bonfire, fireworks and children's parties, according to Publicity Chairman Alexa Witter of Novato.

The Novato group helps to support a home for the elderly in California and the Family Tree, a school for autistic children in Novato.

This year the emphasis is on typically British items. Traditional English tea will be served and sandwiches, mince pies, sausage rolls, fruit cakes and brandy snaps.

In addition there will be a baked goods stall featuring plum puddings, lemon curd, jams, marmalades, fruit cakes and a crafts stall with knitted items, tea towels and lavendar sachets.

Tickets may be obtained by contacting Julia Slater of 186 Michelle Circle, Novato. Admission is $1.50 and tickets will also be available at the door.

Marindale Gift

The largest check ever given to Marindale School from Ballet Aquacade of Marin was presented last week to Barbara Tarasoff, principal of the school. The check for $6,500, representing proceeds from last June's Ballet Aquacade, was $1,400 more than last year's contribution. The amount was incorrectly reported to the I-J in an earlier story, according to aquacade exeuctive director Yolanda Sullivan.

Art Sale To Benefit The Pobble

An art exhibit and sale by the Artists' Cooperative will be held Monday evening to benefit the Pobble in Novato, a shop carrying handcrafted items made by the handicapped and elderly.

The sale and show will be held at Howland's Interiors, 811 Montgomery, Jackson Square, San Francisco, from 6 to 10 p.m. Jack Howland is an officer of the Pobble organization.

The exhibit will include works of Bay Area aritsts and a showing of the art of fashion by both American and European masters. There will be two door prizes at the "Pobble" evening: a sculpture by C. B. Johnson and a painting by David Meyers. Informal modeling of designer fashions will also be a part of the evening. Donation is $3.

Information can be obtained from Gerri Eszterhas or Stephanie Roman, president of the Pobble Auxiliary, or from the Pobble Shop.

Soroptomist Club Gives Donation

In commemoration of Soroptimists Founders' Day, the soroptimist club of Novato donated $100 to the Novato Human Needs Center to replenish the center's food supplies, which are "embarrassingly low," according to Director Henry Mattimore.

Soroptimism was founded Oct. 3, 1921 when the Alameda County Soroptimist Club was chartered in Oakland with 89 members.

The soroptimist Club is a service club similar to Rotary in that only one woman in each business or professional classification can hold membership in each club. Soroptimist International of the Americas, Inc. is composed of three federations in 38 countries with a membership in excess of 50,000.

The Soroptimist Club of Novato was chartered in March, 1973 and has 22 members, according to President Billie Garl. Members meet every Tuesday for lunch at the Peacock Restaurant.

Next Tuesday's luncheon will be held for prospective members.

The annual 4-H Home Economics Skills Day will be held Nov. 2 from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Herzog Hall, Sonoma-Marin Fairgrounds.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. home economist Peggy Hopkins will demonstrate the use of electrical appliances, give inexpensive, easy recipes for the holidays and discuss gas and electric safety and conservation.

Marilyn Herzog will give a Seventh Avenue fall fashion forecast showing fabrics and slides of fabric manufacturing. She will also discuss sewing techniques and have a tailoring display.

There will also be place setting and flower arranging demonstrations and poster contests for 4-H members. Judging opportunities and action demonstrations by 4-H members will be going on continually during the public event.

Novato Wedding Is Held

Jacqueline Anstey and Daniel Jones of Novato were married at Our Lady of Loretto Church on Saturday, Oct. 19.

Jacqueline is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Anstey of Novato and Daniel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Jones of Las Vegas.

Attending the bride was Julie Rose Taylor. Best man was Raymond Brown, both of Novato.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Following a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe the couple will live in Novato.

The bride is employed at the Bank of America in San Rafael. She is the sister of Edward Anstey of San Jose and Richard Anstey of San Anselmo.

The bridegroom was graduated from Novato High School and is employed at Charles Kuhn Construction Co. in Novato. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt S. Harvey of Greendale, Wisc., and the brother of Tom Jones of San Rafael; Charles Jones of Novato, Patricia Rice of Petaluma and Dee Franzi of Fairfax.

Helen Louden Leads Church Women's Unit

HELEN LOUDEN
Heads church guild

Helen Louden of Mill Valley has been elected president of the Women's Guild of the Church of Religious Science.

Purpose of the guild is to promote interest in the church and its metaphysical teachings, according to Miss Louden, who has been a member for one year. She previously served as treasurer of the guild.

The guild plans to have a dinner dance, plant sale and pot luck supper, and members will visit nurseries and boutiques.

Miss Louden is also a member of the Marin Society of Artists, Mendocino Art Center and the Society of Western Artists. A native of San Rafael, she attended schools in San Francisco, but has lived most of her life in Marin County. Her hobbies are painting in watercolors, gardening and traveling.

Halloween Dance Slated In Cotati

A Halloween Dance has been scheduled for 9 p.m. Thursday at the Cotati Veterans Memorial Building under sponsorship of the Womancenter of Penngrove.

The Gang Band, billed as "a local hometown woman-oriented group playing original electronic dance and listening nonsense," will play.

Women Artists To Be Discussed

More than 200 famous and not-so-famous women artists will be discussed Wednesday at the final program of the "Phase Two: New Aspects of Women's Liberation" series at the College of Marin.

J. J. Wilson and Karen Patersen, instructors in the Women's Studies Program at Sonoma State College, will present "Great Women Artists: Past and Present" beginning at 8 p.m. at Olney Hall on the campus. The program will include slides and a discussion of women's themes and images, feminine aesthetics and the future of women's art.

Angela Loses Bid For Job

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Angela Davis won't be teaching at San Francisco State University.

Devere E. Pentony, dean of the School of Behavioral and Social Sciences, said yesterday that Miss Davis had asked for part-time work but was told there were no such positions olen.

Workshop For Fairs At YWCA

A two day communication workshop for couples will be held Nov. 2 and 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Marin Young Women's Christian Association, 1618 Mission Avenue in San Rafael.

The workshop will be led by Ken Kelzer, a marriage counselor, and his wife, Charlene, who leads groups in self discovery through art media.

The workshop is designed to clarify and enrich the process of man-woman communication, according to the couple. Group sharing, individual dialogue with couples and art media, such as clay, paint and sketching, will be used to explore each couple's communication process, and videotape feedback will be used to deepen each couple's awareness of their dialogue and energy flow.

Maximum enrollment is six couples, and the cost is $70 per couple. Kelzer's paper, "Guidelines for Effective Marital Communication," will be mailed as advance reading for participants. Registration can be made by calling the Kelzers.

Blue Bird Wins Helicopter Ride

Christine is a member of the Blue Bird group from Oak View School in San Rafael Park, led by Barbara Riley. Christine will fly with Lu Hurley, who monitors traffic by helicopter for a San Francisco radio station, on a date of her choice.

The Haunted House is sponsored by the Jolly Rogers Chapter of the Children's Home Society in San Francisco.

Carnival Set

St. Rita's School in Fairfax will hold a Halloween Carnival Thursday from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. All children in the community are welcome to the carnival which will feature a haunted house, games, booths and refreshments.

I-J OFFERS FORMS FOR ENGAGEMENTS & WEDDING STORY INFORMATION

Forms for engagement and wedding story information to be printed in the Independent-Journal are available from the I-J offices in San Rafael, Mill Valley, Novato and Petaluma.

Wedding forms should be returned promptly to the I-J office in your area and information will be printed after the wedding. No wedding story or photograph will be printed if received later than seven days after the wedding. Photographers should be urged to submit a print of the wedding picture promptly. Color photos cannot be used.

An engagement form may be accompanied by a professional black and white photograph, which may be picked up at the I-J office after its publication. Snapshots, polaroid or color photos are not suitable. Engagement announcements are not printed unless received at least 30 days prior to wedding date.

Talent Bank Formed By Commission

The Marin County Status of Women Commission is establishing a talent bank of competent women available and willing to serve on public boards, commissions and other advisory groups in the county.

The commission, established by the Marin County Board of Supervisors in March, is an advisory commission with the purpose of promoting and insuring equal rights and opportunities for women. Recognizing the importance of participation of women in local government, the commission is establishing the talent bank in an effort to increase the opportunities available to women in Marin, according to Sheila McEvoy, staff member for the commission.

The commission will not endorse individuals requesting appointment. Instead it will serve as a clearing hosue and attempt to coordinate lists of qualified women for consideration when openings occur.

Tem Kant's Engagement Announced

Tem J. Kant and Kelly F. Campion, both of San Rafael, will be married Nov. 23. Announcement of the engagement has been made by the future bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Kant of San Rafael.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carney J. Campion of San Rafael.

Tem is the sister of Tia J. and Tay J. Kant of San Rafael and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Goodloe of Placerville and Maude Kant of Fairfax. She is a graduate of Terra Linda High School and Heald's Business College. The future bride is employed by Geico in San Francisco.

Kelly is the brother of Kevin, Brian, Terry, Maura and Carney Campion Jr. of San Rafael. Also a graduate of Terra Linda High School, he is employed by the California Division of Forestry in Middletown.

ART REVIEW

Nostalgic Show At Dollar Mansion

By ADA GARFINKEL

European prints of the 18th & 19th centuries, antique American quilts and photographs of early San Rafael make up a nostalgic display now on view in the amicable Victorian setting of the Robert Dollar mansion on Mission Avenue in San Rafael.

The softly-colored aquatints and engravings depict pastoral settings, medieval castles and market scenes and classical Mediterranean ruins. (All are from the collection of Michael Lerner of Lagunitas).

Others portray catacombs, formal courtyards and fountains, long corridors, archways and architectural details.

Quiltmaking is an old art form, dating back to the ancient China, North Africa and the near East. American women have been making quilts as works of art for almost 400 years — for special occasions, trousseaux, gifts and for display at fairs, festivals and churches.

Those in the Dollar show ere made in the 1800s. Each has a title, and most are shown as hangings. Their designs are chiefly geometric, and the needlework is uniformly and exquisitely handled. At least two of the quilts are as contemporary as today's paintings.

In the foreground one can see the gate house of the Boyd estate; in the background is the original Gerstle mansion, now Gerstle Park.

Other reminders of the past are photographs of the Centennial Building at Fourth and C Streets, the old steam train at the San Rafael depot, and a horse-drawn carriage in front of the Hotel Rafael in 1890.

The exhibits will run through Nov. 4. Viewing hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays and noon to 4 p.m. on Sundays. The Dollar Estate is at 1408 Mission Street.

Shirley MacLaine Is Dancing Again

By JOSEPH N. BELL
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

SHIRLEY MacLAINE
She's hoofing again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Shirley MacLaine has decided in mid-career to turn back to the activity that first brought her to show business: dancing. She really did make it in the big time when she understudied Carol Haney in "Pajama Game" and had to go on at the last minute when Miss Haney was injured — just the way it used to happen in all those old Hollywood musicals.

Most of the things that have happened to Shirley MacLaine since have been just as improbably — including her current resurgence as a singer-dancer. She returned to musicals briefly to do the film of "Sweet Charity," but since its disappointing reception, Shirley has been concentrating in about equal parts on dramatics and politics.

So why a return, at this stage of her life, to the rigid discipline and hard work of dancing for a living?

She curled into the corner of a sofa, pulling the blanket around her, oblivious to the hubbub of visitors who had come backstage between the eight o'clock and midnight shows to mill about and make show business talk.

She speaks thoughtfully, measuring her words at first, then plunging ahead when she sees where she is going, dropping her "g's" with abandon, the only suggestion of her Virginia upbringing.

"It sound high-falutin'," she said, "but when you're moved by somethin' you see in your life and act accordingly, you might as well say it. I'm usually moved by small things, but in this case I was moved by a real big one: a trip I took through China with seven other American women early this year.

"We saw a country — even though the collective spirit admittedly de-emphasizes the individual — where everybody I, came in contact with was doin' the best they could at whatever they believed they had the capacity for. We all came back feelin' like we could do anything.

"I was born a dancer, true masochiast all my life, but I'd never really used this talent I'd been trained for. Films never made that kind of demand on me . . . On the stage . . . you can't take it from the top again if you weren't in the mood the first time. So I decided to stretch myself, put myself on the line.

"The hotels have been askin' me to play Vegas for years, but I never had the courage. You really have to believe in yourself to get up on that stage. So when I came back from China, I sent the word out I was interested. And the Grand came back with the best offer and the most enthusiasm. So I hired the best people I knew, put up my own money, and went to work."

Work meant running every morning on the beach, a half-mile at first, then up to five miles, plus daily workouts at a gym, then finally long hours in a rehearsal hall while the show was pounded into shape, along with Shirley.

It was important to Shirley that her show be very good, and she chose associates willing to match her own commitment: composer Cy Coleman ("Jigsaw," "Sweet Charity"), producer-lyricist Bob Welles, and youthful choreorgrapher Alan Johnson. "I think people will appreciate somethin' good if that's what you give them. Junk doesn't take as much time or effort or money — or love.")

It is the first winner for Shirley in a long time, and she is very much aware of that. Since the disappointment of "Sweet Charity," she has done a number of forgettable movies and a disastrous TV series in England. ("I tried to get out of it when I saw there wasn't enough love.")

She had another loser in George McGovern, for whom she worked strenuously for several years, before she spent three months driving across the United States, probing, digging, trying to understand herself and her country.

"I went as a secretary named Shirley Parker. Entertainers aren't recognized if they don't want to be, and I wasn't. Almost every person I got into a discussion with — on whatever level — ultimately said to me: I'm worried about gettin' my own piece of the pie because that's what everybody else, includin' our national leaders, seems to be worried about.' "

ON THE MOVE — Redwood's Jim Connor sped downfield on a punt return with Bob Praszker of Tamalpais in pursuit yesterday during the fourth quarter at College of Marin. MARIN LEAGUE GAME SCORELESS

Frustrating Football Tie For Redwood, Tam

By DAVID EINSTEIN

The Redwood Giants and Tamalpais Indians frustrated themselves, their coaches and several hundred fans yesterday by playing to a 0-0 tie in a Marin County Athletic League football game at College of Marin.

The outcome kept both teams winless in league play, Redwood at 0-3-1, Tam at 0-2-1. It also marked the sixth time in seven games that the Giants have been shut out.

At the score — or lack of it — implies, the game wasn't exactly an offensive fireworks show. Redwood had just 139 yards net, Tam a measly 80. The Giants never got a real chance to score, and the Indians managed only two and blew them both.

Outstanding among the mediocrity was Tam's Kevin Murphy, who rushed for 80 yards and punted eight times for a 32-yard average. His last three kicks covered 44, 48 and 43 yards.

Redwood's Jim Connor turned in a good performance on punt returns, breaking one for 36 yards and another for 37.

Once at the beginning and again at the end of the last period, the Indians moved close enough for possible field goals. But Kent Julian's attempts of 22 and 37 yards were short. The first chance was set up by a drive to the five-yard line that began in the third quarter as a fumble recovery and featured a 17-yard reverse by Shannon Bynum.

With less than a minute to play, Murphy kept the fans awake by barrelling 24 yards to the Redwood 23. But three more plays gained just seven yards, and a five yard penalty against the Indians put the ball on the 21 for Julian's last try.

Tam quarterback Charlie Stump suffered a mild concussion early in the fourth quarter and retired in favor of Ken Praszker.

The Giants made their best move early on; Mark Chapman, on the last play of the first quarter, hit Chuck Hall with a 28-yard pass to the Tam 24. Chris Meloney, Redwood's leading rusher for the game, then lugged the ball to the 19.

The next two plays lost 11 yards, however, and the one after that resulted in an interception by Arthur McIntosh to end the threat.

Seals, Flyers Have Hot Time On NHL Ice

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Seals and Philadelphia Flyers today held one official record and one unofficial mark after the wildest encounter yet between the two enemy teams.

They went at it in an all-out 40-minute brawl in the penalty box and on the ice last night in a game that produced eight expulsions and led to a record 232 minutes of penalties. The old record of 204 minutes was set by Toronto at Montreal in 1953. Mike Christie of the Seals wound up with three separate wounds requiring 14 stitches.

What's more, veteran observers said it was probably the lengthiest battle in National Hockey League history.

"I've seen bloodier battles and I've seen fights that came nearer to being riots, but this was probably the most prolonged and hardest to break up I ever saw," said one Seal official.

California won 4-1 for its first victory over the Stanley Cup champs since October, 1972, and first Coliseum Arena triumph over Philadelphia since January, 1972. It also helped keep the Seals unbeaten at home this season.

At least three events led to yesterday's brawl. The Flyers still feel Barry Cummins, now no longer with the team, took a cheap shot two years ago at superstar Bobby Clark and there have been numerous reprisals by the Flyers ever since.

This year, General Manager Bill McCreary said he was tired of seeing his team intimidated and promised to go for bigger and tougher players. He obviously has made good on his promise.

Then in the first period, Christie held his own in a brief scuffle with Philadelphia bad boy Dave Schultz and both teams seemed spoiling for more action.

At 8:40 into the final period, Christie and Bob Kelly of Philadelphia started going at it in front of the penalty box. Orest Kindrachuk of the Flyers jumped in and both benches immediately cleared.

Police stood at the ready, but it was believed no fans got in the action, which was centered in the penalty box and in a mound of players right in front of it. But apparently the rules of decorum were followed in such matters with no skates or sticks used by the participants.

The well-pummelled Christie wound up requiring eight stitches below the left eye and four above it. He also required two under the right eye.

Ejected and facing possible further disciplinary action were Christie, Jim Neilson and Len Frig of the Seals and Kindrachuk, Schultz, Don Saleski, Kelly and Andre Du Pont of Philadelphia.

Hero of the game for the Seals was goalie Gary Simmons, who may have won the first-string job from Gilles Meloche after blocking 27 shots and almost getting a shutout. Charley Johnson had a goal and two assists to lead the Seals as more than 10,000 Coliseum Arena fans watched.

In other NHL games, Atlanta tied Minnesota 2-2 and Vancouver beat Kansas City 5-3. Toronto beat Winnipeg 3-1 in the lone World Hockey Association game.

Flames 2, North Stars 2

Fred Stanfield's first goal of the season, a 25-foot drive from the left boards, enabled Minnesota to tie Atlanta. Stanfield broke in alone and fired a low shot that went past goalie Phil Myre's pads late in the second period. Bill Goldsworthy gave the North Stars a 1-0 lead in the first period but Atlanta's Randy Manery tied the game four minutes later. The Flames then took a 2-1 lead when Bob Murray popped in a rebound for his first NHL goal.

Canucks 5, Scouts 3

Vancouver moved back into sole possession of first place in Division 2 of the NHL with its victory over winless Kansas City. The winning goal proved to be the oddest one of the game as the Canucks' John Gould fired the puck against the backboards behind the Scouts' net. Goalie Peter McDuffe attempted to block the rebound but missed the puck completely so that Paulin Bordelau was left alone, facing an empty net.

Toros 3, Jets 1

Wayne Dillon, Tom Simpson and Vaclav Nedomansky score the goals that handed Winnipeg its first loss of the season after two victories. Bobby Hull, playing despite a back injury, gave Winnipeg a 1-0 lead but Toronto rebounded in the second period with a pair of goals. Dillon, the league's leading scorer, connected on a power play and Simpson then put the Toros ahead. In the final period, the Toros got an insurance goal from Nedomansky.

DRAWING A CROWD — Mike Christie of the Seals (helmet) and Dave Schultz of Philadelphia squared off in the first period of last night's National Hockey League game in Oakland, and soon the incident involved more than two players. But referees broke it up, and both Schultz and Christie drew five minute penalties.

TERRA LINDA TRIUMPHS

'We Can Still Win It,' Lucas Claims

Sports

Saturday, October 26, 1974

Independent-Journal, 9

By DAVID DEL GRANDE

"We can still win it (the football title). We know we can," proclaimed Terra Linda High School coach Don Lucas following last night's 17-7 victory over Drake. But based on what has happened thus far, the Trojans' chances will depend heavily on forcing opponents into punting situations.

Much as they did in their Marin County Athletic League opening win against Redwood, the Trojans took advantage of two Pirate punting mistakes to win. Some 1,100 fans looked on at Paul Miller Field in San Rafael.

The victory thrusts the Trojans back into title contention with a 2-1 record. Drake drops to 0-3.

Following Terra Linda's unsuccessful onside kick attempt to open the game, Drake wasted little time scoring. After completing two clutch passes to running back Dave Egan, quarterback Terry Fahey hit receiver Gary Peak for a 12-yard touchdown only four minutes and 11 plays into the game.

But then adversity struck the Pirates. On fourth down midway through the second quarter, Peak was forced to dive on an errant punt snap in the end zone. The safety narrowed Drake's lead to 7-2.

Three minutes later, after stalling Drake back at its own 21-yard line, Terra Linda again capitalized m an attempted Peak punt. This time, defensive back Rob DeGraves burst through to block the punt. Trojans Larry Loberg and Jim Sullivan dove on it in the end zone. After Jim Jenkins had run over a two-point conversion, Terra Linda led at halftime, 10-7.

As expected, both teams made extensive use of passing. Trojan quarterback Brian Wark completed nine of 18 for 129 yards. His passing set up the clinching score with three minutes left when Dick Labarthe bolted three yards for a touchdown to cap a 62-yard drive.

Warriors Displaying Signs Of Character

OAKLAND (UPI) — The young Golden State Warriors have shown a lot of speed and desire this season but they finally showed a little character, too, in a 99-97 win at Portland.

In sadly typical fashion last night, they blew a 10-point lead they held at half and trailed 88-85 with six minutes left. But they outscored the Blazers 12-4 only to lose that lead as Bill Walton's jumper tying the game at 97-all with 15 seconds left.

The Warriors, after calling time out, worked the ball to their mightiest mite of them all, Charlie Johnson, who hit an 18-footer at the buzzer that won it. It seemed a fair finish since last Tuesday a Warrior missed shot at the buzzer gave Portland the National Basketball Association win in an earlier battle between the evenly-matched teams.

The Warriors, now 2-2, come home to face tough Detroit tonight.

Last night's battle at Portland matched two premier forwards, Rick Barry of Golden State and Sidney Wicks of Portland. Whatever their relations off the court, on it they are far from friends.

They shoved, tripped and grabbed each other all night while trying to point out the other's tactics to the officials. They also played brilliantly as Barry hit 34 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and had seven steals while Wicks scored 27, grabbed eight rebounds and four steals.

Johnson had 16 points while Walton had a big night for the Blazers with 16 points, 25 rebounds and five blocked shots and Geoff Petrie added 21 for Portland, now 2-3.

Overtime Drama In Water Polo

Dalton Lockman scored his 10th goal of the game in sudden death yesterday to give San Rafael High School a 20-19 victory over Redwood in a Marin County Athletic League water polo game in Larkspur.

Regulation time ended with the score tied, 16-16, and two four-minute overtime periods failed to resolve the issue. The sudden-death rule then went into effect, and Lockman scored to give San Rafael its fifth win in six games and a share of first place with Terra Linda. The Trojans beat Drake, 18-3 in yesterday's other game.

Redwood, now 4-2, had seven players foul out. Dave Russell led the Giants with nine goals. Sig Baerthel had six for San Rafael to back up Lockman, and goalie Bill Tanem had 41 saves.

Tom Enright led Terra Linda with four goals.

Standings — San Rafael, 5-1; Terra Linda, 5-1; Redwood, 4-2; Drake, 2-4; San Marin 1-4, Tamalpais, 0-5.

NBA ROUNDUP

Kings Put It Together In 'Well Played Game'

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Kansas City-Omaha Kings finally put it all together last night and the result was a one-sided 112-91 triumph over the Chicago Bulls.

"We've had good halves and good quarters but we were spotty with dead spots and sparkling performances in the same game," said Kings Coach Phil Johnson after his club beat the Chicago Bulls 112-91. "But we never had a full, well played game until this one.

"We were 20 points down in one game to Phoenix and won and earlier, we trailed the Bulls by nine points with two minutes to go. But in this one, Jimmy Walker got us going and we never cooled off."

Walker, the scoring leader with 20 points, netted 14 points in the first period and though the Bulls tied the score once, they never got ahead and trailed by more than 20 points throughout the last period.

It was the third straight loss for the Bulls and gave the Kings their fourth win in five starts, keeping them atop the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division.

Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, Boston beat Atlanta 116-109, Washington whipped Milwaukee 111-96, Houston clobbered Philadelphia 110-86, Detroit edged Los Angeles 110-107, Golden State nipped Portland 99-97 and Seattle beat Phoenix 106-97.

Celtics 116, Hawks 109

John Havlicek's 34 points paced Boston over Atlanta. Havlicek, who fouled out with three minutes remaining, scored four of those points with five minutes left to give the Celtics a 105-100 lead after Atlanta had closed to 101-100 on rookie Tom Henderson's three free throws. The Celtics also got 21 points from forward Paul Silas.

Bullets 111, Bucks 96

Phil Chenier got the stalled Washington offense going late in the second quarter and led the Bullets to their win over Milwaukee. Chenier finished with 29 points to lead the Bullets, who remain the only undefeated team in the NBA with a 4-0 record. Elvin Hayes had 21 points and Mike Riordan 19 for Washington. Milwaukee was led by Lucius Allen with 21.

Rockets 110, 76ers 86

Ron Riley scored 12 of his 16 points in an explosive third quarter for Houston to lead the Rockets over Philadelphia. Riley also picked off 19 rebounds for Houston in its home opener. Rudy Tomjanovich led Houston's scoring with 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Fred Boyd was top scorer for Philadelphia with 19.

Pistons 110, Lakers 107

Bob Lanier scored 10 points in the fourth quarter and blocked a possible game-tying shot to lead Detroit over Los Angeles.

Sonics 106, Suns 97

Spencer Haywood scored 17 of his game high 27 points in the first half Friday night as Seattle beat Phoenix. The game was marred by six technical fouls, five of them against Phoenix. The Suns' Charlie Scott had two and was ejected in the fourth quarter.

Is Ali Succeeding In Psyching King?

Foreman Friendly In Public

N'SELE, Zaire (UPI) — Is Muhammad Ali having any success in his efforts to "psyche" George Foreman before they go into battle for the world heavyweight championship Wednesday?

Hard to say, but Ali is working studiously along that line, and on yesterday Foreman did something he hadn't done before.

It has been, for some reason, Foreman's custom to remain aloof from the press and from crowds. It also has been his custom, on finishing his workout, to wave goodbye, sometimes with a faint smile, sometimes not. The Zairois applaud but do not react with the fervor Ali inspires in them.

Yesterday, when Foreman finished punching the big bag, skipping rope and his foot work, he headed abruptly for the exit. Suddenly he stopped and climbed up on the stage where several hundred Zairois were standing.

There was delighted laughter. Foreman was showing just how nicely he can smile when he permits himself. Then there was this young white boy, eight years old, shaking hands with the champion, and the champion wearing a wide grin as he hugged the boy around the shoulders.

For those few moments there was a touch of personal warm contact, and the Zairois loved it. Either they had broken through to this very private man, or the private man had made the first move against what Ali has been saying about him.

When Foreman's workout had begun Ali suddenly appeared outside the hall, peering through the open-work walls from across the street, ducking behind cars and shading his eys like an American Indian on the prairie.

Of course, he was spotted immediately and while Foreman went through the first stages of his workout, all attention was directed at the furtive Ali across the way.

Tiring of the fun, Ali left, feeling perhaps that having again diverted attention from Foreman to himself he had accomplished his day's work.

But then Foreman struck back, smiling and mingling with the crowd and—at last—drawing some of the attention towards himself.

Baylor Is In Big Game Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's been eight years since both Texas A&M and Baylor were undefeated in league play at this stage of the Southwest Conference race, but that's the situation when they tangle tonight before an expected overflow crowd of more than 50,000 in Waco, Tex.

Still, the frantic SWC race goes beyond Texas A&M's 2-0 record and Baylor's 1-0. Southern Methodist also boasts a 2-0 mark and the Mustangs entertain 1-1 Texas Tech in an afternoon contest.

All are bidding to unseat perennial champion Texas, which also takes a 1-1 SWC mark into action at Rice in a night contest.

The Baylor Stadium record crowd was the 48,394 who attended the Texas game in 1972. Temporary bleachers probably will enable more than 50,000 to squeeze in tonight to watch the unranked Bears entertain the Texas Aggies, who are rated eighth nationally by The Associated Press.

Texas Tech is 11th, Texas 13th.

Elsewhere in the Top Ten, it's No. 1-ranked Ohio State at Northwestern, Kansas State at runner-up Oklahoma, Minnesota at No. 3 Michigan, Texas Christian at fourth-rated Alabama, Florida State at No. 5 Auburn, Oregon State at sixth-ranked Southern California, Miami, Fla. at seventh-ranked Notre Dame, Oklahoma State at ninth-ranked Nebraska and No. 10 Penn State at West Virginia. All are afternoon contests.

Texas A&M appeared a little sluggish in defeating lowly Texas Christian 17-0 last week.

"My emotions weren't comparable to last week," said coach Emory Bellard, who had his team sky-high for a 28-7 whipping of Texas Tech the previous Saturday.

However, the Aggies still managed to impress TCU.

"I think A&M will win the conference," said TCU tackle Tommy Van Wart. "A&M's backs are the key to their offense. They can pick their hole and scoot out when it's closed."

The Aggies also impressed Baylor coach Grant Teaff.

"The manner in which Texas A&M defeated TCU was awesome," he says. "I don't remember when a major college football team was held to a minus yardage rushing the way TCU was minus 58 yards on 39 carries."

Although Rice hasn't beaten Texas since 1965, the Owls have been chief spoilers for the Longhorns over the years.

For example, in 1930 Rice dealt Texas its only setback; in 1940, the Owls knocked Texas out of a share of the championship; in 1944, Rice again cost Texas an SWC title; in 1945, Rice's 7-6 victory was the only blot on Texas 10-1 campaign; in 1946, Rice's 18-13 triumph denied D. X. Bible's last Texas team a co-championship; in 1949, Rice won on Froggy Williams' famous last-minute field goal.

Rice hasn't won yet, but, coach Darrell Royal notes: "Rice is a team that no one has handled. LSU tied them, they didn't tie LSU. Nobody's taken liberties with Rice's defense and it's easy to see why. They have some good folks in Cornelius Walker and Rod Norton. They have a good defensive football team."

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Cards Game May Be Crucial For 'Skins

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Washington Redskins have never lost to a team in their conference—the National Conference East—twice in the same season under George Allen. And tomorrow would be the most inopportune time for a first, as far as the Redskins are concerned.

Washington is in St. Louis to play the Cardinals, the lone remaining unbeaten team in the National Football League, and even though it's only the halfway point of the 1974 season, the game could be crucial to the Redskins' playoff hopes.

Allen's Redskins are 4-2 and trail the Cardinals by two games. A loss tomorrow would drop them three games behind, leaving them the difficult task of making up three games in the seven remaining games. Also involved are the Philadelphia Eagles, tied with the Redskins. Should the Eagles maintain their winning ways, the Redskins might even lose a shot at the wild card berth.

The Redskins have been impressive since Sonny Jurgensen took over at quarterback two weeks ago, upsetting Miami 20-17 and drubbing the New York Giants 24-3. St. Louis had to struggle to beat Houston last week but the Cardinals have made the "big play" their trademark this year, with Jim Hart and Mel Gray providing it through the air and Terry Metcalf on the ground.

Minnesota and New England, who had their five-game unbeaten streaks snapped last Sunday, tangle in another key game. The Patriots are tied with Buffalo for the American Football Conference East lead while the Vikings hold a two-game edge in the NFC Central.

Hadl And Green Bay Hit It Off

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Veteran quarterback John Hadl, professing to be "in the best shape I've been in for five years," enthusiastically joined the Green Bay Packers yesterday and was greeted in kind by his new teammates.

Hadl, who had balked at reporting unless the Packers renegotiated the contract he had with the Los Angeles Rams, met in strategy session with coach Dan Devine, studied films and took his physical examination.

"There's nothing wrong with my arm. I'm fine," Hadl, 34, said after undergoing the exam.

Hadl, who was traded Tuesday by the Rams for five high draft choices, reported although the contract was not renegotiated.

"I'm glad to be with the Packers," he said. "I think we have a very good chance to win our division. But it won't be easy. I've played against Detroit already this year and I know that Minnesota and Chicago have good teams."

Hadl will accompany the team to Detroit for tomorrow's National Football League game with the Lions, but Jack Concannon will start at quarterback and Hadl will be used only in emergency as he acquaints himself with the team.

Safety Jim Hill, Hadl's former teammate with the San Diego Chargers, expressed delight with the deal.

"I'm prejudiced, of course, but I know what he can do and the league knows what he can do," Hill said. "Joe Namath calls him the best quarterback in the league, and Joe ought to know."

Japanese Team Tops Mets, 10-7

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese home run king Sadaharu Oh hit a grand slam homer off relief pitcher Jerry Cram in the eighth inning today to give the Yomiuri Giants a comefrom-behind 10-7 victory in their opening game with the New York Mets.

A capacity crowd of more than 50,000 turned out at Korakuen Stadium in fine sunny weather to see the Mets open their post-season 18-game goodwill series in Japan.

First baseman Oh, 34, who won the triple crown in the Central League for the second straight year this past season and belted 49 homers, also drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single off Tom Seaver, the Mets' starting pitcher, in the third inning.

A two-run homer by John Milner followed by a double by Joe Torre and a single by Benny Ayala, all off Shitoshi Sekimoto gave the Mets three runs in the first inning.

Right-hander Bob Miller took over for Seaver in the fourth but yielded a run when the Giants scored on a double play with the bases loaded. Miller's error on a bunt loaded the bases with none out.

Wayne Garrett gave the Mets a 4-3 lead with a homer off Yoshimasa Kobayashi in the fifth inning.

Dave Schneck hit a three-run homer off Kunikazu Ogawa in the top of the sixth and the Mets had a 7-3 lead.

The Giants scored another run off Miller in the bottom of the sixth on a double by Kazumasa Kono and a single by Shigeo Nagashima, who has retired after 17 years of play and is expected to be the new Giant manager next year.

Casa Grande Whips Healdsburg, 25-0

By DIANE FISHER

HEALDSBURG — The Healdsburg Hounds rolled over and played dead last night. Casa Grande High School whipped Healdsburg 25-0 here in Sonoma County League football.

Casa Grande's defense was the key to the victory, holding the Hounds to minus seven yards rushing and 31 yards passing.

The Gaucho's first score came in the second quarter when Larry Thomas booted a 23-yard field goal.

Casa Grande (3-1) then recovered a Healdsburg fumble and capitalized with a 32-yard touchdown pass from Jim Bricker to Carl Hendershot. John Lutz kicked the extra point, making it 10-0 at halftime.

Curtin Sparks Rancho Cotate Football Win

SANTA ROSA — John Curtin ran for two Cougar touchdowns here last night, leading Rancho Cotate High School to a 17-2 Sonoma County League football win over Piner.

Curtin sprinted 38 yards in the second quarter for the first Cougar touchdown, and plowed three yards for another in the third quarter.

Mike Balliett booted a 34 yard field goal as well as the two extra points to complete Rancho Cotate's scoring.

Piner's safety came in the third quarter when a bad snap forced Cougar punter Eric Mogel to fall on the ball in the Rancho Cotate end zone.

Elbow Surgery For Caldwell

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants reported yesterday that lefthanded pitcher Mike Caldwell has undergone successful surgery in Los Angeles for the removal of a bone spur in his pitching elbow.

Dr. Frank Job, who performed similar surgery on Los Angeles Dodgers pitchers Jim Brewer and Tommy John, said Caldwell will be free to leave the hospital Monday.

Cross Country Win For Marin

SUISUN CITY — The College of Marin Tars took five of the first six places yesterday to romp past Canada of Redwood City, 17-44 in a Camino Norte Conference cross country meet at Rockville Park.

Kian McCarthy, Dan Turek and Brian McCurdy swept the top three spots, with McCarthy covering the four-mile course in 20 minutes, 58 seconds. Eric Moller and Tom Altamirano of Marin finished fifth and sixth.

The victory, which increased the Tars' league record to 5-0, was achieved without Ken Scalmanini and Mike Killeen. The former was out with a sore ankle, the latter had prior commitments. But both should be ready for next Friday's battel against Santa Rosa, which also has a 5-0 mark in the CNC.

STATEMENT OF POLICY REGARDING POLITICAL ADVERTISING

Any political advertisement that is not clearly the personal appeal of the elective candidate or candidates involved must show the name of the sponsoring group together with the name or names of one or more persons officiating for such group and their address.

All political advertisements are payable in advance. Charges are figured at the prevailing flat rate.

Advertising deadlines are 4 p.m., two working days preceding publication. Tuesday advertisements must be in Friday by 4 p.m., Monday advertisements must be in the preceding Friday morning by 11:00 a.m. Any intervening holiday advances the deadline by a day.

No responsibility to show printer's proof is assumed under the above schedule.

If a proof is desired, advertisement must be submitted substantially in advance. Corrections, if any, must be ordered by 4 p.m., two working days preceding publication. Any changes from original copy will be charged for on basis of printing work involved.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Did Koufax Match Ryan's Strikeouts?

THE TIPOFF:

It took the early success of the New England Patriots for the pros to admit that the Miami "53" defense, hailed for its ingenuity, was nothing more than the old Oklahoma defense with a couple of linebacker types on the terminals of what used to be the Okie "5-2-4" alignment, turning it into a "3-4-4." Now two-thirds of the NFL has already swung to this as a basic defense.

Q. Does Nolan Ryan hold the record for striking out the side on nine pitches? I recall him doing it three times: once with the Mets and twice with the Angels. — Steve Estrada, Brea, Calif.

I'll take your word for it about Ryan's feats. As for the record, such statistics aren't kept officially, though I would think Sandy Koufax might have kept pace with Ryan in the strikeout league.

Q. They say Rocky Marciano was the only heavyweight champion of the world to retire undefeated. I would like to know who beat Gene Tunney before he fought Jack Dempsey. — Farris Dodson, Cincinnati, O.

Technically, you may be right because Tunney never did lose a bout as a heavyweight. But as a light heavyweight, he was clobbered by Harry Greb in May, 1922, in a bout for the American light heavyweight title. It was the only defeat in Tunney's professional career though he participated in 17 "no decision" contests.

Q. Where can I obtain autographed pictures and career statistics of the Oakland Raiders ? — Dave Morkel, Catasauqua, Pa.

By writing to the Publicity Department, Oakland Raiders, 7811 Oakport St., Oakland, Calif. 94621. In fact, most pro clubs will oblige such requests by writing to their publicity departments but I would be more specific and single out certain players if you want any such request honored.

Q. I am a Minnesota Vikings fan and would like the 1974 team roster but I can't find it anywhere. Can you please help me? — Rhett Arbuckle, Dublin, Calif.

Again, write directly to the Vikings in Minneapolis, Minn., and I'm sure they'll respond to your plea.

Q. During the period when Joe Louis was fighting, in the 1930s, I recall some heavyweight boxing matches for championships that were scheduled for 20 rounds. Am I correct on this? — Ted Matlosz, Elizabeth, N.J.

Your memory is good. Two of the Brown Bomber's title defenses, against Bob Pastor in 1939 and Abe Simon in 1941 and both held in Detroit, were scheduled for 20 rounds, but Louis ended both with early knockouts. The 20-round bout is virtually passe.

Q. With the success of Mack Herron as a runner with the New England Patriots, don't you think pro scouts will change their minds about the ability of little men to carry the ball in the pro game? — Jay Curtis, New Haven, Conn.

No, the pro scouts will stick to their slide rules that say a quarterback has to be 6-4 and a running back has to weigh 225 and a linebacker's got to be 240 because they're always looking for the ideal. And the little guys like 5-5 Herron, 5-5 Howard Stevens and 5-6 Rufus Ferguson will still sneak in there on guts and quickness — just as a decade ago Charley Tolar played fullback for the Houston Oilers at 5-7.

Can you remember way back when there was this unreal character who called himself Evel Knievel?

OFFICIALS SIDESTEP LOCKER ROOM ISSUE

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Officials at the University of Washington have sidestepped the issue of women's equality in the Husky football locker room.

Christine Swanson, sports editor of the University of Washington Daily, said earlier this week she planned to enter the locker room following today's game with Oregon — as other writers have been doing for years.

An athletic department spokesman said the officials' response was fear that a woman entering the male sanctuary might create a "circus atmosphere."

They consulted the state attorney general's office and decided to bar all writers, male and female, from the locker room.

Instead officials decided to set aside a room where the players will be brought for interviews — after they are fully clothed.

Hunter, Brock, Marshall, Burroughs Picked

Combined AP & UPI

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Slugger Jeff Burroughs, base-stealing king Lou Brock, relief ace Mike Marshall and 25-game winner Jim (Catfish) Hunter have been named the major league Players of the Year by the Sporting News. The announcement was made here yesterday.

Burrough of Texas, raised his average 22 points to .301 and increased his run production from 85 to 118 in 1974.

Brock, 35, sparked the St. Louis offense by stealing 118 bases, a major league record. He broke Maury Wills' single-season mark of 105 and Max Carey's National League career record of 738.

Marshall led Los Angeles' drive to the World Series and became the first reliever to win the N.L. pitching honors from Sporting News. He appeared in 13 straight games in one stretch and finished with 106 appearances. Marshall had 15 wins and 21 saves.

Hunter is considered one of the steadiest performers in baseball. He hasn't won fewer than 20 games in a season since he was 18-14 in 1970.

Football

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Rams yesterday signed quarterback Don Milan, a free agent who has had tryouts with Oakland and Kansas City, to back up James Harris and Ron Jaworski.

Boxing

Golf

NAGOYA, Japan — Veteran Japanese pro Kosaku Shimada today fired a five-under-par 67 to grab a four-stroke lead at 205 over Lee Trevino and Japanese pro Teruo Sugihara in the third round of the $133,000 Tokai Classic International Open Golf Tournament.

SYDNEY — Heckling anti-aparthied demonstrators failed to stop South Africa's Gary Player from taking a one-stroke lead in today's third round of the $45,500 Wills Masters Golf Tournament. Player shot a two under par 70 for a six-under-par 210 after 54 holes played at the Australian Golf Club.

Tennis

TEHRAN, Iran — Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina yesterday beat American Brian Gottfried 6-4, 6-4 and defending champion Raul Ramirez of Mexico defeated Britain's Roger Taylor 6-3, 6-4 in the quarter-final men's single round of the $100,000 Aryamehr Tennis Tournament.

DEESIDE, Wales — Great Britain yesterday took an unbeatable 4-0 lead in the best-of-seven Wightman Cup Tennis Competition when Lesley Charles and Sue Mappin defeated Americans Janet Newberry and Sue Nagelson 4-6, 6-2, 6-1 in a doubles match.

Car Racing Slated At Sears Point

There will be at least 18 local drivers among the expected 300-plus entries competing Nov. 2 and 3 at Sears Point International Raceway.

At that time, the San Francisco Region of the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) concludes its 1974 road racing season with a six-race Regional Championship event plus a four-hour Endurance Race.

Twenty-three drivers will be crowned class champions of a seven-race Regional Series that began last April at Sears Point.

The Marin County and Petaluma drivers include:

RETIRED 49ER QUARTERBACK

Brodie Maintains Desire For Competitive Football

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Brodie still gets the itch to fling the football in competition even though he retired last year after 17 seasons in a San Francisco 49ers uniform.

"I would like to be playing sometimes," the veteran quarterback said, "because I've forgotten the unpleasant things of the past games."

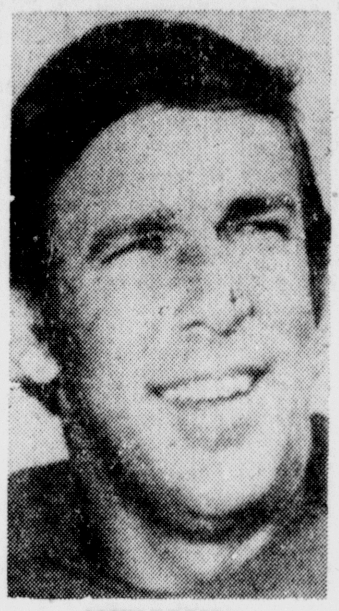
The 39-year-old Brodie, now a color sportscaster for NBC television, said he would like a job resembling the one now held by George Blanda of the Oakland Raiders. "Oakland was smart enough to know how he can contribute to its cause," he said.

Brodie said he could not return to fulltime playing because "I ran out of enthusiasm." To play pro ball, he explained, "it takes one's whole self to be good."

Brodie made the comments in discussing his new book "Open Field," which he wrote in collaboration with James D. Houston.

The Stanford product said it still thrills him to watch pro ball.

"I get my enjoyment out of people coordinating perfectly," he said. And he added, it appeared the game was getting technically better and better every game.



JOHN BRODIE
He has forgotten

Brodie was asked his thought about the future of the World Football League.

"I hope it lasts," he said. "There are more good football players than there are teams. It's just great to have more teams."

Asked whether some coaches were becoming too militaristic or too impersonal, he said, "Coaches are people. They fluctuate from team to team. Some put too much into it. The people who are communicating — they are the ones who are winning."

Brodie now spends two or three days a week in fund raising for a Center for the Treatment of Narcotics Offenders in Palo Alto.

"That's very rewarding," he said. "It should be made available to other areas. Last year, 175 persons passed through the center, and 130 received a big, stable change."

In "Open Field," Brodie tells about how he started his football career in high school, how he starred at Stanford and how he launched his National Football League career with the Niners. He also relates his rivalry with Y. A. Tittle and the anxiety caused by rookie signal-callers on the Niners.

He also discusses how he used the drug dexamyl to such an extent to counteract a sore arm that he virtually became addicted to it.

Only through Scientology, he said, was he able to stop using dexamyl and do away with the soreness in his arm.

Old Spark In Rivalry Is Gone For 49ers, Raiders

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders and San Francisco 49ers both need a win tomorrow in their cross-bay battle at Candlestick Park, but the old spark in the rivalry seems to have been extinguished.

Even exhibition games between the National Football League rivals used to overflow stadiums but there were 500 tickets left for tomorrow's meeting at last count, which means it won't even be on local TV.

Says Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler: "There's no rivalry. We've just got to win. It's another step toward the Super Bowl."

"If there was a big rivalry," adds Raider safety Jack Tatum, "it has cooled, at least for me. We play each other every season in the exhibition. We want to win because we want to get to the championship not because it's the 49ers."

San Francisco will start rookie Tom Owen, who sparkled in the second half of last Sunday's disaster against Los Angeles, at quarterback. But if Owen can't cut the mustard, veteran Norm Snead, obtained this week from the New York Giants, might be rushed into action.

The Raiders would seem to have the advantage over the 49ers in the quarterback and the pass rush departments since the 49ers can't seem to get much of an inside rush.

The 49ers are two-touchdown underdogs even though they lost by only one point in an exhibition.

Redwood Booters Shut Out Novato

Redwood shut out Novato, 4-0, and two other games ended in ties yesterday in Marin County Athletic League soccer action

Manny Natsios scored two goals to pace the undefeated Giants to their 10th victory of the season and a two and one-half game lead over second place Terra Linda, which tied Drake yesterday, 0-0. Tamalpais and San Rafael played to a 2-2 tie.

Standings — Redwood, 10-0; Terra Linda, 6-1-3; San Marin, 5-3-2; Tamalpais, 4-4-2; Drake, 3-4-3; Novato, 3-5-2; San Rafael, 1-8-1; Marin Catholic, 1-8-1.

Infield Veteran Is Released By Champion A's

OAKLAND (UPI) — The World Champion Oakland A's yesterday released veteran infielder John Donaldson and added three minor leaguers to their 40-man roster.

Donaldson spent most of the 1974 season at the A's Tucson farm club in the Pacific Coast League. He appeared in 10 games for Oakland and hit .133.

The youngsters called up were pitchers William Van Bommel and Michael Barlow from Tucson and infielder Chester Lemon from Birmingham of the Southern Association.

Van Bommel had a 6-9 record and a 5.17 earned run average, while Barlow was 4-7 with a 2.63 era. Lemon hit .290 in 79 games with 10 homers and 61 runs batted in.

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Gloom Pervades Declining Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — A darkening economic outlook sent investors back to the sidelines on the New York Stock Exchange this week, and gave the arket another substantial decline.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.69 to 636.19. The widely followed average of 30 selected blue-chip stocks lost 33.63 points after climbing 14.94 Monday in a session marked by short covering.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, a broader indicator than the Dow, plunged 2.16 to 70.12. the NYSE common stock index lost 1.01 to 37.07.

The loss was a broad one. Declines far outnumbered advances, 1,207 to 563, among the 1,996 issues traded. Only 20 issues made new highs, while 92 registered new lows for the year.

Volume lightened on the decline. The turnover totaled 75,178,480 shares, compared with 82,887,875 the week before and 80,738,252 during the same week a year ago.

On Tuesday, the Commerce Department reported durable goods orders fell 6.4 per cent in September, the sharpest drop in six-and-one-half years.

The same day, the Labor Department reported the Con-

WEEK IN BUSINESS

sumer Price Index rose 1.2 per cent in September, or 12.1 per cent higher than a year ago.

The week before, the government reported the Gross National Product declined in the third quarter by 2.9 per cent and inflation rose to 11.5 per cent on an annual basis. It marked the third consecutive quarterly decline.

Many define a recession as two consecutive quarterly declines in the GNP, but the government insisted the nation was not in a recession. The Ford administration said it was "stagflation" and the economy was "waffling" sideways.

However, Paul McCracken, an unofficial presidential adviser and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said this week it was time to call "a spade a spade." He said the nation was in a recession which would become sharp and last through mid-1975. Then there will be a sharp recovery, he said.

There was other news — some encouraging and some discouraging. And it left investors perplexed.

Ford, which announced plans to lay off 950 employees at six plants next week, was fifth active, falling 4⅜ to 30⅛ on 672,800 shares.

Chrysler, which is making cutback plans, was seventh most active, off ¾ to 10¼ on 569,700 shares.

ROCK FOR LUNCH — A sparse but lively noontime crowd at Sonoma State College boogies and whirls to the music of a local rock band (far right). Although students voted to eliminate student fees paid each semester to support activities, more than 40 performing arts events are scheduled this fall. Bands almost every Wednesday and Friday for free. (Photos by Bob Hax)

BAND ON THE LAWN — Living up to the Joni Mitchell song, "Playin' Real Good for Free," Kid Kahoutek and the Shooting Stars work through a lunch hour set at Sonoma State College. Rock concerts go on at the school most Wednesdays and Fridays, with bands donating their time and talents, and the fall schedule of performing arts events is packed despite the absence of activities funds from the college.

It Is Lively At Sonoma State

By ERNEST MURPHY

Despite the fact there have been no fees to support student activities since 1970, Sonoma State College these days is a very lively place.

More than 40 performing arts events are scheduled this semester. And there is something for almost every taste — from mime Robert Shields to African, Indian or contemporary music.

Dozens of campus organizations put on enough lectures, forums, festivals, picnics, dances and rallies to keep the campus' wall-sized bulletin boards plastered thickly with posters and announcements.

How do only 5,700 students keep so many things going on without money from the college?

"It's taken a while for people to understand that you can do something without having a guaranteed source of funds," says Rand Link, assistant director of the Student Resource Center (current jargon for what used to be called a student activity center on most campuses).

Since the student body voted to eliminate the $9 fee each student paid each semester to support activities, only one area has really suffered: athletics.

The fee had financed intercollegiate sports at Sonoma State, and when it was eliminated, sports struggled along, living on contributions from individuals and groups of boosters in the surrounding communities.

Sonoma finally got out of the sports game altogerher this year when it dropped its membership in the Far-western conference. For two years in a row the college's basketball team had captured the league championship, but even that didn't seem to help.

As Link explained it: "We were in an untenable situation — you just can't fund athletics on an unstable foundation."

When the school announced it was leaving the conference, cries of anguish from the student population were notable mostly by their absence. Grumbling can still be heard in the communities of Marin and Sonoma, however, and campus officials worry that the downfall of athletics may weaken the schools' relationship with nearby towns.

But other student activities are thriving on the Rohnert Park campus.

There are two student newspapers, the Morning Glory and The Key, both self-supporting and published off campus.

While state officials are deciding whether to begin funding day care centers on campuses so the increasing number of students with children can study without distraction, Sonoma State student parents set up My School, a center of their own.

They support the day care facility with their own money, and recently The Inn of the Beginning, rock music hall in nearby Cotati, put on a benefit for the school.

All around the campus are similar examples of do-it-yourself fund raising, the recent appearane of physician-activist Dr. Benjamin Spock, for instance, was a fund raiser for the political science club.

One of the most popular fund raising stunts is the film showing. Link estimates there's a film being shown nearly every night by some organization. They run the gamut from foreign classics to recent domestic offerings such as "Paper Moon" and "A Clockwork Orange."

Larry Snyder, director of the Center for Performing Arts which sponsors most of the cultural events on campus, explained that the crowded cultural calendar is supported completely through its box office receipts.

"We've been lucky," Snyder said. "in that often the receipts from one program pay for another."

Even though admission charges play such a vital role, in the support of the performing arts on the campus, they are kept reasonable: Normally, student admission is $1 and others pay $2. Sometimes, as in the case of Shields, the popular mime, $3 is charged, but not often.

The performing arts season at Sonoma State combines "imported" talent with performances by faculty, students and community residents.

Snyder is working with several area institutions, including the College of Marin, to form a group booking system to make more top-quality concert performers available to local audiences.

By being able to offer concert artists a series of nearby engagements, lower rates can be obtained for individual appearances. It is buying performances wholesale, so to speak.

Next Semester, probably in January, Sonoma State will get some outside money because the state legislature has approved a $2.6 million assistance package for "instructionally-related activities" at the 19 state colleges and universities.

Carl Campbell, public affairs director at Sonoma State, said Sonoma probably will receive about $50,000 to $60,000.

That's hardly enough to finance a new athletic program, most officials admit, although there's nothing to prevent its being used for sports since fundable activities include radio and television, forensics, art, music and dance, student publications, and athletics.

Campbell said the college administration will decide how to pass out Sonoma State's share of the state money. Officials have asked students what programs they want funded, although student interest so far has been slight.

When Dean of Students Robert Joseph recently asked students to come to a meeting to discuss how the money should be spent, only 14 showed up.

Now William Carr, director of the Student Resource Center, is designing a questionnaire to find out what students think.

Normally a campus has a student government whose chief function is to make such decisions.

But at Sonoma State, the students disbanded their government in the same referendum election which abolished activity fees.

Bridge District Shelves Plans For Sausalito Ferry Terminal

Bridge district directors yesterday referred new plans for the facility back to the council for its reaction. The new design is for a much simpler terminal than originally planned. It calls for a concrete-topped wooden pier and a small ticket and waiting area ashore. Total price, including design, construction and land, is estimated at $2.5 million.

Bridge district board last month shelved terminal plans indefinitely in the face of opposition from Sausalito officials and residents.

But architect Roland B. Mays, whose firm already has been paid $144,000 for the two terminal designs, yesterday urged the bridge board to let him complete the engineering work for the facility. With that done, the terminal will be ready to go to bid if the bridge district ever decides to build it, he argued.

However, several bridge directors said yesterday they don't want to do any more work on the Sausalito terminal unless the city drops its opposition. (Sausalito officials have said they don't want a terminal unless the bridge district lets the city control the number of passengers carried on its new ferries. The bridge district has refused to do so.

San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini clearly speaking the majority view, said the engineering would be "a waste of money if Sausalito doesn't want the terminal."

One of the few comments on the design came from Sausalito City Councilman Sally Stanford, who objected to leaving the "old ratty-looking piers" from the old ferry slip. Mays said the northern set of old pilings would be left intact to protect the Sausalito Yacht Club from the ferry wake and prevent becalmed sailboats from drifting into the ferry landing.

City Councilman Robin Sweeny differed with Miss Stanford, observing she like the old pilings. "That's about par for the course in Sausalito," interjected Miss Stanford.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

SONOMA — Adopted a 35-cent adult fare for all intracounty bus trips in Sonoma County. Commuter patronage from Sonoma is up 15 per cent since 11 new buses ere added to the fleet of 31 serving the county's commuters, the district staff reported.

FERRY — Received staff report that the first of the three new ferries being built in San Diego is expected to arrive in the bay Dec. 7.

STORAGE — Agreed to pay up to $15,370 a month to store the second and third new ferries at the San Diego shipyard building them, with delivery set by the end of March, 1976 when the Larkspur Ferry terminal will be ready for use.

Woman Robbed At College

Nancy Ullner of San Rafael was knocked down and robbed of $1.27 yesterday while walking on the College of Marin campus, according to sheriff's deputies.

She told officers a man hit her in the face, knocking her to the ground, grabbed her money and fled.

She described her assailant as about 5 feet, 5 inches tall, 170 to 180 pounds, with dark brown hair and heavy, bushy eyebrows.

The robbery occurred shortly before 3 p.m.

Dean Quits Clubs

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Western singer Jimmy Dean has decided to quit nightclub appearances so he can spend more time with his family.

Mystery Blast Rocks Santa Venetia

A mysterious explosion that rocked the Santa Venetia area last night has Marin County sheriff's deputies baffled.

The blast was heard at 10:24 p.m. by hundreds of persons in the vicinity of North San Pedro Road, Birch Street and Mabry Way.

The department's switchboard was flooded with calls but no one saw anything and no damage was reported.

Investigators have ruled out the possibility of a sonic boom and are sticking to the theory that the explosion was caused by a large firecracker or similar bomb-like device.

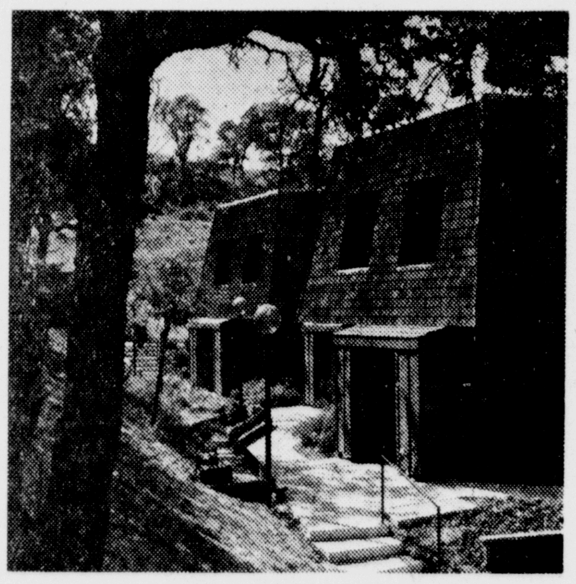
A Grand and Sensible Opening.



$31,500
For the money, it's the biggest town house in Marin.

It's true. Western Oaks is opening a new unit of two-story, 1024 square foot town houses for only $31,500. Possible because construction began before building costs started to sky-rocket. 1975 buyers won't be so lucky.

This town home has lots of liveable space. A large living room, separate dining area, big master bedroom, good-sized second bedroom and 1½ baths.

One thing that isn't big about Western Oaks is our financing cost (9¼%) and our closing costs ($375). With a down payment of $3150, your monthly payment on the loan is $233. Plus $25 for the homeowner's fee and insurance and $60 for taxes.

Western Oaks has all of the qualities that makes a Marin home coveted. A lovely country setting. Superb vistas of the surrounding hills and oaks through sliding glass doors in each town house. And a handsome clubhouse and pool, almost completed, atop a high knoll with a view clear to Black Point Forest.

Live in Marin—sensibly. Our newly decorated model is now ready and full of fresh ideas that you can use in your own home. It's open daily except Tuesday noon to 5. Weekends 11 to 6. Just seconds off the freeway in Novato. Take 101 to the Rowland exit, then west to Redwood Blvd.

SELLING MARIN SINCE 1919

NOVATO. Quit paying rent. Begin by finding this one level home in a neat-as-a-pin Novato location. Freshly painted 3 bedroom home, near schools & good commute. Fenced yard. How about a price of only $32,500? Eves. 883-6727.

SAN MARIN. A superb G.I. loan can be assumed! See this spotless home with nearly new carpets thruout, tile entry, beautiful use of wallpaper thruout, the 3 bdrms., 2 baths and family room. On a quiet circle, close to schools. See the large, level yard with room for swiming pool, play yard, patios, etc. One of a kind when you remember this G.I. loan! Eves. 883-6727. $53,500.

WOODACRE. Be the first owner. It's brand new and waiting — your opportunity to have a 3 bdrm., 2 bath home on one of Woodacre's most delightful sites. Natural landscaping with big rocks and beautiful trees. See the stone fireplace, big family room, elec. kitchen and spacious level yard. Eves. 456-3835. $52,000.

SAN ANSELMO. Total privacy. Want a home with lots of land? Then see this "king of the hill". A view of 3 counties and total privacy — it's the only house on the road. 3 bdrms., 2 baths, swimming pool. It's out of this world! And you can move right in. Eves. 454-9297. $72,950.

HOME OF THE WEEK

WANT A COLONIAL? See this Ross custom built 2 level home. It's 11 years old and has the most beautiful private garden and swimming pool. It was designed by Steinmetz with beautiful trees and lots of parking. This gracious home has 4 bdrms., dining room, family room, 3½ baths. It's spotless and perfect. The rooms are big enough for your largest antiques. It's ½ acre! For the discriminating buyer! Eves. 456-3835. $150,000.

SLEEPY HOLLOW. Something special. Dutch doors greet you as you enter this lovely home. Nice and light living room, great family room with plank floors, fireplace, wet bar and skylight for hanging plants. There's a beautiful woodsy outlook — just like a private park. Terrific wallpapers and decor thruout. Laundry, workshop, storage room, 4 bdrms. and 2½ baths. Lots of appeal! $91,500. Eves. 454-3434.

GREENBRAE. New! Just completed this week — super quality construction by Broughton and Horne and designed by Dave Coleman to take advantage of the lovely bay and Mt. Tam views from one of the presttiest lots in Greenbrae. It has a pool site and huge old oak trees. There's a spacious living room with cathedral windows, hardwood floors, heavy beams and a massive stone fireplace. Separate dining room, large kitchen with dining area and views and decks all around. The bathrooms are out of House Beautiful. There are 4 large bdrms. and family room. Be the first to see! Eves. 456-3835. $132,500.

SAN RAFAEL COUNTRY CLUB. Your own park on this beautiful acre in prestigious Country Club. A great family home custom built for these proud owners. Spacious floor plan with 3 bdrms., 2½ baths, family room and formal dining room, 3 fireplaces including one in the "indoor-outdoor" room add to the warmth of this charming home. A very peaceful setting with a lovely view. Eves. 479-5134. $125,000.

BOLINAS. It's unique. A luxury beach home or retreat with matchless view of S.F. and the Golden Gate Bridge. Absolute privacy on 311 ft. of your own ocean frontage. A 4000 sq. ft. luxury home in top condition. ¾ acre with fabulous tile swimming pool, beautiful landscaping and a security fence. Let us show you — by appt. It's paradise! Eves. 454-3434. $325,000.

LOW PRESSURE SYSTEM

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration satellite photo made at 9:53 a.m. yesterday shows a low pressure system centered over Western Washington with showers over the center. Mid and high level clouds extend northward from Baja, Cal., to Western Nevada. Extensive low clouds cover the Oregon and Northern California coasts.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Is A Good, Juicy Steak The Best Fare For Athlete?

Thick, juicy steaks have almost always been a training table staple. The rationale being the red meat was a surefire way to develop strength and endurance. Although the theory has not been scientifically confirmed, most coaches and trainers believe that there is a corollary between good red meat and athletic stamina.

What then constitutes good nutrition for an athlete? There is little if any difference between the nutritional needs of athletes and non-athletes. Both groups need ample fluids and adequate amounts of food. During training and competition, more calories are needed because these furnish the energy athletes need.

Someone has yet to prove that any fluid is superior to water, the most basic of all nutrients. Making up water losses as the athlete goes along also help to avoid dehydration. Extra salt is a must on hot days or when the activity causes excessive sweating.

Athletic sports requiring a high energy expenditure call for more food. More important, muscle tissues require oxygen;in return they give off carbon dioxide (through breathing) and water (through sweating). Muscle tissue runs on fats and sugars (carbohydrates) and tends to hang on to proteins. Thus, enormous amounts of meat are an unnecessary part of the diet.

Nutritional requirements of an athlete depend on the energy cost of the sport. To illustrate, dietary needs for short, intense efforts are not as great as for long distance events. Food plays a lesser role in single efforts such as pole vaulting or discus throwing. Food demands and quick energy costs are greater in sprinters, middle distance runners, water polo, or the marathon. And in this order.

A high jumper's overall caloric cost may be as low as 3,000 calories; a long distance runner expends 6,000 calories. Quick-energy foods are needed for short-term events, and while sugar is supposed to do this, we have no scientific proof that it does.

Athletes generally do better by eating more than three medium-size meals a day. Participants of short effort sports should eat 4 hours before the event. Milers can eat their last mean closer to the starting time if they eat the faster-digested carbohydrates.

DUCK WADDLE

G. T. writes: What causes a duck waddle stance?

REPLY

Persons who have neurological conditions involving balance walk with the legs far apart to maintain stability. In children, a severe duck waddle gait usually means dislocation of both hips.

HARDENED AORTA

J. B. writes: According to recent heart X-rays, I have calcification of the aorta. Does this mean that arteriosclerosis or hardening of the arteries is closing up this passageway? Incidentally, doctor, I am 79 years old.

REPLY

No. The aorta, the largest blood vessel in the body, is one of the first to harden. But like the rusty old pipe, there is no harm so long as blood continues to flow through it.

SUN AND X-RAYS

E. M. B. writes: I am going to Florida for a couple of weeks and wondered if staying in the sun will help to eliminate the radiation from recent X-rays?

REPLY

No. The rays go through the body, they do not remain.

CHILLS, NOT FLASHES

T. W. writes: Do some women get chills instead of hot flashes during the menopause?

REPLY

Not as a rule, but a woman could develop an infection that brings on chills.

DISEASED GALLBLADDER

E. J. writes: I have a chronically diseased gallbladder. Should I follow a special diet or have it removed surgically?

REPLY

Many physicians feel it is best to remove a diseased gallbladder, especially if it contains stones. Doing so eliminates a potential source of infection that could spread to the liver. Conversely, many people live to a ripe old age with a battle-scarred gallbladder, stones and all. The decision to go in for surgery often depends upon the degree of discomfort the organ is causing. If you decide to let things ride, avoid fatty and fried food because they bring on distriess. Chenodeoxycholic acid, a new product that dissolves gallstones, is promising, but may not correct the problem.

San Rafael, air quality yesterday:
Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, light air pollution.
Smoke particles, light air pollution.

Other areas:
San Francisco, light air pollution.
San Jose, significant air pollution.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources.

San Francisco Bay Area: Considerable cloudiness through tomorrow with chance of showers decreasing tonight. Little temperature change; highs mid 60s to low 70s; west to southwest winds to 15 m.p.h.; chance of rain 10 per cent tomorrow; low tonight at San Francisco 55 Oakland Airport 54 Redwood City 52.

Sierra Nevada: Variable cloudiness with chance of rain or snow showers through tomorrow, colder tonight and tomorrow with snow level in showers 8000 or 9000 feet.

Napa and Sonoma Valleys and Santa Rosa Plain: Considerable cloudiness through tomorrow with chance of showers decreasing tonight; little temperature change; low tonight and high tomorrow at Santa Rosa 45 68; winds southerly 5 to 15 m.p.h.

Redd Foxx Becomes A Sheriff

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (UPI) — Television actor Redd Foxx, wearing bleached blue jeans and a denim jacket, was sowrn in yesterday as chief of police of the all-black Taft community.

District Judge Bill Haworth gave Foxx the oath of office during an intermission in a jury trial.

Foxx, star of the "Sanford and Son" television series, said he would try to spend as much time as possible in Taft, a community of about 500 persons. He said he wants to establish recreational facilities for the town's youth and develop a museum.

Mayor Leigh Foley appointed Foxx to the chief's post, which has been vacant for several years. No badge goes with the office, just a commission card.

The swearing in ceremony was witnessed mostly by courthouse employees, who apparently were the only people aware of the TV star's visit. He was swamped by autograph seekers after the ceremony.

Angela May Teach At State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Angela Davis, who was acquitted of charges resulting from the 1970 Marin County courthouse shoot-out, has made inquiries about a part-time teaching position at San Francisco State University.

John Sloane, associated dean of the School of Behavioral and Social Sciences, said he would consider her as a possible candidate to teach philosophy or psychology.

Miss Davis was fired in 1968 by the University of California Board of Regents from her job as an instructor of philosophy at UCLA because she was a member of the American Communist Party.

A judge, two San Quentin Prison convicts and a young man who smuggled weapons to the inmates were killed in the shoot-out Miss Davis had been charged with murder, kidnap and conspiracy.

BART Board Intends To Sue

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Board of Directors of the Bay Area Rapid Transit has confirmed its intention to sue four of the system's suppliers, including Rohr Industries, Inc., of Chula Vista.

Rohr supplied BART trains on a $150 million contract.

The other firms are Westinghouse Electric Co.; Bulova Watch Co., and Parsons-Brinckerhoff-Tudor-Bechtel, an engineering combine.

The directors Thursday unanimously adopted a motion "not to change the board's decision" to sue after listening to Rohr counsel Robert Heidrick who asked that the issue be negotiated further.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Oct. 26, the 299th day of 1974 with 66 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars, Saturn and Mercury. The evening star is Jupiter.

American gospel singer Mahalia Jackson was born Oct. 26, 1912.

On this day in history:

In 1825, the Erie Canal, America's first man-made waterway, was opened for traffic between Buffalo and Albany, N.Y.

In 1920, the Lord Mayor of Cork, Terence McSwiney, died after fasting 75 days in the British prison cell, demanding independence for Ireland.

In 1942, the American aircraft carrier "Hornet" was sunk by Japanese warships in a fierce naval engagement off the Solomon Islands in the Pacific Theater of World War II.

In 1972, Igor Sikorsky, developer of the first practical helicopter, died at the age of 83.

A thought for the day: Irish poet Thomas Moore said, "Ask a woman's advice and whate'er she advises, do the very reverse and you're sure to be wise."

Opening lead — ♠ Q

LEAD TO DUMMY

When this hand was played South won the first trick with the king of spades and led a trump to dummy's nine in order to return a diamond toward his king. It was a good idea, but not good enough.

West won with the ace of diamonds and shrewdly returned a trump. Dummy's ten held, and declarer led another diamond from the dummy. His jack lost to the queen, and back came another trump, removing the last trump from dummy.

Now there was no way for South to make the contract. He had to lose three diamonds and a club.

FAVORABLE LEAD

South had received a favorable opening lead, and he should have taken advantage of it. A trump lead would have beaten him, but the actual lead gave South the chance to ruff a diamond in dummy.

After winning the first trick with the king of spades, South should lead a diamond from his hand. It goes against the grain to lead away from strength, but this play guarantees the contract.

Since there are still three trumps in the dummy, South is sure to win the race. He can win a trump return and lead a second diamond. Back comes a trump, but South wins in his own hand and ruffs the last diamond. Time enough, then, to get back to the South hand and draw the last trump.

The Editor's Notebook

Difficult Dilemma Of Inflation-Recession

INFLATION IS full upon us. We know it when we go to the grocery store, to the restaurant. We know it every time we must purchase goods or services. We are reminded of it every time we pick up a newspaper or hear a news broadcast. Even our tax bills reflect it.

On the other hand, we are threatened with recession. High government officials in Washington are mostly not ready to admit we face recession. "Downturn," they call it. The man who served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon administration, now that he is out of government, says it's recession.

ELLIOT JANEWAY, financial columnist, says the way to combat inflation is simple. Just buy less and save more. In other words, cut out non-essentials and make sure you shop for a bargain when you buy essentials.

The Bank of America's chief economist says the same thing in different words: "Encourage savings, demand far greater fiscal discipline."

The battle against inflation, he says, is a "common-sense discipline fight." By that he seems to mean that each of us must discipline himself to do without luxuries (as distinguished from our basic needs for shelter, nourishment and clothing).

Janeway says each of us should have cash in a savings account equal to six months' income — to be ready to face the economic uncertainties of the immediate future.

ON THE OTHER hand, the president of Chrysler Corp. has said: "We need a restoration of consumer confidence. Washington has told everyone not to buy and this 'don't buy' philosophy is hurting us.

"The recession is already here in the auto industry and in the country," said the Chrysler executive, adding, "The problem in the auto industry is serious and getting deeper."

Talk with a stockbroker. He'll tell you that what is principally wrong with stock prices is simply lack of confidence.

Franklin D. Roosevelt said it in those memorable words uttered at the very depths of the great depression of the early 1930s: "All we have to fear is fear itself."

OBVIOUSLY WE are caught between a rock and a hard place.

If we don't follow the advice of those who share the views of President Ford (which Chrysler President Lynn Townsend calls the "don't buy" philosophy), we are in danger of being totally engulfed in runaway inflation even worse than what we have thus far seen.

If we do follow the advice to discipline ourselves when it comes to spending less and saving more, we may be accelerating recession.

In short, we are damned if we do and damned if we don't.

FOR MANY OF US in Marin — with substantially above national average incomes and education, etc. — recession is still something we only think about.

We tend to think it is something that involves stock prices, corporation profit-and-loss statements, and perhaps some layoffs for those with less education and limited skills. But we don't feel it under our own private, personal roofs, so to speak.

Let's not be blind.

Take a look around the neighborhood.

NOT FAR from you, whatever your "good" neighborhood in Marin, you will find a situation we all wish just wasn't true.

You will find a person just like the rest of us, living rather too affluently, perhaps, but confident that tomorrow somehow income and expenses will work themselves into a little more prudent balance.

Nothing to worry about in the meantime, really. After all, the pay goes up every year and that makes it possible to keep head above water.

But on one recent day the axe fell.

After 25 years' diligent service to the company, recognized now by a vice presidency and generous emolument, the fellow we speak of (whom you will find not far away in your own neighborhood) just got word that the company must lay him off.

Business hasn't been too good lately. Prospects aren't bright for an early return to prosperity. It's clear that the company must take some rather drastic action to protect itself and its stockholders. Expenditures simply must be cut.

"Sorry, old boy, but we are going to have to eliminate your position."

Thus it is that there is a home in your neighborhood where the head of the house, now past 50, faces loss of job and loss of income.

THAT'S NOT just recession. That's genuine depression, 1930 style.

He and his family must get out of the big, expensive-to-maintain house and find a more modest place.

Trouble is, the housing market is "soft," what with excessively high interest rates and a "don't buy" philosophy. He may be lucky to sell his house in a quick, forced situation for a little more than he owes on it. The equity he thought he was building up may suddenly disappear.

Next month, the property tax bill will be due, and after the first of the year, there will be income taxes — payable on last year's income but no current income with which to pay.

For those among us in such circumstances, the future is bleak.

EXPERTS IN government and out seem generally agreed that the upturn will not come until the middle of next year.

Those of us whose memory extends back to shiver depression of the 1930s shiver a bit when we hear that. We are reminded how often we heard in 1930: "Prosperity is just around the corner."

It took the preparations for World War II to get us out of it then, about a decade later.

We pray that today's experts are not so far wrong as the experts of 1930.

—Jack Craemer

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Dismayed, Disgusted At Smoking Permission

It is with great dismay and much disgust that I read the article in your paper of Oct. 16, regarding the treatment of students who smoke at the Middle School in Mill Valley. What permissiveness!

How could the board and Superintendent Palches condone such a thing? When we are constantly being reminded of the dangers of smoking, how can our high-priced educators take a stand to encourage the same?

Oh, for the good old days when we had Bob McConnell as superintendent and people like Daryll Hopkins and Betty Grimm as principals, plus men like Bob Andresen on the board! We had a school district then.

This recent decision makes me happy to be leaving the area and know that no more of my tax dollar will go to support this mismanaged school district. For this incompetency they are asking the voters to approve a tax increase?

Tuolumne Supervisor Misinformed On Stanislaus

The supervisor of Tuolumne County who wrote in urging a "no" vote on Proposition 17 (I-J, Oct. 21), on the grounds that it would save the Stanislaus River, was apparently misinformed.

A dam on the river would flood 100,000 acres of wildlife — that's salvation?

The "recreational mecca" created by the dam would attract more boaters (aren't Clear Lake and Lake Berryessa enough of a disaster?) which would increase pollution in the river — pollution which is already caused by irrigation runoffs from farms along the river and which could be stopped by stricter sewage controls.

Although Proposition 17 states that the river be put into the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act it does provide for an effective flood control dam one-fifth the size of the New Melones project. A "yes" vote would provide the needed flood control . . .

On the contrary, a "yes" vote will save the river.

Conservation League Pleased With Coverage

On behalf of the Marin Conservation League, I want to express my deepest thanks to the Independent Journal for the splendid feature stories and news articles published during the past month.

Our 40th anniversary was greatly enhanced by the fine articles written by Independent Journal reporters. We appreciate the amount of space you gave, but most of all we appreciate the fine quality and the substantive professional journalism that was manifested.

Rebecca Larsen's two-part series on the league is the most trenchant story yet written about the league. When I read Mrs. Larsen's quotes of the statements I made to her, I was impressed with how intelligent she made me sound.

Putnam Livermore, Mrs. Sepha Evers, William Evers and Grace Wellman and many others were most pleased with your journalistic contribution to our 40th anniversary.

ART BUCHWALD

CBS Destroys Last Refuge Of The Male Chauvinist Pig

WASHINGTON — As everyone knows, I have always been in the forefront of the fight for women's liberation. My body is scarred from battling on the picket lines at the Miss American Pageant in Atlantic City and the Miss Universe Contest in Miami. As we say in the lib movement, "I've paid my dues."

Therefore, I believe I can deal with the following subject with complete objectivity. What on God's green Astroturf is a woman doing acting as a sports commentator during a professional football game?

LAST WEEK I turned on the Redskin-Giant game, leaned back in my chair with a beer in my hand and a bowl of potato chips at my feet. Suddenly I heard this strange voice on the air. It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS' Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided that the sound on my set had gone awry. But a few seconds later a very pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game.

I sat straight up in my seat. A woman doing color on TV? Didn't CBS have any shame at all?

How could a multibillion-dollar network invade the homes of 30 million beer-drinking, potato chip-eating, red-blooded American football fans with the voice of a girl?

LET US MAKE no mistake about this. Football watching is the last refuge of the Male Chauvinist Pig. We invented the game; we play it every Sunday — and Monday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday and Saturday (see your local paper for TV listings). It is our thing.

As nice as Ms. Chastain looks and as knowledgeable as she tried to be, she has no more business on a TV football game than Howard Cosell has on "The Waltons."

If I were to conjecture why CBS made this decision, I would have to guess that by assigning a woman announcer to a TV football game they were trying to attract a larger female audience. They were hoping to win over the wives or, as they are called, "widows" of the men who spend their week ends staring dumbly at their tubes.

THIS THINKING is not the way we do things in America. The role of the wife on Sunday afternoons is to make the beds, prepare the meals, drive the children somewhere, or take care of any relatives who might drop in unexpectedly.

Even if they wanted to, they don't have time to watch football. It is a cruel hoax on the part of the network to try to attract them to the TV screen when it knows women have so many more important things to do.

To show you the groveling they did last Sunday, CBS had Ms. Chastain interview Billie Jean King at half-time. The last thing American men want to see during a football half-time is an interview with Billie Jean King.

Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have no objection to women being airline pilots, truck drivers, senators and even President of the United States. They're entitled.

They can be doctors, lawyers, automobile mechanics, policemen, firemen and Indian chiefs. They can own banks, be in the numbers rackets and play Little League baseball if they want to.

The only place they don't belong is on a TV sportscast telling us male spectators things that they think we didn't know about football.

P.S. No abusive mail concerning this column will be answered.

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

Nelson Rockefeller knows now his grandfather had the right idea: The way to hand out money is in dimes.

Facing so many tough problems, President Ford and his aides can only dig in and roll up their sleeves — for inoculation against snakebite.

When does a problem become a crisis? When its victims fill out an application for federal aid.

Delay On Rockefeller Shows 25th Amendment's Weakness

NEW YORK — Before the Senate Rules Committee can reconsider the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller, three months will have passed. Then, with the turn of the House Judiciary Committee, it may be the end of the year or perhaps the new year and a new Congress when a vote on confirmation finally comes.

This means that for four months or longer the office of the vice presidency will be unfilled. In that interval, if an accident should befall President Ford, Speaker Carl Albert would inherit the office. Albert has made no secret of his own feeling of inadequacy and his sense of dread that such an accident might occur.

What this says about the 25th Amendment as a means for choosing a vice president hardly needs underscoring. It says something, too, about the workability of the system itself in a time of stress and strain with few parallels.

URGING SEN. Howard Cannon's rules committee to convene a session before the congressional recess so he could testify about the gifts disclosed in leaks to the press, Rockefeller was only too well aware of what had not been the subject of his interrogation in the first round of hearings.

The committee at the time was in possession of Rockefeller's income and gift tax returns and the 2,000 pages of FBI report. If members had chosen to question him then about these gifts, he would have made the formal statement that he sought in vain to put in the record under oath before the congressional recess.

Not so much committee members as committee staffers are believed to have leaked the information that has made daily headlines. As the former governor has noted, it is against the law both to disclose information from federal income tax returns and to publish it.

WITH THAT SQUARE jaw clamping down hard, there can be no doubt that Rockefeller intends to see this through. After all, as he says, he has been in the rough and tumble of politics for 34 years. And politics in New York state can be rough indeed.

The mix of money and politics is nothing new. It was a principal charge in the Democratic primary in 1960 when Hubert Humphrey accused John F. Kennedy of coming into West Virginia with an open-ended checkbook to win the delegate race. In 1972 the millions Richard Nixon spent for his re-election were a large factor in the scandal.

The difference in Rockefeller's case is his exceptional generosity, made possible by one of America's largest fortunes. The remarkable reach of his generosity with staffers and friends has little to do with politics.

An exception under another heading is the miserable Victor Lasky book about Arthur Goldberg, a meaningless superfluity since Rockefeller was certain to be re-elected governor in 1970. Political gimmicks by overzealous aides are often self-defeating.

THE BELIEF in Rockefeller's circle is that the leaks have run their course. Although one source is said to have obtained the entire bundle of material in the House Judiciary Committee files, it contains few, if any, important new disclosures.

The extent of the investigation is a commentary on the politics of the 25th Amendment. At one point, 400 FBI agents in this country and in South America were at work on the Rockefeller case, putting together that 2,000-page report containing every act and every gesture in the governor's political career.

What a contrast with Nixon's selection of Spiro Agnew with apparently no knowledge of his bribe-taking in Maryland, or George McGovern's selection of Sen. Thomas (Tom Who?) Eagleton after a single telephone inquiry!

IN THE LIGHT of what has happened to Rockefeller, who would be willing to undergo the ordeal of uncertainty, the piecemeal inquisition by leak?

Almost of necessity it would have to be someone who has never been in the arena; someone with no record whatsoever; someone who has never made a gift of any kind to anyone.

Rockefeller has been in the sweaty arena in a variety of offices since 1940. This background and experience eminently qualify him for the vice presidency. To hold him up for a morality never exacted of past political practitioners is not only hypocritical, but destructive of public service and a valuable public servant.

President Ford Displays Lack Of Political Perception

President Ford's encounter with the school busing problem in Boston is worth some detailed attention for the light it casts on what is probably Mr. Ford's biggest single problem as a political leader. He is not politically perceptive.

The episode took place within the setting of the Republican Party's relations to the black community. Those relations were almost nonexistent during the latter Nixon years. Mr. Nixon had made a calculated political decision to alienate the black vote for the sake of the "hard hat" vote. (This is an oversimplification but essentially true.)

MR. FORD TOOK office with a friendly gesture to the Black Caucus in the Congress. He invited them in for a chat. They came, talked, and went away feeling that their race was again welcome at the White House. A friendly relationship had been restored between the head of the Republican Party and the black community.

It was a short-lived repair. During his news conference Oct. 10, Mr. Ford quite properly deplored violence in Boston, but quite unnecessarily and indeed improperly went on to criticize the decision of the federal judge under which Boston is going through the throes of an extremely difficult and even dangerous desegregation effort.

It was an unnecessary criticism of a federal court order because it is not the responsibility of a president to disagree with a court decision. The president takes an oath to uphold the Constitution and support the laws. He may disapprove personally of some law. But particularly when human life is at stake, he should be meticulous in supporting the law.

Above all, he should not do or say anything to make law enforcement more difficult.

THE EXAMPLE of proper presidential conduct in such a case was provided by President Eisenhower. That president did not really like the desegregation decision of the Supreme Court of those times, the "Warren Court." He was personally unhappy about sending federal troops into Little Rock, Ark., to enforce desegregation there. But he did send in the federal troops. He did sustain the law.

Mr. Ford's criticism of the Boston desegregation order was received jubilantly among the white extremists of South Boston, who felt encouraged by it in their campaign of violent resistance to desegregation.

The two leading Republicans of Massachusetts were dismayed. They immediately urged the White House to repair the impression that the president was encouraging violence. Governor Sargent telephoned the White House. Sen. Edward Brooke wrote a letter urgently asking for a statement which could be used in Boston against those favoring violence.

The statement was provided. The president came out against violence, and left it at that.

But meanwhile, Boston's Democratic mayor, Kevin White, was seen on nationwide television declaring that President Ford has "encouraged false hopes and fanned the flames of resistance that will almost inevitably lead to further disruption in Boston."

MR. FORD WAS candid. He stated his personal dislike for busing as a means to desegregation. But by doing so, he injured his party wherever it seeks to regain a significant share of the black vote. The net of it was a minus for Republicans and a distinct advantage to the Democrats.

This is the third time Mr. Ford has done something which has hurt Republicans and helped Democrats.

The first, and most damaging, was the unconditional pardon, including the offer to give Mr. Nixon the tapes.

The second was taking an able professional out of the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and putting an untested and almost unknown woman in the job — two months before a midterm election in which many Republican candidates need every bit of help possible from their naational committee. Republicans running for office were horrified by both actions.

IN PALM DESERT

You Can See Where Patton Trained Tankers

By ELMER PETERSON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

PALM DESERT — Deserts heal slowly. The dry air and earth preserve things. Tin cans don't rust away; plants, once destroyed, take years to grow back.

In the California desert, you can still see where General Patton trained his tank soldiers for World War II.

That is why environmentalists and government officials are concerned about the onrush of dune-buggy enthusiasts, developers, and homeowners who see in the California desert an opportunity to escape from the smog and overcrowding of Los Angeles.

These new residents are bringing the problems of the city with them to this harsh region, once considered so brutal that only Indians and gold prospectors, familiar with its ways, attempted to brave the excessive summer heat.

Irrigation and air-conditioning have made what was uninhabitable habitable.

Now the desert has cities, towns, airports, and even industry. Each month, an estimated 50,000 persons discover it for the first time. By 1980, it is estimated that as many as 20 million persons will be using it annually. The count is now 9 million — double what it was five years ago.

In the Palm Springs area, where the late President Eisenhower spent his winters, the growth is phenomenal. The attraction here used to be winter golf, which lured the wealthy to build luxurious homes. Palm Springs itself was small, intimate, and much-patronized by Hollywood celebrities. Now Palm Springs has enormous mobile home compounds with their own golf courses and clubhouses. Condominiums of every size and description are under construction.

But a blunt warning comes from Dr. R. E. Taylor Jr., assistant director of the Dry-Lands Research Institute of the University of California at Riverside.

"There is a vital necessity . . . for studying the desert and planning its orderly development now before disaster strikes," says Dr. Taylor.

"You can't go messing up the dessert and have it recover the way non-arid regions do. The desert can be harmed, and harmed very quickly, by environmental degradation and incorrect use."

What's needed, aside from overall planning, is supervision. At the present time, to supervise its 12 million desert acres, the Bureau of Land Management has eight rangers. These men have no authority even to make arrests. The bureau wants more men, more authority, and more money, but Congress has been slow to react. When it comes to federal funding, the desert has to compete with cities, counties and states for clout.

Recently the bureau announced new regulations closing about 500,000 acres, or 3 per cent of the desert, to recreational vehicles. Another 960,000, acres, about 6 per cent, was opened for unrestricted use. And some 7,680,000 acres will be restricted in that dune buggies, motorcycles, and four-wheel-drive vehicles will have to use existing or designated roads and trails.

In announcing these rules, the bureau recognizes the need for a master plan for the desert, and is working for it with speed and efficiency.

The desert is not yet doomed. On the affirmative side, there is a study going on, the first of its kind, at the Philip L. Boyd Deep Canyon Research Center. There University of California scientists are conducting a 20-year inquiry into how best to protect and preserve desert environments. The plan is to find out how plants and animal life survive extremely arid conditions. The answers, it is predicted, will be a valuable guide to how present-day residents of the desert should conduct themselves.

One Deep Canyon discovery is that as more humans invade the desert, the more certain forms of plant, animal, and insect life are encouraged through increased humidity. Build golf courses, and you may encourage the rodent population. That, in turn, may lead to an increase in the number of coyotes.

"There's much to be learned from animals and insects and how they adapt to the desert," says Bill Jennings of the research center. "You seldom, for example, see ants during the daytime when desert summer temperatures are at their peak. They come out in the evening. If we can translate this sort of study into human experience, learning how to use the shade and wind to help keep cool, we can cut down on the use of electricity for air-conditioning, something that could be of great importance."

There is no reason to believe that the rush to the desert will diminish in the years ahead. It has become a place for motorcycle races — many unsupervised. Dune buggy enthusiasts are attracted to the desert's acres of sand dunes, a sort of natural roller coaster for these vehicles.

To the rockhounds and campers, the desert offers constant adventure. All these people insist that they have a right to explore the desert in their own fashion. There is simply the fact that the desert is there, wide open and tremendous.

"We can try to come to terms with the desert, meet it halfway at least," says Taylor. "For one thing, we can't go on trying to bury the natural desert with technology. We should try to adapt to it, not the other way around:

"By balancing things more; by using the native desert plants for landscaping, for example, instead of trying to make the desert look like New England and using up precious water in the process. By building houses with thick walls, low ceilings, and smaller windows — instead of high ceilings and view windows — thus requiring less air-conditioning and therefore less energy.

"It's a matter of accepting the desert more as it is, instead of trying to make it what we think it should be."

Windfall Profits: Venezuela Shows A Developing Model

By GUY HALVERSON

CARACAS, Venezuela — This affluent South American nation is quickly assembling what could become a model case on how a developing country handles windfall profits from oil exports.

The Venezuelan approach — a mixture of hardheaded pragmatism and traditional Latin American idealism — is twofold: Creation of a national investment agency empowered to bolster the local economy, particularly the industrial, housing, education, and agricultural sectors.

An investment of large amounts of cash reserves abroad.

The quadrupling of oil prices by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) has added a whopping $10 billion to Venezuela's budget this year, up from $3 billion during 1973. And the outlook for 1975 is another $10 billion.

Venezuela is the world's third largest oil producer and, next to Canada, the main supplier of overseas oil to the United States. Known holdings range up to 13.9 billion barrels — with the possibility of even more untapped reserves.

The Orinoco River tar-belt country in eastern Venezuela is estimated to contain up to 700 billion barrels of heavy oil, of which at least 10 per cent could be recovered by use of current technology.

For the government of President Carlos Andres Perez — controlled by the liberal Accion Democratica Party — the influx of funds has confronted policymakers with a dilemma: how to improve conditions for Venezuela's 12 million people without triggering greater inflation.

Use of the oil earnings is considered imperative. Venezuela despite its attractive environment, has major economic and social problems. Poverty is still a common condition for the majority of people.

"Venezuelan leaders know that they must tackle their widespread poverty now," says one foreign diplomat here. "This may well be their last opportunity."

Among the problems the government now faces:

One-third of the total national work force now is either unemployed, or underemployed.

Population growth, running at 3.5 per cent a year, is one of the continent's most serious troubles. More ominous, one-half of the population now is under 16 years of age, and will soon be in the permanent work force.

As the impoverished, ramshackle barrios surrounding Caracas vividly illustrate, housing remains a serious challenge. According to Arnoldo Jose Bagaldon, minister of public works, the current "housing deficit" for Venezuela is 500,000 units.

Last June the government established the Venezuelan Investment Fund (VIF), headed up by Carlos Guillermo Rangel, widely respected president of Fedecamaras, an important Venezuelan business association.

As now envisioned, the agency will be given roughly one-half of the nation's oil revenues — an amount that is expected to reach between $10 billion and $20 billion by 1980, according to some government officials.

You can save enough money at this adult community to retire on.

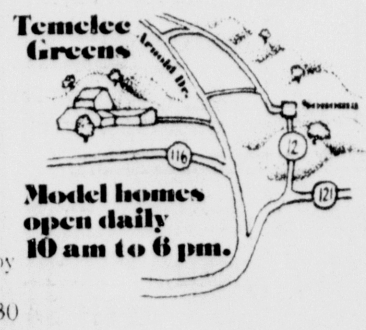
If the cost of living is putting a dent in your retirement plans, relax. There are still a few great home bargains, if you know where to look. Temelec Greens is one of them.

It's near Sonoma, just 40 miles north of the Golden Gate Bridge. And it has just about everything you could want in a home and in a place to live.

The 2-bedroom, 2-bath villa homes are built in the Spanish tradition, with tile roofs and private garden courtyards. The kitchens have built-in appliances and crafted hard-wood cabinets. The spacious living rooms come with custom masonry fireplaces. The master bedroom suites have elegant dressing areas. There's wall-to-wall carpeting, and sliding glass doors to the patios. Every home has a separate garage. And the Homeowners Association takes care of the landscaping and maintenance of the grounds.

At our price of $29,950 to $32,950, the homes would be great bargains anywhere. But when you consider what comes with them, you'll want to come see everything for yourself.

Because when you move into Temelec Greens, an entire, historic estate is yours to enjoy. And unlike some other adult communities that charge you stiff monthly fees for clubhouse facilities, here it's all covered by the Homeowners Association fee of $30 a month.



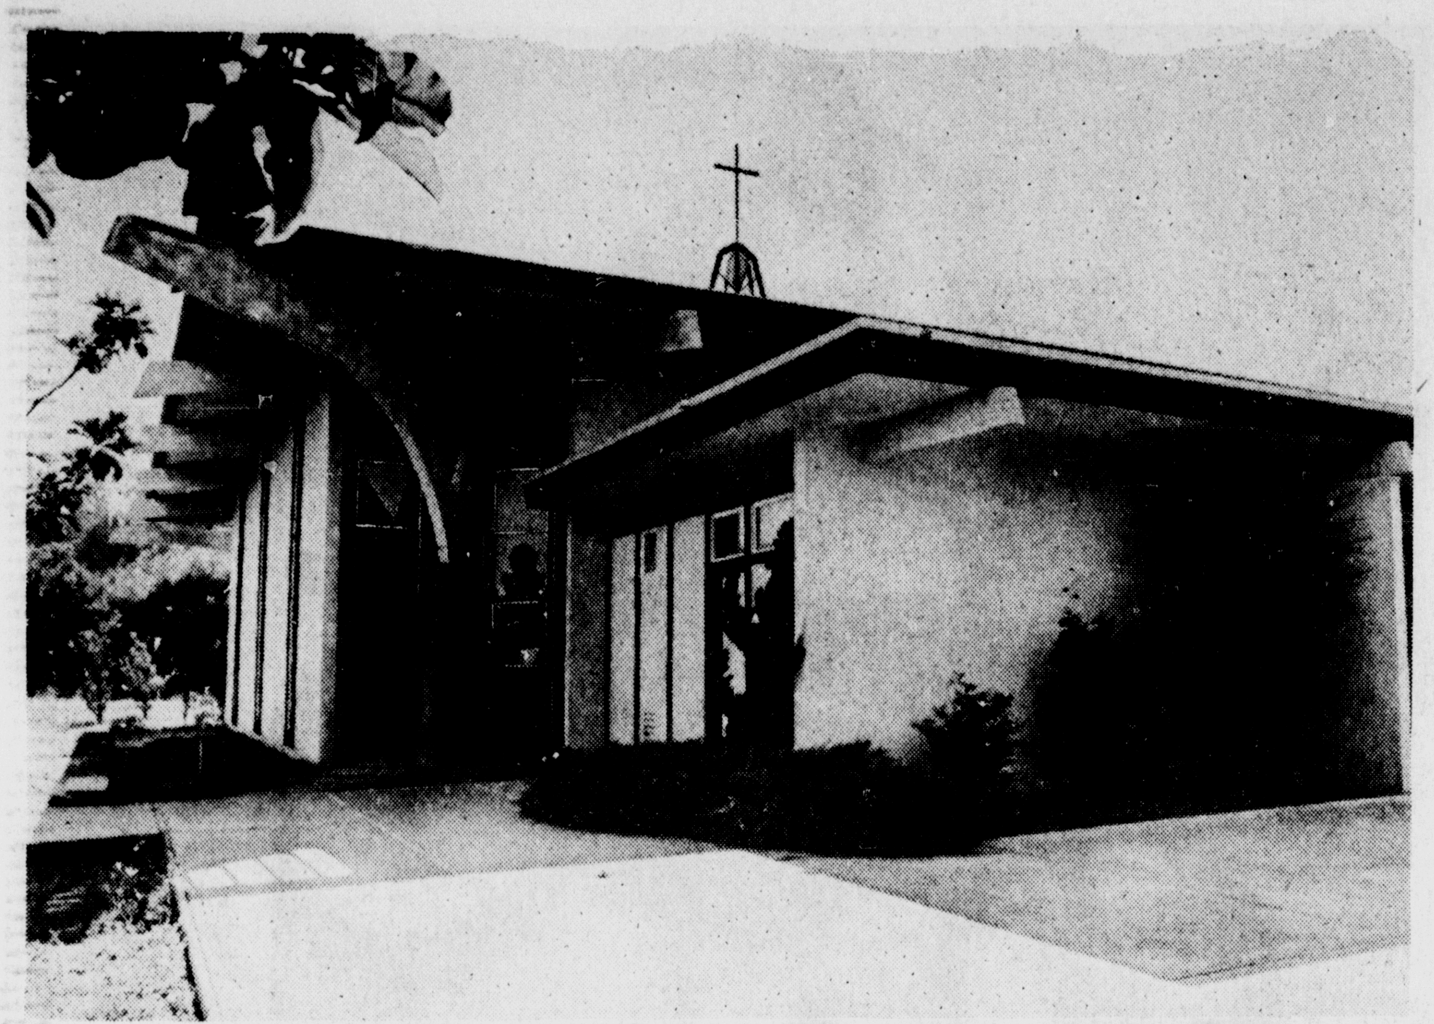
There's a swimming pool, a picnic place, colorful formal gardens, fountains, lily ponds and old stone gazebos. Inside Temelec Hall (built in 1858), you can play billiards, browse through the library, meet friends for bridge or attend a social gathering. And only five minutes up the road, you can tee off at the Sonoma National Golf Course.

So if you or your spouse are over 45 (and your children living with you are over 18), take a drive to our part of the Wine Country and stroll through our model homes. Then visit Temelec Hall.

You'll find that the good old days of reasonable prices, fine workmanship, clear air and secure surroundings are not very far away after all.

Take the El Verano exit (Arnold Drive) off Highway 121 near Sonoma, and look for our signs.

Temelec Greens: 2-bedroom homes from $29,950.



METHODIST CHURCH OF MILL VALLEY

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley serves not only its congregation as a church, but the entire community as meeting place. The church members decided that it was foolish to have such a building sitting empty six days a week. It opened the church sanctuary to other groups for a minimum fee to cover the cost of keeping the building open. It averages five other groups a week using the building.

The congregation was organized in 1912. The original church was at the corner of East Blithedale and Sycamore avenues. The building was sold to the Assembly of God Church when the church moved to its present location at Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue. The classrooms were constructed in 1959 and the nursery in 1961 with the sanctuary completed in 1965.

MARINITE'S ARTICLE

We Are All Slaves To Something

By C. PHILIP SCHILLER

We think we live well beyond the age of slavery, and most of us take pride in our freedom. But are we really all that free? I think it is an inescapable fact of life that we are all slaves to something, even though we may delude ourselves into thinking that we are the masters of our fate, and free to do as we please.

What are some of the things that enslave us? We can be a slave to ourselves — to please, pamper, and satisfy our every whim and desire. How soon life turns sour, and our friends tire of us, if this is our main reason for living! When we are enslaved by our desires and passions, we use people and love things. But happiness in life is found in loving people and using things.

We can also be enslaved by our possessions. While wealth and possessions are not evil in themselves, loving them unduly elevates them to a position of mastery over us. Jesus observed that "No man can serve two masters. . .you cannot serve God and mammon." (Matthew 6:24) — Mammon stands for money, and its power and influence over us and others.

We needn't be rich to succumb to the temptation of trusing in money and worldly things. We scarcely notice it happening, but we are slowly mastered by a materialistic outlook.

E. Stanley Jones tells a story of a robin who was offered a worm for a feather. The bird felt he had a good bargain — it would save a lot of searching for worms, and he wouldn't miss a feather. But one dreadful day the robin realized that his feathers were gone and he could not fly. He was earthbound, having sold his power to fly for worms. How sad when a person trades away the powers of the soul, the ability to soar, for physical things. That person is a dead soul surrounded by many things!

Some people are enslaved by the difficulties and disappointments of life. When things don't go well for them, they retreat from life like a whipped dog hiding in his kennel. "Life is too much!" "We've had it!" So they retreat into a gloomy round of self-pity and endless complaining. Others try to escape from the realities of life by becoming "workoholics" with no time for enjoying life. And there are the more obvious attempts to escape life through drugs and alcohol.

We apparently will be mastered by something, but we do have a choice of whom or what. God has provided hope and light for us, but it comes as a paradox: to find real freedom in this life we must accept the mastery of His will for us. And this is found in a person, in Jesus Christ the Lord. When we call Him "Lord" we yield ourselves to His control. This control is not oppressive, but takes the form of loving guidance. It might be compared to radar that safely guides a ship on a foggy night, preventing it from unseen perils, and bringing it safely through. In the same spirit Jesus said to his followers, "No longer do I call you servants, (slaves). . .but I have called you friends." (John 15:15)

It is unfortunately true that some people fear a close relationship with Christ. But this is to misunderstand His nature, which is to free us to enjoy life, and not to bind and restrict us. By Christ's sacrificial death on the cross we can be redeemed. . .freed. . .bought back from slavery to sin and self. Jesus said: "So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36)

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me." (Revelation 3:20)

Pastor Faces 'Other Woman'

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Protestant pastors, most of whom are married, in some instances get entangled in an age-old, personal predicament — the problem of the "other woman."

It is "a major problem that confronts pastors in every denomination," says the Rev. Andrew Bustanoby, a former Baptist pastor and now a marriage counselor in Bowie, Md.

Church authorities cite a special potentiality for such situations in the ministry, with its duties of visiting, counseling and encouraging members at deeply felt, private levels.

Also, in most congregations there are women, lonely and wanting companionship, who seek the pastor's personal advice and guidance. Sometimes, often unintentionally and almost by accident, his efforts to sympathize and be helpful develop into an affair.

The subject, its hazards and ways to avoid them, generally is included to varying extents in seminary training.

"Every pastoral ministry course in seminary includes a lecture on the pastor's relations with women in the church," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby writes in the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today.

However, he says an aspect of the problem not dealt with adequately is "the pastor's need for what the other woman has to offer. Men are attracted to the ministry not only for spiritual reasons, but also for the emotional fulfillment it offers."

He maintains that ministers most likely to get involved with women in their churches are what psychologists have classified as "maladaptive 'top-dog' personalities." To screen them out, he proposed greater use of psychological testing in seminaries.

He says the "minister who errs sexually does not start out with sexual encounter on his mind" but to "build his ego on the admiration of all people in his congregation — men, women and children.

"The women of the congregation provide ego satisfaction for his doubts about his masculinity. These doubts are allayed by messages from the woman that he is an attractive male. He then finds himself with the opportunity to check out these messages more fully.

However, "the bait is not sex," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby says. "The bait is ego satisfaction, a normal human need; this leads to an opportunity for sexual involvement."

Brazilians Scorn U.S. Spiritualists

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Spiritism — a religion that believes in clairvoyance and reincarnation — is active in this South American country. But Brazilian mediums are critical of U.S. spiritualists who charge money for seances.

"Mediums should always work for free," said Reinaldo Seares Pinheiro, general secretary of the Sao Paulo Spiritist Federation. "The Gospel says that mediumistic powers are given free. But we know that some mediums in the United States charge for their services."

Mediums here make it a point to differentiate themselves from most of their counterparts in the United States. "There they call it spiritualism. In Brazil, it's spiritism," Pinheiro explained.

One exception is the Christian Spirit Center in Elon College, N.C., which Brazilians say was founded by their most famous medium, Francisco Xavier.

Brazilian spiritists say the purpose of their religion is to establish links between human beings and God.

Folksinger Will Play At Benefit

Betsy Chapman, folksinger from San Anselmo, will present an evening of music tomorrow at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church at 112 Bulkley Avenue, Sausalito.

Her performance will follow a Mexican dinner at 4:30 p.m.

The performance will benefit the Latin American Mission Program (LAMP). This is a missionary group of 40 persons trying to fill the needs they find in Latin America. Much of their work is in the border city of Mexicali.

Some of their work has been directed toward cooperative efforts with the Stanford Medical Center in providing plastic surgery to children. Because of the volunteer service of the Stanford doctors, LAMP has arranged for more than 500 operations in the past five years.

Other projects include food cooperatives, medical dispensaries, education and the only Cachequal Indian radio station in Guatemala.

11 Theological Giants Listed

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the oft-termed "theological giants" of this century are dead, including Karl Barth, Paul Tillich, Emil Brunner, Martin Buber, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Rheinhold Niebuhr. Only one of that constellation still is living, Germany's Rudolph Bultmann, now 90.

Are there any newcomers to fill the gap? Editors of six leading church magazines singled out 11 persons as "today's living giants of the Christian faith."

Ranked as the most dominant theologian was European scholar Jurgen Moltmann of Germany. He is a reformed churchman who sparked a "theology of hope" movement. It emphasizes faith as a drive toward future goodness, with God in front leading humanity ahead, and finds realizations of hope both through struggle for reform in this world and in consummation at the end of time.

Others on the list:

Swiss theologian Hans King of Germany. He is as a reform-minded Roman Catholic, whose criticism of the doctrine of papal infallibility has made him a target of Vatican investigations.

United Church ethicist James Gustafson, of the University of Chicago Divinity School, an opponent of so-called "situation ethics," which claims love — not blanket rules — determine morality.

Philosopher Bernard Lonergan, a Canadian Jesuit, of Regis College, Toronto, a profound intellectual whose work in building bridges between theology and the social sciences has been compared to that of Thomas Aquinas.

Southern Baptist evangelist Billy Graham, who is not regarded a creative theologian and who often is accused of overemphasizing personal salvation and minimizing the Gospel's social implication, but who has preached to more people than anyone in history. He was cited for his "obvious appeal" and influence among millions.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Helder Camara of Brazil who has defied Brazil's military government to denounce injustice and insist on fairness to the poor.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black churchman of Rhodesia, who has outspokenly opposed the racial policies of the white minority regime.

Roman Catholic theologian Rosemary Reuther of Howard University. She holds that traditional Christianity has been used as a tool of oppression, especially in sexist views of women. She contends it should be a message of liberation.

American Indian writer Vine Deloria, a Sioux, author of "Custer Died for Your Sins" and "God is Red." While not primarily a theologian, he was cited for offering a "stirring call for society's repentence and reform."

Roman Catholic priest-sociologist Andrew Greeley, director of Chicago's National Opinion Research center and a lucid, prolific writer, who combines the insights of sociology and theology.

Building Of Church To Begin

Groundbreaking ceremony for the first unit of the Church of the Nazarene in Novato will be at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the building site at 2001 Center Road.

Dr. E. E. Zachery, superintendent of the Northern California District of the church, will be the guest speaker.

The program will include the Teen Choir from the Petaluma Church of the Nazarene and Trombonist Stephen Stukas of Pasadena, Calif.

The first shovelful of ground will be turned by the trustees of the local congregation, Dr. Lloyd Byron, Thomas Manners and Capt. Louis Cavallero of the Novato Fire Department.

Pastor Wilfred Stukas will supervise the construction of the chapel and classrooms assisted by the volunteer labor of members and friends.

The congregation has been meeting at the pastor's home at 1 Arbor Circle since the first services were held in August, 1972.

Performance Set In San Rafael

The New Jerusalem Players, six members of the Jews for Jesus, will perform in drama, song and testimony at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Open Door, 647 Lindaro Street, San Rafael.

Judaism Studied In Mail Course

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

Imagine a convicted killer with only nine years of formal schooling attending class with a high Justice Department official and a nun.

Well, not exactly attending class together.

The convict is in jail in Texas, the Justice Department official is in Washington and the nun is in Massachusetts.

They are all a part of the American Jewish Committee's new Academy for Jewish Studies Without Walls, a set of correspondence courses which already carry credit from the University of Haifa, in Israel.

The idea for the academy was sparked by what director Yehuda Rosenman said was "a wide disparity between the high level of general education among Jews and the woefully low level of Jewish education."

In its first year of operation, therefore, the academy is offering courses in biblical thought, medieval Jewish thought, modern Jewish thought, Hasidism, Jewry in Eastern Europe and a history of American Jewry.

Even though the academy is oriented to Jewish studies, a fair number are non-Jewish.

A nun in Boston, for example, told the academy was being sponsored by a local ecumenical commission and noted "many Christians, too, could profit from what the academy has to offer."

The Texas convict, a migrant worker who dropped out of school when he was 15 to follow "the harvests from Minnesota to Wisconsin to Illinois and Oklahoma," wrote the academy that he was trying to "avoid vegetating" and hoped to major is sociology and Mexican-American history.

One man, who wrote that he had dropped out of school when he was 15, noted that he "worked as a blacksmith, farmer, sawmiller and carpenter," adding, "I hope to go on to college later on. I would like to write on religion."

Yet another applicant to the academy was a sculptress specializing in medieval motifs who said she wanted to take the course in medieval Jewish thought because she wants to incorporate the Jewish component in her work.

Many of the Jewish applicants said they wanted to take courses because they had received no religious training from their "assimilationist" parents or that their parents were "hostile to both the theory and practice of religion."

The idea of a "university without walls" was pioneered in Great Britain in 1969 with the Open University.

"There are few places today where intelligent adults who can devote only part of their time to study, or live far from centers of Jewish learning, can pursue Judaic education on a serious intellectual level," according to Rosenman.

Vision Teaching Aid Created By Optometrist

When children run with sharp pointed instruments and toys in their hands, Dr. Lawrence Babow cringes.

When youngsters ask questions, as they do, about the eyes, which few grownups can really answer, including many teachers; Larry Babow is disheartened.

So, the tall, lean bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need.

THUS, with a determination and dedication which he undertakes any project in but which belies his casual manner of speech and movement, Larry Babow found himself the creative force behind the most comprehensive but easily understandable teaching aid on vision and the eye ever developed specifically for teachers.

The goal was to create a learning tool that would be fun for elementary school children while teaching them how the eye works, with emphasis on safety.

Titled "A Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," the 34 pages of illustrations, descriptive copy and teaching hints about the visual process interrelating a variety of classroom subjects as science, logic, reading, vocabulary, health, safety, spelling, history and time-telling, is perhaps the only comprehensible book about the eye for children of its kind . . . and even for the lay adult.

Designed to stimulate the imagination of children and teachers, the book also contains three pages of ditto masters of drawings with which the teacher involves the children in class learning projects.

THIS UNIQUE teaching aid evolved from the two major interests of Larry Babow. Optometry is one, of course. Education of children is the other. Larry and his wife Barbara, as the parents of a 13 year old son, Brent, and a 10 year old daughter, Barri, are vitally interested in education and serve now as co-presidents of the Home & School Association of Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood where the Babow family lives. He has also been a special resource instructor at that school.

"So, the tall, lean, bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need."

His children also had an influential role in the development of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," for it was through them he realized how little youngsters know about the vision process and how little they are aware of the preciousness of sight. He also found that the eye was a foreign subject to most teachers, just as it is for most everyone else not in the vision care professions.

So, Larry, who had long been active in professional affairs, became particularly interested in the area of vision education; and was elected president of the Vision Conservation Institute of California, a non-profit educational corporation which is part of the California Optometric Association.

Under his aegis, the VCI began developing a series of graphic designed pamphlets for the public and for educators about different vision problems, dispelling myths and alerting the public to trouble symptoms.

THESE PAMPHLETS entitled "Fact and Fantasy," were the first such publications of their kind to be produced by VCI.

Their popularity, however, further emphasized for Dr. Babow the urgent need for some easily understandable material about vision and the eye for the schools.

A teaching aid was needed that could both inform the teacher and serve to make instruction simple and fun. The teaching tool also had to hold and involve the attention of young students in a way that they could understand the complex mechanisms of vision and still have fun.

Larry spent months pondering the approach, step by step. Then he discussed the idea with Michel Dattel, a noted San Francisco graphics designer and close friend. Dattel immediately began doing illustrations, caught up in Babow's excitement.

But, input was also needed from health educators and Larry Babow approached Gene Huber, head of elementary school health education in San Francisco. Huber eagerly contributed his ideas from a teaching point of view.

Then it was time to write the material, so Larry Babow sought the help of Los Angeles optometrist Byron Newman who is an associate editor of the California Optometric Association bi-monthly journal. Finally, the finished editing was done by the state optometric association specialists.

LARRY BABOW had all of the elements of a beautifully illustrated, well devised and written teaching aid. Now, how well would students and teachers respond to it?

The only way to find out was to go to a school and Larry Babow took the original artboards and material to the Mary E. Silveira Elementary School in Marinwood which his children attend. The response was enthusiastic.

The youngsters quickly became involved in discovering "the secrets of vision." The teachers found that they, too, not only learned about the eye and vision without slugging through a lot of technical material, but they also had a tool that could easily transmit that same information to their students.

There remained, now, only one major obstacle. Money. Funds were needed to pay for the early work of illustration and writing and to publish the initial copies.

LARRY BABOW took it upon himself to obtain the necessary grants for funding the project. He had only the artboards and copy, his enthusiasm and dedication to sell. It was enough, however, for the California Optometric Association Auxiliary raised the funds he needed.

The first printing came off the press last September. It was now necessary to put the books into the schools. Workshops for teachers demonstrating the books were given by optometrists throughout the State. Some local Optometric Societies purchased a number of the teaching aids and presented them to the school districts. In some cases, school districts purchased additional copies.

San Francisco optometrists provided the city's elementary schools with 500 copies and the school district bought 500 more this year. This first full use of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye" will be implemented in San Francisco classrooms this fall. But, the Teaching Aid on vision is still new and unfamiliar to many other school districts.

Now, Larry Babow is worrying about

Tamalpais Valley Sculptor Creates Faces From American History

By FRANK FARRARA

He calls himself "Americana Sculptor" and his busts bear him out. . .Jim Thorpe, Davy Crockett, Martin Luther King, President Eisenhower and Chief Marin.

The nooks and crannies of his home are filled with his sculpture, walls adorned with his paintings and his alcove workshop alive with works in the making.

LESTER, born in a sod house near Cheyenne, Okla., is a direct descendant of Davy Crockett and has fashioned two busts of Crockett that are at the Alamo.

He attributed his attachment to American history to his early years. "My family goes back to the 13 colonies, and when I was a youngster Buffalo Bill was still alive and Pawnee Bail. . .and I saw Indians firsthand in teepees."

As he explained his busts, he commented, "most of these were done in the last year and there are more than twenty."

"I believe in looking inward and capturing the people. . .a journalism in Bronze," he said. "I'm doing all the ones I love. I can't wait for commissions. I don't have to compromise."

The 60-year-old sculptor, with wavy white hair and chin beard who is also a teacher, painter, art therapist, poet and marriage and family counselor, returned to sculpture in recent years after a long layoff.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around," he said. "I never chased women. I never get drunk, and I don't smoke and I eat good food."

LESTER said he didn't take any art classes in high school, but became interested one day at the library when he saw a figure of a frog carved from a frozen turnip.

He tried a bust of his mother, "which didn't look like her," and an Indian asleep and a horse by a rock in sandstone which didn't pan out.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around. I never chased women, never got drunk. I don't smoke and I eat good food. I was too busy working. I'd rather wear out than rust out."

"Then I carved a Buffalo Bill being attacked by wolves.

A man he calls, "Uncle Bill, but he really wasn't my uncle," suggested that I send it to the Oklahoma Historical Society. . .and it was placed in the museum in Oklahoma City."

"I started Abraham Lincoln by lamplight, but it was cold and the clay froze and dropped off the armature," he recalled.

Lester, while still a high school student, completed the bust of Lincoln, which won first prize in the county and third in the state.

"UNCLE BILL said if you finish high school, I'll buy a Ford V-8 and let you drive," Lester said. We went and when we came back to Oklahoma, I did a bust of Davy Crockett and on Aug. 17 I sent it to the Alamo and it's still there. . .in the Barracks Museum."

After he completed college, he said he did another "better bust" of Davy Crockett in bronze and presented it to Alamo Library in August, 1970.

Lester worked his way through Oklahoma State University during the depression "when there wasn't any money for art," establishing a National Youth Administration ceramic project and "making dishes for the NYA."

"I got into teaching, then came the war and I came out here and made plaster patterns for the aircraft industry," he said.

AFTER a spell of pottery manufacturing, he resumed teaching at Palm Springs High School and then "got tired of it and sold vacuum cleaners and had a Fuller Brush show on the radio in Indio."

He returned to teaching in San Bernardino in 1953, teaching art to mentally retarded students and serving as chairman of art and special education until 1972 when he moved to Marin.

Lester said his sculpturing, long dormant, began to revive in 1964 when he did a bust of Ken Hubbs, a Chicago Cubs player, who had been killed in an air-

METHODIST CHURCH OF MILL VALLEY

The Methodist Church of Mill Valley serves not only its congregation as a church, but the entire community as meeting place. The church members decided that it was foolish to have such a building sitting empty six days a week. It opened the church sanctuary to other groups for a minimum fee to cover the cost of keeping the building open. It averages five other groups a week using the building.

The congregation was organized in 1912. The original church was at the corner of East Blithedale and Sycamore avenues. The building was sold to the Assembly of God Church when the church moved to its present location at Camino Alto and Sycamore Avenue. The classrooms were constructed in 1959 and the nursery in 1961 with the sanctuary completed in 1965.

MARINITE'S ARTICLE

We Are All Slaves To Something

By C. PHILIP SCHILLER

We think we live well beyond the age of slavery, and most of us take pride in our freedom. But are we really all that free? I think it is an inescapable fact of life that we are all slaves to something, even though we may delude ourselves into thinking that we are the masters of our fate, and free to do as we please.

What are some of the things that enslave us? We can be a slave to ourselves — to please, pamper, and satisfy our every whim and desire. How soon life turns sour, and our friends tire of us, if this is our main reason for living! When we are enslaved by our desires and passions, we use people and love things. But happiness in life is found in loving people and using things.

We can also be enslaved by our possessions. While wealth and possessions are not evil in themselves, loving them unduly elevates them to a position of mastery over us. Jesus observed that "No man can serve two masters. . .you cannot serve God and mammon." (Matthew 6:24) — Mammon stands for money, and its power and influence over us and others.

We needn't be rich to succumb to the temptation of trusing in money and worldly things. We scarcely notice it happening, but we are slowly mastered by a materialistic outlook.

E. Stanley Jones tells a story of a robin who was offered a worm for a feather. The bird felt he had a good bargain — it would save a lot of searching for worms, and he wouldn't miss a feather. But one dreadful day the robin realized that his feathers were gone and he could not fly. He was earthbound, having sold his power to fly for worms. How sad when a person trades away the powers of the soul, the ability to soar, for physical things. That person is a dead soul surrounded by many things!

Some people are enslaved by the difficulties and disappointments of life. When things don't go well for them, they retreat from life like a whipped dog hiding in his kennel. "Life is too much!" "We've had it!" So they retreat into a gloomy round of self-pity and endless complaining. Others try to escape from the realities of life by becoming "workoholics" with no time for enjoying life. And there are the more obvious attempts to escape life through drugs and alcohol.

We apparently will be mastered by something, but we do have a choice of whom or what. God has provided hope and light for us, but it comes as a paradox: to find real freedom in this life we must accept the mastery of His will for us. And this is found in a person, in Jesus Christ the Lord. When we call Him "Lord" we yield ourselves to His control. This control is not oppressive, but takes the form of loving guidance. It might be compared to radar that safely guides a ship on a foggy night, preventing it from unseen perils, and bringing it safely through. In the same spirit Jesus said to his followers, "No longer do I call you servants, (slaves). . .but I have called you friends." (John 15:15)

It is unfortunately true that some people fear a close relationship with Christ. But this is to misunderstand His nature, which is to free us to enjoy life, and not to bind and restrict us. By Christ's sacrificial death on the cross we can be redeemed. . .freed. . .bought back from slavery to sin and self. Jesus said: "So if the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed." (John 8:36)

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me." (Revelation 3:20)

Pastor Faces 'Other Woman'

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Protestant pastors, most of whom are married, in some instances get entangled in an age-old, personal predicament — the problem of the "other woman."

It is "a major problem that confronts pastors in every denomination," says the Rev. Andrew Bustanoby, a former Baptist pastor and now a marriage counselor in Bowie, Md.

Church authorities cite a special potentiality for such situations in the ministry, with its duties of visiting, counseling and encouraging members at deeply felt, private levels.

Also, in most congregations there are women, lonely and wanting companionship, who seek the pastor's personal advice and guidance. Sometimes, often unintentionally and almost by accident, his efforts to sympathize and be helpful develop into an affair.

The subject, its hazards and ways to avoid them, generally is included to varying extents in seminary training.

"Every pastoral ministry course in seminary includes a lecture on the pastor's relations with women in the church," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby writes in the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today.

However, he says an aspect of the problem not dealt with adequately is "the pastor's need for what the other woman has to offer. Men are attracted to the ministry not only for spiritual reasons, but also for the emotional fulfillment it offers."

He maintains that ministers most likely to get involved with women in their churches are what psychologists have classified as "maladaptive 'top-dog' personalities." To screen them out, he proposed greater use of psychological testing in seminaries.

He says the "minister who errs sexually does not start out with sexual encounter on his mind" but to "build his ego on the admiration of all people in his congregation — men, women and children.

"The women of the congregation provide ego satisfaction for his doubts about his masculinity. These doubts are allayed by messages from the woman that he is an attractive male. He then finds himself with the opportunity to check out these messages more fully.

However, "the bait is not sex," the Rev. Mr. Bustanoby says. "The bait is ego satisfaction, a normal human need; this leads to an opportunity for sexual involvement."

Brazilians Scorn U.S. Spiritualists

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Spiritism — a religion that believes in clairvoyance and reincarnation — is active in this South American country. But Brazilian mediums are critical of U.S. spiritualists who charge money for seances.

"Mediums should always work for free," said Reinaldo Seares Pinheiro, general secretary of the Sao Paulo Spiritist Federation. "The Gospel says that mediumistic powers are given free. But we know that some mediums in the United States charge for their services."

Mediums here make it a point to differentiate themselves from most of their counterparts in the United States. "There they call it spiritualism. In Brazil, it's spiritism," Pinheiro explained.

One exception is the Christian Spirit Center in Elon College, N.C., which Brazilians say was founded by their most famous medium, Francisco Xavier.

Brazilian spiritists say the purpose of their religion is to establish links between human beings and God.

Folksinger Will Play At Benefit

Betsy Chapman, folksinger from San Anselmo, will present an evening of music tomorrow at the Sausalito Presbyterian Church at 112 Bulkley Avenue, Sausalito.

Her performance will follow a Mexican dinner at 4:30 p.m.

The performance will benefit the Latin American Mission Program (LAMP). This is a missionary group of 40 persons trying to fill the needs they find in Latin America. Much of their work is in the border city of Mexicali.

Some of their work has been directed toward cooperative efforts with the Stanford Medical Center in providing plastic surgery to children. Because of the volunteer service of the Stanford doctors, LAMP has arranged for more than 500 operations in the past five years.

Other projects include food cooperatives, medical dispensaries, education and the only Cachequal Indian radio station in Guatemala.

11 Theological Giants Listed

NEW YORK (AP) — Most of the oft-termed "theological giants" of this century are dead, including Karl Barth, Paul Tillich, Emil Brunner, Martin Buber, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Rheinhold Niebuhr. Only one of that constellation still is living, Germany's Rudolph Bultmann, now 90.

Are there any newcomers to fill the gap? Editors of six leading church magazines singled out 11 persons as "today's living giants of the Christian faith."

Ranked as the most dominant theologian was European scholar Jurgen Moltmann of Germany. He is a reformed churchman who sparked a "theology of hope" movement. It emphasizes faith as a drive toward future goodness, with God in front leading humanity ahead, and finds realizations of hope both through struggle for reform in this world and in consummation at the end of time.

Others on the list:

Swiss theologian Hans King of Germany. He is as a reform-minded Roman Catholic, whose criticism of the doctrine of papal infallibility has made him a target of Vatican investigations.

United Church ethicist James Gustafson, of the University of Chicago Divinity School, an opponent of so-called "situation ethics," which claims love — not blanket rules — determine morality.

Philosopher Bernard Lonergan, a Canadian Jesuit, of Regis College, Toronto, a profound intellectual whose work in building bridges between theology and the social sciences has been compared to that of Thomas Aquinas.

Southern Baptist evangelist Billy Graham, who is not regarded a creative theologian and who often is accused of overemphasizing personal salvation and minimizing the Gospel's social implication, but who has preached to more people than anyone in history. He was cited for his "obvious appeal" and influence among millions.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Helder Camara of Brazil who has defied Brazil's military government to denounce injustice and insist on fairness to the poor.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a black churchman of Rhodesia, who has outspokenly opposed the racial policies of the white minority regime.

Roman Catholic theologian Rosemary Reuther of Howard University. She holds that traditional Christianity has been used as a tool of oppression, especially in sexist views of women. She contends it should be a message of liberation.

American Indian writer Vine Deloria, a Sioux, author of "Custer Died for Your Sins" and "God is Red." While not primarily a theologian, he was cited for offering a "stirring call for society's repentence and reform."

Roman Catholic priest-sociologist Andrew Greeley, director of Chicago's National Opinion Research center and a lucid, prolific writer, who combines the insights of sociology and theology.

Building Of Church To Begin

Groundbreaking ceremony for the first unit of the Church of the Nazarene in Novato will be at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the building site at 2001 Center Road.

Dr. E. E. Zachery, superintendent of the Northern California District of the church, will be the guest speaker.

The program will include the Teen Choir from the Petaluma Church of the Nazarene and Trombonist Stephen Stukas of Pasadena, Calif.

The first shovelful of ground will be turned by the trustees of the local congregation, Dr. Lloyd Byron, Thomas Manners and Capt. Louis Cavallero of the Novato Fire Department.

Pastor Wilfred Stukas will supervise the construction of the chapel and classrooms assisted by the volunteer labor of members and friends.

The congregation has been meeting at the pastor's home at 1 Arbor Circle since the first services were held in August, 1972.

Performance Set In San Rafael

The New Jerusalem Players, six members of the Jews for Jesus, will perform in drama, song and testimony at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Church of the Open Door, 647 Lindaro Street, San Rafael.

Judaism Studied In Mail Course

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

Imagine a convicted killer with only nine years of formal schooling attending class with a high Justice Department official and a nun.

Well, not exactly attending class together.

The convict is in jail in Texas, the Justice Department official is in Washington and the nun is in Massachusetts.

They are all a part of the American Jewish Committee's new Academy for Jewish Studies Without Walls, a set of correspondence courses which already carry credit from the University of Haifa, in Israel.

The idea for the academy was sparked by what director Yehuda Rosenman said was "a wide disparity between the high level of general education among Jews and the woefully low level of Jewish education."

In its first year of operation, therefore, the academy is offering courses in biblical thought, medieval Jewish thought, modern Jewish thought, Hasidism, Jewry in Eastern Europe and a history of American Jewry.

Even though the academy is oriented to Jewish studies, a fair number are non-Jewish.

A nun in Boston, for example, told the academy was being sponsored by a local ecumenical commission and noted "many Christians, too, could profit from what the academy has to offer."

The Texas convict, a migrant worker who dropped out of school when he was 15 to follow "the harvests from Minnesota to Wisconsin to Illinois and Oklahoma," wrote the academy that he was trying to "avoid vegetating" and hoped to major is sociology and Mexican-American history.

One man, who wrote that he had dropped out of school when he was 15, noted that he "worked as a blacksmith, farmer, sawmiller and carpenter," adding, "I hope to go on to college later on. I would like to write on religion."

Yet another applicant to the academy was a sculptress specializing in medieval motifs who said she wanted to take the course in medieval Jewish thought because she wants to incorporate the Jewish component in her work.

Many of the Jewish applicants said they wanted to take courses because they had received no religious training from their "assimilationist" parents or that their parents were "hostile to both the theory and practice of religion."

The idea of a "university without walls" was pioneered in Great Britain in 1969 with the Open University.

"There are few places today where intelligent adults who can devote only part of their time to study, or live far from centers of Jewish learning, can pursue Judaic education on a serious intellectual level," according to Rosenman.

Vision Teaching Aid Created By Optometrist

When children run with sharp pointed instruments and toys in their hands, Dr. Lawrence Babow cringes.

When youngsters ask questions, as they do, about the eyes, which few grownups can really answer, including many teachers; Larry Babow is disheartened.

So, the tall, lean bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need.

THUS, with a determination and dedication which he undertakes any project in but which belies his casual manner of speech and movement, Larry Babow found himself the creative force behind the most comprehensive but easily understandable teaching aid on vision and the eye ever developed specifically for teachers.

The goal was to create a learning tool that would be fun for elementary school children while teaching them how the eye works, with emphasis on safety.

Titled "A Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," the 34 pages of illustrations, descriptive copy and teaching hints about the visual process interrelating a variety of classroom subjects as science, logic, reading, vocabulary, health, safety, spelling, history and time-telling, is perhaps the only comprehensible book about the eye for children of its kind . . . and even for the lay adult.

Designed to stimulate the imagination of children and teachers, the book also contains three pages of ditto masters of drawings with which the teacher involves the children in class learning projects.

THIS UNIQUE teaching aid evolved from the two major interests of Larry Babow. Optometry is one, of course. Education of children is the other. Larry and his wife Barbara, as the parents of a 13 year old son, Brent, and a 10 year old daughter, Barri, are vitally interested in education and serve now as co-presidents of the Home & School Association of Mary E. Silveira School in Marinwood where the Babow family lives. He has also been a special resource instructor at that school.

"So, the tall, lean, bearded Marin County optometrist set out to do something about helping children better understand the gift of vision and eye safety — his own children ever before him as a constant reminder of this need."

His children also had an influential role in the development of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye," for it was through them he realized how little youngsters know about the vision process and how little they are aware of the preciousness of sight. He also found that the eye was a foreign subject to most teachers, just as it is for most everyone else not in the vision care professions.

So, Larry, who had long been active in professional affairs, became particularly interested in the area of vision education; and was elected president of the Vision Conservation Institute of California, a non-profit educational corporation which is part of the California Optometric Association.

Under his aegis, the VCI began developing a series of graphic designed pamphlets for the public and for educators about different vision problems, dispelling myths and alerting the public to trouble symptoms.

THESE PAMPHLETS entitled "Fact and Fantasy," were the first such publications of their kind to be produced by VCI.

Their popularity, however, further emphasized for Dr. Babow the urgent need for some easily understandable material about vision and the eye for the schools.

A teaching aid was needed that could both inform the teacher and serve to make instruction simple and fun. The teaching tool also had to hold and involve the attention of young students in a way that they could understand the complex mechanisms of vision and still have fun.

Larry spent months pondering the approach, step by step. Then he discussed the idea with Michel Dattel, a noted San Francisco graphics designer and close friend. Dattel immediately began doing illustrations, caught up in Babow's excitement.

But, input was also needed from health educators and Larry Babow approached Gene Huber, head of elementary school health education in San Francisco. Huber eagerly contributed his ideas from a teaching point of view.

Then it was time to write the material, so Larry Babow sought the help of Los Angeles optometrist Byron Newman who is an associate editor of the California Optometric Association bi-monthly journal. Finally, the finished editing was done by the state optometric association specialists.

LARRY BABOW had all of the elements of a beautifully illustrated, well devised and written teaching aid. Now, how well would students and teachers respond to it?

The only way to find out was to go to a school and Larry Babow took the original artboards and material to the Mary E. Silveira Elementary School in Marinwood which his children attend. The response was enthusiastic.

The youngsters quickly became involved in discovering "the secrets of vision." The teachers found that they, too, not only learned about the eye and vision without slugging through a lot of technical material, but they also had a tool that could easily transmit that same information to their students.

There remained, now, only one major obstacle. Money. Funds were needed to pay for the early work of illustration and writing and to publish the initial copies.

LARRY BABOW took it upon himself to obtain the necessary grants for funding the project. He had only the artboards and copy, his enthusiasm and dedication to sell. It was enough, however, for the California Optometric Association Auxiliary raised the funds he needed.

The first printing came off the press last September. It was now necessary to put the books into the schools. Workshops for teachers demonstrating the books were given by optometrists throughout the State. Some local Optometric Societies purchased a number of the teaching aids and presented them to the school districts. In some cases, school districts purchased additional copies.

San Francisco optometrists provided the city's elementary schools with 500 copies and the school district bought 500 more this year. This first full use of the "Teaching Aid On Vision and The Eye" will be implemented in San Francisco classrooms this fall. But, the Teaching Aid on vision is still new and unfamiliar to many other school districts.

Now, Larry Babow is worrying about

Tamalpais Valley Sculptor Creates Faces From American History

By FRANK FARRARA

He calls himself "Americana Sculptor" and his busts bear him out. . .Jim Thorpe, Davy Crockett, Martin Luther King, President Eisenhower and Chief Marin.

The nooks and crannies of his home are filled with his sculpture, walls adorned with his paintings and his alcove workshop alive with works in the making.

LESTER, born in a sod house near Cheyenne, Okla., is a direct descendant of Davy Crockett and has fashioned two busts of Crockett that are at the Alamo.

He attributed his attachment to American history to his early years. "My family goes back to the 13 colonies, and when I was a youngster Buffalo Bill was still alive and Pawnee Bail. . .and I saw Indians firsthand in teepees."

As he explained his busts, he commented, "most of these were done in the last year and there are more than twenty."

"I believe in looking inward and capturing the people. . .a journalism in Bronze," he said. "I'm doing all the ones I love. I can't wait for commissions. I don't have to compromise."

The 60-year-old sculptor, with wavy white hair and chin beard who is also a teacher, painter, art therapist, poet and marriage and family counselor, returned to sculpture in recent years after a long layoff.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around," he said. "I never chased women. I never get drunk, and I don't smoke and I eat good food."

LESTER said he didn't take any art classes in high school, but became interested one day at the library when he saw a figure of a frog carved from a frozen turnip.

He tried a bust of his mother, "which didn't look like her," and an Indian asleep and a horse by a rock in sandstone which didn't pan out.

"For a 60-year-old man, I'm the youngest man around. I never chased women, never got drunk. I don't smoke and I eat good food. I was too busy working. I'd rather wear out than rust out."

"Then I carved a Buffalo Bill being attacked by wolves.

A man he calls, "Uncle Bill, but he really wasn't my uncle," suggested that I send it to the Oklahoma Historical Society. . .and it was placed in the museum in Oklahoma City."

"I started Abraham Lincoln by lamplight, but it was cold and the clay froze and dropped off the armature," he recalled.

Lester, while still a high school student, completed the bust of Lincoln, which won first prize in the county and third in the state.

"UNCLE BILL said if you finish high school, I'll buy a Ford V-8 and let you drive," Lester said. We went and when we came back to Oklahoma, I did a bust of Davy Crockett and on Aug. 17 I sent it to the Alamo and it's still there. . .in the Barracks Museum."

After he completed college, he said he did another "better bust" of Davy Crockett in bronze and presented it to Alamo Library in August, 1970.

Lester worked his way through Oklahoma State University during the depression "when there wasn't any money for art," establishing a National Youth Administration ceramic project and "making dishes for the NYA."

"I got into teaching, then came the war and I came out here and made plaster patterns for the aircraft industry," he said.

AFTER a spell of pottery manufacturing, he resumed teaching at Palm Springs High School and then "got tired of it and sold vacuum cleaners and had a Fuller Brush show on the radio in Indio."

He returned to teaching in San Bernardino in 1953, teaching art to mentally retarded students and serving as chairman of art and special education until 1972 when he moved to Marin.

Lester said his sculpturing, long dormant, began to revive in 1964 when he did a bust of Ken Hubbs, a Chicago Cubs player, who had been killed in an air-

Multi-Culture Institute Deals Quietly In Overcoming Ethnic Tensions

MARIN LIVING

When Elaine Howard Petrocelli, teacher and young Marin mother, joined the staff of San Francisco's Multi-Culture Institute eight years ago, she was a somewhat uncertain administrative secretary and the institute was chiefly a good idea in the head of Dr. Frances Sussna, its founder.

Today, Elaine is the institute's confident acting director, as good at getting grants from the Ford, Rockefeller and other large foundations as she has proved at administering MCI's home and regional offices, developing workshops for teacher training and serving as principal of an innovative laboratory school.

AND TODAY the rapidly-expanding Multi-Culture Institute is settling into its first permanent home — two Victorians at Pierce and Pine in San Francisco, deeded to MCI by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare — where it is running a lab school and training teachers to implement its ideas in public school systems across the country.

Briefly, the Multi-Culture Institute is a non-profit educational organization which feels that dealing with ethnic differences is an important task of our school systems. MCI feels that racial and ethnic pride can help end racial and ethnic prejudice. The students in the MCI school, and others in MCI-inspired classes, learn to enjoy and feel proud of their heritage and to understand and comfortably accept the cultural background of others.

What MCI teaches, and what it hopes to share with more and more public schools across the nation is summed up in two brightly colored lines on a classroom bulletin board: "We are different. We are the same."

That's an attitude Elaine would have appreciated years ago, when she was growing up as a member of "the only Jewish family in Columbus, Ind.

SHE REMEMBERS taking her elementary school songbook with its songs from many countries up to the teacher to ask if they could learn the Hebrew song. The teacher was scornful. That, she said, was a song of the Hebrews who were being wiped out and it was a good thing, too.

Some years later, after graduating from Ohio State, Elaine found herself on the other side of the desk in Columbus, Ohio. She taught there a year, then moved to California. Elaine recalls her year in an Oakland private school as "very hard work." She taught 3rd and 4th graders in the morning; 1st and 2nd graders in the afternoon. "After that, everything seemed easy," she says.

Elaine eventually joined the faculty of Dr. Sussna's Brandeis Day School in San Francisco, a private school in which part of the day was spent teaching the Jewish students their culture and their language.

With her memories of that teacher in Columbus, Elaine might well have decided that Brandeis offered just what the Jewish students needed. But she didn't.

"SOME OF us at the school were concerned. The children were getting a good feeling about being Jewish, but they needed more. We worried about the fact that they were only being exposed to children like themselves."

So when Elaine was invited by Dr. Sussna to leave Brandeis for the fledgling Multi-Culture Institute, she was ready for its multi-ethnic ideas.

She hadn't, though, planned on or prepared for the sizeable responsibilties she rapidly assumed.

"When I married, I saw my whole life's work as pushing my husband's career," Elaine says. "It was the whole thing ladies in the 50s took for granted."

Nonetheless, Elaine quickly became a curriculum consultant for the Multi-Culture Institute's first laboratory school, housed in donated facilities in Homewood Terrace, a one-time orphanage. Then, when several principals threw up their hands at an "impossible job," she was appointed school principal.

IN MCI'S laboratory schools, the day starts with a morning of general studies. Students work together in a strong academic program of individualized, nongraded instruction.

In the afternoon, students meet in separate cultural groups. There, led by a teacher of their ethnic group, they learn their history, their art, their music, even their language.

Sharing is an important part of the multi-culture program. At least once a week, children of one group host another, sharing some of what they've learned about themselves — a tai chi demonstration, a Spanish song, or a Chinese dish, prepared by the children themselves.

As principal, Elaine administered a school of more than 300 students in Grades K-6. When the school was forced to close early in 1972, out of a home and out of the Ford and Rockefeller foundation funds that had kept it alive, it had a waiting list as large as its student body.

AT THAT point, the Multi-Culture Institute was "absolutely desperate." Elaine remembers that "I hadn't cashed a paycheck in months. Frances (Dr. Frances Sussna) hadn't either."

They sought help but "every door was closed. People had that going out of business attitude toward us."

ACTING DIRECTOR ELAINE HOWARD PETROCELLI of Mill Valley learns about Indian ways from a young Native American at the Multi-Culture Institute Laboratory School in San Francisco.

When most organizations reach this point they do fold. MCI didn't.

What saved it? Help from friends that Elaine went out to find.

Home in Indiana on a family visit, Elaine approached the Irwin Sweeney Miller Foundation there. Before going in to make her presentation Elaine sat in her car, "absolutely terrified."

She remembers saying to herself, "I must be able to do this because I learned to ski even though I don't like to ski."

Positive thinking worked. At the end of the film strip and talk, Elaine had the promise of help to get MCI get back on its feet.

THE FOUNDATION grant funded a summer school and summer program of fellowship training for teachers interested in applying the Institute's program of ethnic studies in their home districts.

During the nearly three years it ran the laboratory school, MCI had hosted what Elaine recalls as "thousands of visitors" from across the nation. But the Institute didn't know how to follow up on their interest. The fellowship training solved that problem.

As the Multi-Culture Institute became more and more a resource center, sharing its ideas through workshops and summer training in its summer school, Elaine began to handle workshop development and dissemination of MCI's ideas in school districts.

Here again she took a job earlier holders had called "impossible" and made it work.

"I had very good people behind me," she says. "We knew that most good ideas stay in the pilot form and we'd all been to workshops where people went away and were no different, but we were teachers and we knew what teachers wanted."

IN 1973, the Mill Valley school system asked the Multi-Culture Institute for a consultation. Though Mill Valley schools had few minority students, Elaine considered it "important to point out to them that they all came from somewhere else, that they weren't the 'real' Americans."

The consultation was a success. "A lot of teachers began to apply this idea to the students, dealing with where the children themselves came from, not just with a Black Studies week."

Success bred success, for both Elaine and the Institute. The Lilly Endowment gave MCI three substantial grants in one year. The Rockefeller Foundation gave another grant to fund the new regional offices in Seattle, New York City and Savannah.

Best of all to the Institute, multi-culture classes have spread to public schools. MCI-trained teachers are running modified programs in public schools in New York City, Seattle, Indianapolis and Los Angeles, with more in the works.

AND ELAINE feels "really changed." She credits Terry Francois, president of the MCI since its 1966 inception, with much of the confidence-building, but whatever the source, the change has been enough to draw comments from people who had known her in "my other life, when I was at home, giving my all.;'

Along the way, she came to grips with the problem of balancing her family and her working life. "I had grown up with the feeling that you could not do both well. My children were the ones who taught me that I could do both just fine."

Raising two young children alone, Elaine was "lucky." I had a friend who wanted to take care of my children. She was an excellent mother substitute, the kind of person who should have been principal of a large elementary school. Very few people are so fortunate."

Today, happily remarried to a young lawyer whom she first met at an MCI board meeting where he was serving on the board, Elaine finds "the whole family" (now including three children) involved with MCI.

TOGETHERNESS, in fact, is a big feature of the family's days, It starts with breakfast. Everyone's up early, by 7, and Bill prepares what Elaine calls "a proper breakfast" for the whole family. "We're big on wheat germ on health-food cereals and juice," she says.

Then Grant (at 11, the oldest) and Nicole go off to schools in Mill Valley and Bill and Elaine leave the house with Kathryn, who attends the MCI laboratory school in San Francisco.

Evening is family time. "After dinner, we play with the children for a while," Elaine says. "Bill's a great game-player — ball, puppet shows."

"Bill was once a semi-professional folk singer. He played at the Gourd on Union Street. After the children go to bed, he sometimes plays for me. Other times we have parties with our children and friends and their children where everyone plays the latest thing they've written or learned. The kids too."

She sees her work and Bill's (he is a legal counsel for MCI) as an advantage. "I think my children have a very interesting life," she comments. "Interesting people are always coming through the house."

Looking back to the days when she considered a career "something you did until your husband said "I don't want you to work any more," Elaine feels lucky that circumstance forced her out of a limited life.

"SO MANY of my contemporaries are caught in the same thing as I was. Their lives are not intolerable, but how much more fortunate our daughters are. When Kathryn and Nicole play house, they pack their briefcases. To them, that's what mothers do."

As she looks ahead, Elaine sees the enlargement of the MCI laboratory school, which now includes 30 kindergarten through second graders of varied ethnic backgrounds, to 60 students and grades K-6.

She also sees more regional offices, larger teacher-training programs, more application of ethnic studies programs in public schools and more awareness of how the Multi-Culture Institute's ideas can help ease racial and ethnic tensions at a time when they are strong.

Youngsters Discover 'The Secrets Of Vision' Easily

how these books can find their way into other schoolrooms in California and across the nation.

THE DEVELOPMENT of the unique books involved over two and a half years of Larry Babow's life and considerable personal expense; for during the creation of the books and while raising funds to print them, he sacrificed much of his professional practice.

For Larry, teaching people about vision and, most important, to make them aware of the wonderful gift of vision and the need to conserve their eyes through vision care and vision safety, is all part of the world of optometry — a world he has been associated with all of his life.

Larry's father, Benjamin Babow, also is an optometrist and young Larry never doubted he would follow in his father's footsteps.

A native San Franciscan, Larry moved with his family to Marin County in 1950. After college and two years in the Army, Larry attended the Southern California Optometric College and began practicing in 1962. He now has offices in Marinwood and San Francisco.

In the 12 years as an optometrist, Larry Babow has devoted much of his time to professional affairs. He was Director of Public Information for his state association and later served as a trustee of the COA.

NOW, as the recent past president of the Vision Conservation Institute, he says he can relax a little and spend more time with his family and engage in his favorite pastimes of skiing and volleyball.

That's what Larry Babow says. But, he is already active in the Marin Teen-Beat Commission and one can be certain he will find many other new involvements, for that is the type of man he is.

But right now, a new generation of children are learning far more about the eyes and the miracle of vision than their parents did, thanks to Marin County optometrist Larry Babow.

plane crash. "I was his Sunday School teacher," Lester said.

Considering the lull in his sculpturing, Lester's output is impressive. "I'd rather wear out than rust out," he said.

Busts of Jim Thorpe, famed Indian athlete, and Hank Iba, U.S. Olympic basketball coach have been dedicated in Oklahoma.

"I met Jim Thorpe in Oklahoma City autographing baseballs and I said 'I'll do your bust someday,' and he said, in a soft voice, 'you do that,' " Lester said.

HE IS working on a life-sized bronze of the late Martin Luther King for San Bernardino civic center, a memorial at the San Francisco Hall of Justice in honor of officers killed in the line of duty, and several historical figures for museums in Wyoming and Oklahoma.

"This is one of my favorites," he said as he stopped at a bust of Jesse Chisholm. "He was Cherokee and Scotch. I love the face and the Chisholm trail cut near where I lived. Chisholm, who did some freighting with Conestoga wagons, developed a trail that followed creeks and rivers."

At a bust of "Cry Olompali," which had the hair curling upward, he explained, "The Miwoks would have cremation and then a ceremony burying bones so the spirit could jump off Point Reyes and find peace. This one represented the last one who couldn't undergo the ceremony because none was left to take care of him. The hair up signifies the spirit jumping off."

Along his walls are busts of Mayor Alioto, Cesar Chavez, John Wooden, UCLA basketball coach, and many Indians who played a role in U.S. history.

ONE OF his recent works was his bust of Chief Marin, a Miwok Indian, whose name this county bears.

Lester explained how he tackled the problem of creating a bust of Chief Marin, lacking any photograph as a guide.

"Number one, I wanted him to look like an Indian," he said. "Number two, I didn't want him to look like any other North American Indian. I wanted him to look like a Miwok.

"I got in touch with the great-great grandson of Marin and he had a photo of his grandmother. . .and I made a composite of a Miwok with chopped hair to show grief and the characteristic downturned mouth. I found out from skulls dug out of graves, there was no such thing as a typical Miwok skull."

The bust of Chief Marin will be dedicated to the Novato Pre-history museum at 3 p.m. next Saturday, with attendance by invitation only. The museum will be open to the public Nov. 3 from noon to 4 p.m.

LESTER is finishing a bust of Ishi, "last of the Yana Indians, last known stone age survivor in North America and last wild Indian."

Lester, who holds a master's degree in art is teaching mentally retarded high school students in Pittsburg, commuting 2,000 miles a month. "It's the only job I could find. . .others told me I was overqualified and they couldn't afford it."

His diversity has led him to branch into art therapy, which he said is "used when there is a breakdown in oral communication because in a drawing most draw things they most seek to hide" and include their real thoughts and feelings.

He also has a license as a marriage and family counselor, an undertaking he described as a "labor of love."

Lester advocated "unconditional love. . .that kind of love means no phoniness and no game playing which means even in marriage there is no prostitution."

He said he doesn't belong in counseling where "they try to unmask everybody and try to destroy personality. . .to play God.

"I take them where they are, discover where they want to go and help them to become the best person they can become, discovering their own inner resources."

Lester, his wife, Mary Elizabeth, and daughter, Lorraine, six, as one might imagine, have been captured in busts which line the mantel.

> "I didn't want him to look like any other North American Indian. I wanted him to look like a Miwok. I got in touch with the great-great grandson of Marin, and he had a photo of his grandmother . . . and I made a composite of a Miwok, with chopped hair to show grief and the characteristic downturned mouth. I found out from skulls dug out of graves, there was no such thing as a typical Miwok skull."

A BUST OF CHIEF MARIN, Miwok Indian leader, which is to be dedicated to the Novato Pre-history Museum next Saturday is studied by Lester who said the downturned mouth was characteristic of Miwok Indians.

T-Shirt Freak Cavorts In Tiburon

History is a little vague on just who is responsible for uncovering the T-shirt. There are those who can still remember a time when no self-respecting individual would be caught with his T-shirt bared. How tasteless!

Now there are few places where the once lowly T-shirt is not accepted as haute couture. Well, almost.

Maybe the blame for this current fad belongs to Beethoven. Remember not so long ago when everywehre you looked, you saw Beethoven's placid face staring back at you, albeit on sweatshirts and not T-shirts.

OR WAS it the counter-culture movement several years ago that gave birth to the T-shirt, making it the medium for the message? Got a protest. Then get it on your chest. And the anti-establishment establishment did just that.

Put the blame where you will. The T-shirt, no longer anti-establishment, is here in all its emblazoned glory, carrying symbols, slogans and in some cases, just plain graffiti. Who knows? It could well replace the classic sandwich board sign as tomorrow's newest form of transit advertising.

No one, perhaps, has taken such advantage of this newest message medium as has Carter Blakemore Smith, the euphoric, eloquent, ebullient and erudite 3 to 7 p.m. man on KNBR Radio 68 in San Francisco.

Carter, to put it bluntly, is a T-shirt freak. And how does one support such a habit, short of expending funds? Carter just comes out and asks people to send them to him. And send they do. In ever increasing quantities.

IT ALL started as a joke when Carter noted that his mail count was getting low in comparison to the other disc jockeys at KNBR. Frank Dill was getting piles of mail each day for his Uncle Frank's Kennel Klub. And Mike Cleary had been peddling his beer and chowder recipes and getting a good response to that.

And then there was fellow Marinite Dave Niles, who is heard on KNBR from 7 PM to midnight. Every so often, Dave pulls out his time-worn beef jerky recipes when his mail count needs a boost. And every time the requests come pouring in. . .in such quantities that Dave has to bring in outside help to fill the requests.

"I can't believe it," muttered Carter each day as he watched Dave gleefully carry in the daily mail. "That's absurd. Can you imagine. All that mail for beef jerky!"

AND EACH night Carter went home to his Tiburon apartment and mulled over the answer to his mail problem. And thus he hit upon the idea of asking his listeners to give rather than to receive, noting that it is more blessed that way. "Send me your shirts," he said.

His collection now numbers in the eighties and is increasing to such an extent that Carter has already donated his collection to the Smithsonian Institution.

In his donation letter, Carter explained that the "T-shirt could well stand as the most significant chronicle of these times. Emblazoned with messages for every cause, every conceivable reason, the T-shirt of 1974 will become a page of history in itself."

In all fairness, it must be pointed out that Carter donated his collection posthumously for to do so now would be to deplete him of his entire wardrobe.

Keeping track of these T-shirts is a science in itself. Each week, Carter lays out his new acquisitions, catalogs them, marks each one down on his calendar with a future "wear" date and then stacks them in his linen-closet-turned-T-shirt-rack. That way, he never wears one more than once. Heaven forbid. That also saves on laundry bills, too.

CARTER does give credit where credit is due. Each day, he acknowledges the donor of that day's T-shirt at a predetermined time, usually 4:15 P.M.

No longer does Carter hang his head in shame when the daily mail comes in. "It's like Christmas every day," he says. Dave Niles can only frown and mutter something about "Isn't that disgusting. Imagine, begging for clothes." As for Frank Dill, all he can say is "Why didn't I think of that?"

How does the public feel about the T-shirt mania at KNBR? Recently, the five KNBR disc jockeys — Dill, Cleary, Niles, Smith and the midnight fantasy man, Les Williams — attended a party celebrating the end of the 1974 KNBR frog jump season. In a party mood, the crowd started yelling for the KNBR-NBC frog jump shirts right off the guys' backs. In the subsequent auction, one female paid $41 for Carter's shirt and a total of $101 was raised from the sale of four shirts and turned over to the Lafayette Youth Adult Council.

CARTER has also evidence that his T-shirt mania has also benefitted some listeners, as evidenced by this letter from one: "Thanks to your T-shirt modeling on KNBR, I am a new person. . .suddenly a social success with all the men, the life of the party. And all because I bought you a full color Howdy Doody T-shirt. Just for kicks, I decided to try it on and as soon as I slipped it over my 36-24-34 body, I made a startling discovery. I can make Howdy Doody's ears wiggle. So now with your T-shirt and my chest, I am a new woman."

And it should also be mentioned that the principal of a Central California Valley junior high school has been seen lately walking around school in her very own KNBR frog-jump shirt.

The variety of T-shirts on the market today defies description. New heat processes allow an intricate design to be applied to a shirt almost instantly. For others, the silk screen method is still the best around.

AS THE COLLECTION grows, Smith schedules wearing days on his bathroom calendar, so he never wears one more than once. As each new T-shirt arrives, he catalogs them and marks each on the calendar with a "wear date."

By DON FREEMAN

For five years, Herb Alpert's horn was silent. And in that time the Tijuana Brass sound was also rendered temporarily mute, this rollicking, joyously rhythmic sound that had led to the sale of more than 45 million records, an ingratiatingly crisp and yet mellow sound of the mid-'60s.

Last spring, Herb Alpert picked up his horn again and he liked the sound it created. He reorganized a new Tijuana Brass, bringing in Lani Hall, once of Sergio Mendes' Brasil '66, as the vocalist. Herb led his new Brass in a concert tour which began at Harrah's at Lake Tahoe, Nev., and went deep into Texas. The tour brought raves.

The last time I had seen Herb Alpert, a bit more than five years ago, he was in the old Tijuana, Mexico, bullring. They were filming publicity sequences for one of his TV specials. We had sat in the empty arena stands, on the wooden seats, and Herb was congenial, but diffident, soft-spoken, almost shy. There were also uncharacteristic hints of strain.

Five years later, Alpert could explain his low spirits. He could recall his divorce earlier that year and the overwhelming negative feelings that his music had suddenly brought him. "I'd play my horn and nothing was happening," Herb was saying. "The closer I got to the show's taping, the more panicky I became. We did the show but it was a painful experience. It wasn't long after that, I remember, that I put the horn in its case and that's where it stayed."

HERB STILL has the familiar lean look and the easy smile but the diffidence is gone.

He talks now, with directness and candor, about his music and his almost mystical approach to the horn.

"I just couldn't play my horn for those five years," Herb said. "Before I stopped playing, I felt terribly drawn. Maybe the horn was trying to tell me to dial down, relax and find the truth in myself. I needed the time to see what I was all about.

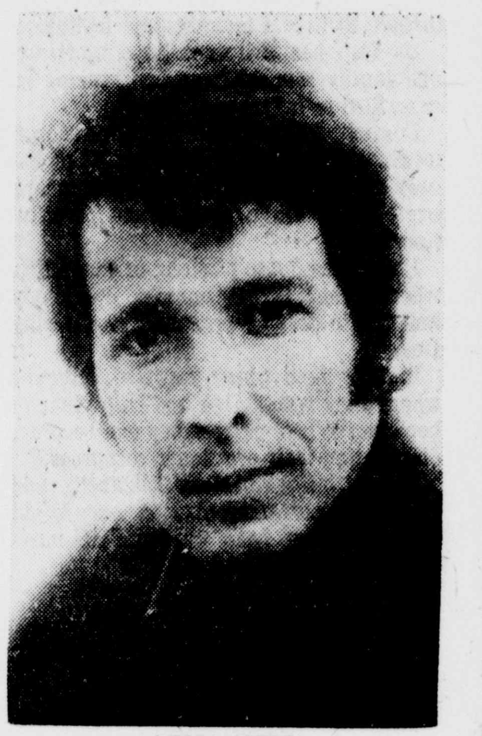
"My trumpet teacher has always told me a horn is just a 'piece of plumbing.' He means that it's just a hunk of tubing you put to your chops, your lips, and make a sound. When things go wrong, so many musicians pick on their instrument when the real problem lies within themselves.

"THE TRUMPET," Herb went on, "is a very personal instrument. It'll do whatever you want it to do. The trumpet has the widest range of the wind instruments and the most flexibility.

"A horn can be loud and piercing and sound like an elephant in a forest or it can sound like a swan on a pond. The trumpet is dynamic and versatile in terms of mood, but for me, the horn must be a positive instrument. It's intended to make me feel good while I'm playing and I want the audience to feel good, too. It should be a warming, happy sound."

Herb says, moreover, that a breakthrough has occurred within himself and this is expressed in his horn and, of course, in the sound of the Brass.

"I used to say I was a trumpet player with a few jazz inclinations," Herb says.



HERB ALPERT
Tijuana brass leader

"Now I say that I'm a jazz musician, period. Before, I'd been afraid to let too much out — both personally and musically. Jazz means freedom, spontaneity. We're playing more jazz, we've taken the old songs and opened them up, with provisions for jazz choruses. So far, it's been fantastic."

WITH THREE musicians from the former Brass — trombonist Bob Edmondson, drummer Nick Ceroli and guitarist John Pisano, plus Julius Wechter, the marimba whiz from the Baja Marimba Band — the nine-piece group retains much of the old Tijuana Brass flavor.

"We haven't made any 180-degree turn," says Alpert. "We're sort of half old way, half new way. The old Brass fans aren't disappointed. And the people who used to think we were corny will be disappointed."

Herb said: "I was listening to some of our past recordings and I could understand why the Brass caused such a commotion. It was more than a sound, it was an attitude that people picked up on. About '68 and '69, the attitude started to wane and the fun disappered. Now it's all back, the sound, the attitude, the fun. The Brass is back."

No Substitute For Fleetwood Mac

RECORD PAGE

By BRUCE MEYER

Fleetwood Mac has spent the past several years quietly establishing its reputation for flawless musicianship and non-boogie rock, staying preety much out of the spotlight when not on stage.

Early this year, the band's manager fielded a substitute group using the FM name.

The fans were not fooled, the substitute group was booed off the stage and the real FM finally won an injunction against their by-then former manager to keep the name.

Now, Mac has a new album — "Heroes Are Hard to Find" Reprise MS-2196 — and from the first note there is no doubt that this is the real thing.

THEIR MUSIC is as it always has been: powerful but not overbearing, sophisticated rock almost completely free of its simple blues roots, compelling in the overall feeling of quality.

Some new albums:

Andy Kim — "Rock Me Gently" (Capitol 111318) a very nearly perfect commercial effort from a Canadian-born Top-40 veteran turned Neil Diamond soundalike. A natural to take over Diamond's empty soft-rock throne, Kim wrote all the songs, played guitar, sang and produced this album. Almost every cut is — like the title track — a potential hit single.

STEPPENWOLF — "Slow Flux" (Mums PZ-33093) An amazing throwback. There is virtually no difference between the sound of the reformed 1974 Steppenwolf and the band that hammered its way to the top of the charts in 1968 with "Born To Be Wild." The only real flaw for Steppenwolf fans on this album is a painfully lame and out-of-character topical tune about Nixon and Watergate called "Justice Don't Be Slow."

Doug Sahm — "Groovers Paradise" (Warners BS-2810) Austin, Texas, has become in 1974 the closest thing we have to what San Francisco was in the late 60's. Doug Sahm — better known to some as the leader of the Sir Douglas Quintet — calls it "groovers paradise." This album is the best thing Doug has done in quite a while, a laid-back collection of country rock 'n' roll ballads; you can almost feel that fine Texas sunshine. Alot of the credit for the album's success must go to former Creedence drummer Doug "Cosmo" Clifford, who produced and handled percussion. Another one-third of Creedence, Stu Cook, played bass.

IT'S RUMORED that Elvis Presley's next album will be entirely spoken word — featuring Elvis' "ad lib" stage humor . . . Jethro Tull returns to the British concert circuit in November after a year's "retirement." Tull's new album is called "Warchild" . . . all woman band Fanny backed Who drummer Keith Moon on his solo album . . . Bad Company took everything in sight in the prestigious 1974 Melody Maker readers poll in England.

Mick Jagger reported going through a batch of vintage Rolling Stones tapes for an LP . . . Elton John is embarked on a three-month U.S. tour . . . David Bowie is mixing a two-record live LP. He reportedly told Zoo World magazine the album represents the end of the "first phase" of his career, whatever that means.

Symphony Not Dead, Just Sleeping

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

Like the novel, the symphony is said to be in trouble in a century whose artists are seeking new forms of expression.

Their search is often to the accompaniment of horrified catcalls from the rest of us. And it can be said with some confidence that the symphony is too big to be forgotten.

AFTER ALL it has been the highest type of instrumental music almost since Haydn and Mozart fixed its modern form in the last half of the 18th Century.

The symphony is not really dead; it is only sleeping.

All the above is by way of reflection while listening at random to a pile of recent recordings of symphonies, none of them very new and linked in little else but being symphonies.

Colin Davis has two recent releases of Beethoven Symphonies with different orchestras for different companies — Symphonies No. 5 and 8 conducting the BBC Symphony (Philips 6500 462) and No. 7 conducting the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (Angel S-37027). With reason, Davis is one of the hottest of the current conductors. These are fine readings.

A TECHNICAL and artistic note is that in Symphony No. 5 Beethoven enlarged the orchestra left by Haydn and Mozart by adding piccolo, double bassoon and three trombones. In both Nos. 7 and 8, he returned to earlier, smaller orchestras.

Hector Berlioz wrote his epoch making Symphonie Fantastique at the age of 26 as the musica story of his infatuation for the Irish actress Harriet Smithson, whom he later unfortunately married. It is still vivid, fresh and controversial. Sir Georg Solti and the Chicago Symphony give a masterful performance of it that is exciting (London CS6790).

Brahms wrote four symphonies which have been considered as the greatest after Beethoven in point of time. Sir Adrian Boult leads the London Philharmonic in a fine recording of No. 2 on a recent Angel release (S-37032). On the reverse side, Mezzo Janet Baker sings the Alto Rapsody Brahms wrote as a bridal song for Julie Schumann.

Camille Saint-Saens wrote three fine symphonies. No. 3 has many recordings. Nos. 1 and 2 have just had their first stereo recording by Jean Martinon conducting the National Orchestra of the French Radio Television Angel S-36995.

OTHERS:

Haydn's Symphonies No. 95 and 96 played by the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Leonard Bernstein (Columbia M 32598).

Bruckner's Symphony No. 8 played by the New Philharmonic Orchestra under the late, great Otto Klemperer Angel (SB-3799).

Elgar's Symphony No. 1 played by the London Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Daniel Barenboim Columbia M (32807).

Shostakovich's Symphony No. 3 May 1 and No. 11 1905 played by the Moscow Philharmonic under the direction of Kiril Kondrashin (Angel-Melodiya S-40245 and S-40244). These complete the Angel-Melodiya releases of Shostakovich's Symphonies.

IN SEARCH OF THE AMERICAN DREAM:

Changes As Colonists Begin To Believe In Themselves

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of 18 articles exploring the theme, In Search of the American Dream. This article discusses colonial life, its ups and its downs, during the 1750-1775 period. The series is designed as a study course with or without college credit. The other 13 articles will follow each week in the I-J's Marin Living section)

By MICHAEL KAMMEN
Distributed by Copley News Service

A number of the North American colonies had been established with utopian expectations of one kind of another, notably in New England, Pennsylvania, the Carolinas, and Georgia. By the middle of the eighteenth century, however, many of their more wistful (and less realistic) aspirations remained unfulfilled. The New Jerusalem had not been entirely achieved; not even a New Canaan.

Nevertheless, the colonists were neither distressed, by and large, nor disillusioned with their progress as pilgrims in a new world. This essay will focus on the reasons why: the American colonists' sense of what they had achieved, who they were, and what sorts of opportunities — and decisions — lay ahead of them.

"Adams quite clearly did not envision America's being or becoming such a 'Eutopia' and his judgment was increasingly rooted in a firm sense of social reality."

In examining the period from about 1750 until 1775, I shall try to distinguish between what was already then immanent, and what would soon be imminent, between what had been accomplished and what was yet impending.

Eighteenth-century life was considerably more secularized than it had been in the seventeenth. Nonetheless Cotton Mather, the Boston clergyman, and his ministerial colleagues prior to 1750 had, in the words of one authority, "inaugurated an era of apocalyptical expectation in America that did not lose its force until after the American Revolution."

While clergymen worked for an immediate conversion of the American Israel as God's chosen people, they also prepared for the millennium and its aftermath. Given such hopes and apprehensions for the world-to-come, therefore, pious pioneers had no great need for earthy utopias. Temporal perfection was fit work only for the nearsighted or the myopic. God's children looked ahead.

Those who were not of an evangelical persuasion also had compelling reasons to doubt the perfectibility of this life. In 1756 John Adams speculated in his diary upon the consequences if "a nation in some distant region, should take the Bible for their only law Book and every member should regulate his conduct by the precepts there exhibited . . . What a eutopia, what a paradise would this region be," he concluded.

Adams quite clearly did not envision America's being or becoming such a "eutopia," and his judgment was increasingly rooted in a firm sense of social reality.

In 1767 he visited a poor family in Braintree, Mass., where the husband, wife, and five children all occupied "one chamber, which serves them for kitchen, cellar, dining room, parlour, and bedchamber . . . These are the conveniences and ornaments of a life of poverty. These are the comforts of the poor. This is want."

Still, if colonial America was not the best of all possible worlds, it was better than most; and many sincerely believed it to be the best that had ever existed. Evidence of population growth in relationship to environmental resources suggested that inhabitants of the colonies, on the average, married younger, had more children, owned more land, stayed healthier and lived longer than their cousins in the Old World.

Benjamin Franklin, in his famous "Observations Concerning the Increase of Mankind," wrote in 1751 that land was so bountiful and cheap in America, that

> "a labouring man, that understands Husbandry, can in short time save money enough to purchase a piece of new land sufficient for a plantation, whereupon he may subsist a family; such are not afraid to marry; for if they even look far enough forward to consider how their children when grown up are to be provided for, they see that more land is to be had at rates equally easy, all circumstances considered."

The quality of life in America was actually more complex, of course, than Franklin in his optimistic mood let on. Death, for example, was not merely a fact of life, but often an ironic one.

Jonathan Edwards, the greatest colonial theologian and philosopher, died of smallpox in 1758 — one month after being improperly inoculated against the very same dread disease. Bloodletting hastened rather than hindered George Washington's demise in 1799. And some suspected that early American medical practices were scarcely an improvement upon those of primitive witch doctors.

"If social stratification had begun to make its appearance manifest, so too had an ethos of egalitarianism, at least among white males in their civic capacities — an ethos that would come to fruition during the revolution."

In July, 1775, one physician remarked of his fellows that "if they live near the sea, (they) order the patient to take a ride in the country; if inland, to take the sea air and perhaps a turn off in a pilot boat."

Even so, there is strong evidence to support Benjamin Franklin's emphasis upon the beneficial qualities of America's abundant environment. The colonies had a very substantial middle class, even in the plantation economies of the Chesapeake and lower South.

Historians have recently discovered that in Maryland, for example, the percentage of planters with personal wealth in the "middling bracket" — between 100 pounds sterling and 1,000 pounds (approximately equal to $2,577 and $25,770 in 1969 purchasing power) — steadily increased during the period 1710-1760.

In the early part of this period, from 1710-1719, 84 per cent of the planter families had a net worth in personal property of 100 pounds or less, while fewer than 1 per cent of such families had a net worth of 1,000 pounds or more.

By the 1730s, those at the lower end of the scale constituted only 73 per cent, with 2 per cent worth 1,000 pounds or more; and by the 1750s, the comparable figures were 67 per cent and just under 2 per cent.

Thus the intermediate stratum of planting families — with personal wealth between 100 pounds and 1,000 pounds — increased from 15 per cent to 25 per cent to 31 per cent in these years, while the lower echelons decreased in size proportionately.

By 1760, two-thirds of the planter class in Maryland were really lesser farmers, and they were primarily responsible for the growth of that colony's tobacco export.

If social stratification had begun to make its appearance manifest, so too had an ethos of egalitarianism, at least among white males in their civic capacities — an ethos that would come to fruition during the revolution. In 1775 Pennsylvania's laws were deemed "the mildest, and most equitable now in force on the terrestrial globe."

And Thomas Jefferson's bill defining citizenship in Virginia declared that

> "The free white inhabitants of every (one) of the states, parties to the American confederation . . . shall be intitled to all rights, privileges, and immunities of free citizens in this commonwealth, and shall have free egress, and regress, to and from the same, and shall enjoy therein, all the privileges of trade, and commerce, subject to the same duties, impositions and restrictions as the citizens of this commonwealth."

Jefferson's stress upon reciprocal arrangements among citizens of the fledgling states was important because Americans on the eve of the revolution had begun to give serious thought to their common heritage as well as to their diversity.

As John Adams noted in 1776, all of the colonies "differed in religion, laws, customs, and manners, yet in the great essentials of society and government, they are all alike."

The most difficult problem during the two decades prior to 1776, however, was not the colonists' relative commonality or variety, but rather their mutual relationships with Britain. Growing awareness of their parochialism spawned a rising sense of provincial chauvinism. Their customary cultural anglophilia — a preference for English styles in dress, furnishings, and manners — began to be offset by a volatile anglophobia in public affairs.

"Even the meaning of being 'American' began to undergo subtle but significant shifts. For most of the colonial period an 'American' had meant an Indian."

Even the meaning of being "American" began to undergo subtle but significant shifts. For most of the colonial period an "American" had meant an Indian. After 1763, however, polemical essays came to be signed with "Britannus-Americanus" and the like, a sign of change and ambiguity in the colonists' sense of identity.

Eventually the "American Farmer" acquired connotations of patriotism and ethnic comprehensiveness broad enough to include the polyglot sons of European parents, yet exclusive enough to strip the native red Americans of their traditional geographic patronym. What's in a name? Oftentimes a sense of identity, and sometimes even a sense of community.

The more articulate leaders of American society attempted to describe their new sense of self and society. Their definitions depended partly upon economic assets and upon rustic simplicity and educational opportunity.

And in part they were predicated upon growing unity in political matters — what one prominent liberal clergyman called, in 1766, a "communion of colonies."

Raising the colonists' cultural aspirations, and raising their literacy rates as well, had ideological implications not fully foreseen or understood before 1775.

Early in the 1770s, Franklin wrote that the numerous new subscription libraries had "improved the general conversation of the Americans, made the common tradesmen and farmers as intelligent as most gentlemen from other countries, and perhaps have contributed in some degree to the stand so generally made throughout the colonies in defense of their privileges."

The provincials thus began to believe in themselves; and, wonderfully but intangibly, the belief helped to transform them. Their rustic deficiencies now appeared as advantages if not, indeed, as virtues.

To wear a "leathern apron" became a high mark of republican status, and no longer the debased condition of boorish journeymen. British subjects were about to become American citizens; and the critical stages in their metamorphosis required both virtue and republicanism. Between 1776 and 1787, therefore, the Americans would have to redefine the meaning and implications of those two concepts.

Music can faintly be heard
Floating down from the open window.
The streets are littered and muddy.
Graffiti is scribbled on the worn fences.
The stairs are old and broken and the door needs paint.
The flat has a pecular smell that I can't make out.
Last week's paper on the table.
Yesterday's dishes in the sink.

The Future Is Closing In On Man

MY PETITION FOR MORE SPACE by John Hersey; Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., $5.95, 182 pages. Reviewed by Rucha Robinson.

The future becomes less fantastic to us the closer it resembles the world we live in and our visions of futuristic chrome monsters ruling and controlling us are replaced by a mroe realistic vision of man reaping his own foolish karma.

Such is the world John Hersey shows us in "My Petition for More Space:" people living elbow to elbow, shuffling to work in never-ending masses, subsisting on protein allotments, assigned jobs, petitions entered and denied, a faceless bureaucracy. It is not yet our world, but it is not so difficult to imagine.

People crowd upon each other so densely packed that privacy is no longer defined as being alone, but as feeling alone. They live and sleep in communal halls, and are given space according to the size of family (which is never larger than three) and the quality of the living quarters.

Samuel David Poynter has stood in line for six days to enter his petition for more

Identity, however, is not such an easy thing to establish. It is not simply how others see us, or how we see ourselves; it does not rest only in what we own, or even what we wish for or hope for or feel we need. Perhaps it is a combination of all of these. The masses around him and the swarms trudging off the work each bear their own mark, and "the thought of being lost in fusion with vivid individualities is far more terrifying then, let us say, facelessness, ego-failure, anomie, exile."

By the end of his wait, Samuel David Poynter has indeed been given more space. It is not the physical space he is petitioning for, but psychic space, a kind of self-induced anomie that separates him from the masses. And in a world where success has different names and guises, this can be called succeeding.

Looks at future

space in the sleeping-hall. He lives in an area seven by eleven feet. He wants his space increased to eight by twelve which is the maximum for a single person. Each previous day he has had to leave for work before reaching the windows. Today he hopes to succeed.

The book covers the last hours he spends in the waitline before reaching the windows. If reaching the windows can be termed success, he does in fact succeed.

Petitions, one gets the feeling, are never granted. Outright success is never assured, or doesn't seem to exist, so it must be given different names and guises if it is to exist in any form. "I wonder how I am going to start off," Sam thinks. "I will clear my throat and say, 'My petition is for more space in the sleeping-hall.' That is direct, but it sounds weak. I must assert my right to what I want. I must get across to whoever or whatever is behind the window that I am special."

What is being special? It is not so simple as having an identity. Everyone, after all, has an identity. After four hours of the waitline, Sam begins to see people by the parts of their bodies he can identify.

Florida History Strong But Writing Monotonous

SATAN'S BACK YARD by Sam J. Slate; Doubleday, 254 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Paul Helford.

Sam J. Slate's "Satan's Back Yard" is not another "Exorcist"-spinoff. The title refers to the state of Florida, an area which was a center for pirates, outlaws, and mercenaries before it was purchased by the United States.

A good historical novel should present familiar places as they once were and historical figures as they might have been. There is plenty of both in "Satan's Back Yard." Author Slate takes his readers from Washington D.C. (where the capital building, after four coats of paint, has just been nicknamed the White House) through South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida.

A fictional character, Jonathon Ames, is sent by President Madison, Thomas Jefferson, and Secretary of War, William Crawford to join General Gregor MacGregor who plans to free Florida from Spanish rule.

Slate knows his history and obviously put a great deal of effort into research. Unfortunately the same cannot be said about the writing.

The writing is dull, and the tone, monotonous. The conversations are unbelievable and are conveniently used to add historical tidbits or heavy-handedly further the action. None of the characters have depth, and some are painful stereotypes.

There is for example, a black slave who not only has common sense and saves his white master's hide over and over, but also has knowledge about everything that comes up — the sea, liquor, Indians, weaponry, women.

There is a lustful Spanish woman whose husband is old and away, thus giving her the opportunity to teach the way of flesh to a young Puritan. And despite their accents, the slave, the woman, a French captain, and a Scottish general all sound alike.

"Satan's Back Yard" is less dry than a history text book, but unless historical novels are a passion of yours, I wouldn't recommend it.

Joan Kennedy Seeks Self Away From Family Aura

"JOAN THE RELUCTANT KENNEDY" by Lester David; Funk and Wagnalls Publishing Co. 264 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Joan Lisetor.

In the final sentence of the book, "Joan the Reluctant Kennedy," author Lester David sums up the entire book, "No longer intimidated by the Kennedy name and dazzle, Joan is learning to be her own woman now, seeking fulfillment, not in what the family holds dear and expects, but in her friends, her music, her children, her own life."

At 26 Joan Bennett Kennedy came to Washington, D.C., the wife of a handsome young senator, sister-in-law of the President and the Attorney General. She lived a brief fairy tale life until the day tragedy struck for the first time since she had become a Kennedy — Nov. 22, 1963. The tragic events she has faced since that day are history, but less known are the personal frustrations with which Mrs. Kennedy has struggled.

David has woven into the book interesting anecdotes about other members of the Kennedy family and about other Washington women, which serve to further illustrate the personality of Joan Kennedy, showing her in contrast to those around her.

Quotes from many persons close to her and from psychologists and psychiatrists who have never met her delve into the personality of this woman portrayed as an individual struggling for self confidence, for attention and to overcome her insecurities and anxieties.

Unfortunately, the well written and interesting book is a masterpiece in poor timing. Written while curiosity was growing and Americans were asking, "What is this woman really like who might be our first lady?" its publication date coincided with her husband's announcement that he will not seek the presidency in 1976.

Novel Of Prison Life Has Emotional Reality

(Editor's Note: The reviewer, Albert F. Nussbaum is serving a 40-year sentence in a federal penitentiary in Marion, Ill., for multiple bank robberies. In recent years his stories and articles have appeared in periodicals including Arthur Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine, The American Scholar and Harper's.)

LETHAL GAS by Ron Kurz; M. Evans & Co., 247 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Albert F. Nussbaum.

The best of the prison novels of the past ("On the Yard," for example), good as they were, failed to convey a completely accurate impression of the subtle, but devastating effect confinement often has on a man's perceptions. For instance, time compresses as though it were under the same pressure as the prisoners — a month may seem like a day to a man who has been locked up for a long time and has more of the same to look forward to.

Once a man adjusts to the prison routine, he fights any changes in it; for, if the routine is broken, so is this spell that has been cast on time. Time will begin to drag until a new routine can be established and he once again speeds toward his release date. Routine, and the illusion of rapidly passing time that accompanies it, is probably the only thing that keeps a man with an excessively long sentence from going insane.

I never thought anyone would be able to capture the prison experience on a printed page. It seemed to me there were far too many things that had to be lived to be believed, and most of them couldn't be described as easily as the time phenomenon. I was certain that no one who wasn't a prisoner, or who hadn't been a prisoner, could even come close.

I was wrong.

Ron Kurz has done a very credible job. Kurz uses beautifully conceived official reports, memos, diary pages, transcripts, newspaper clippings and equally expert narrative to tell his story of an unsophisticated black prisoner and the young white guard who befriends him.

RON KURZ
Tale of prison

Rather than attempt to show a reality that would seem bland at best, he has recreated the emotional experience. Through the carefully restrained use of black humor, distortion and hyperbole, he makes readers feel the anger, horror, futility and impotence that until now only prisoners and their keepers have ever known.

"Lethal Gas" has many of the same qualities as "Catch 22" while avoiding the major flaw, excessive length, of that modern classic. Actually, page for page, "Lethal Gas" is a far better book. I think Ron Kurz went completely crazy during the last 20-odd pages, but, except for that, I feel he has created a near-perfect book.

Mysteries About Poe Base Of Clever Plot

A SINGULAR. CONSPIRACY by Barry Perowne; Bobbs-Merrill, 209 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lee Hopkins.

Two mysteries surround the life and work of Edgar Allan Poe. The first is his whereabouts from January to May 1844. And the second is the extraordinarily high reputation his work enjoys in France, where it was first translated by Poe's contemporary, the dark minded poet Charles Baudelaire.

Veteran novelist Barry Perowne has entwined these two enigmas into a flawed but entertaining novel entitled "A Singular Conspiracy."

Through a melodramatic but plausible device believable when applied to a man so histrionic as Poe, "A Singular Conspiracy" takes our bending and tippling author of "The Gold Bug" and other tales to Paris to fill the five-month gap in his biography.

Once in Paris, Poe, a failed West Pointer with dreams of glory, is turned down in his application to join a group of officers going to the assistance of the Polish movement for independence from Russia. The general who emphatically rejects Poe has a stepson, none other than Charles Baudelaire, whom he treats with the same disdain.

Poe and Baudelaire, already united in their pursuit of bigger than life dissipation, complete their budding friendship with shared hatred of the general, and plan a conspiracy.

What ensues is a very clever plot, the kind of audacious scheme that Poe just might have concocted. Barry Perowne takes his two strange characters around and about the gas lit diversions of nineteenth century Paris, weaving a good escapist tale.

Perowne's only drawback is his sometimes excessive prose, full of old fashioned adjectives and similies. Scarlet ladies wear diaphanous garments, diadems are regal, hair is raven, and a black girl's body glows like burnished ebony. All this takes the reader back years to the thrillers of Sax Rohmer and Edgar Wallace, though it is a rather nice time trip.

Diamond Theft At Tiffany's

THE TIFFANY CAPER by Joseph Purtell; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 256 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Joseph Purtell is a writer — a former Time magazine editor turned weekly newspaper publisher — who has authoried a history of Tifany's, the famous jewelry firm.

In Purtell's novel, "The Tiffany Caper," his chief character is Robert Castle, a writer, commissioned to do a history of Tiffany's.

Purtell thus began with a considerable amount of his spadework already done.

In his freewheeling story, Castle is pressured by a jewel thief into participating in the theft of the 128-carat Tiffany diamond. Only Castle's inside knowledge and access will make the heist possible. And if Castle won't cooperate, the thief will kill the writer's kookie but lovable girl friend Jennifer O'Shea.

The heist comes off, but that is just the beginning. Castle and Jennifer decide upon a counter-ploy to recover the gem and clear their names. What follows is fast-paced and hectic, told in a breezy, humorous style. The dialogue is often witty and funny. Yet it would be overpraise to say "The Tiffany Caper" succeeds completely. There are spots where the humor doesn't come off. And times when the whole thing seems too shallow even for a spoof.

Summed up, the novel is enjoyable enough. But also forgettable. As these kind of things usually are, and perhaps as they should be.

SENATOR SAM ON WATERGATE

"I think that the Watergate tragedy is the greatest tragedy this country has suffered. I used to think that the Civil War was our country's greatest tragedy, but I do remember that there were some redeeming features in the Civil War in that there was some spirit of sacrifice and heroism displayed on both sides. I see no redeeming features in Watergate." Sen. Sam Ervin in "The Wisdom of Sam Ervin," published by Ballantine.

Thorp Dissects Suburban Life

Thorp, who zeroed in on police work in his best-seller, "The Detective," has in this new novel broadened his scope to cover many lives in a contemporary suburban community.

In an accurate reflection of life in such communities, he presents a story that could apply aptly to Marin, leaving the reader with a feeling of familiarity with the characters.

The story, centered around the killing of a teen-ager by a young police officer, reaches into the lives of the young and old, parents and children, officials and rebels.

The impact of conflicts and events, however, are diffused by the seeming multitude of characters and the device of switching from place to place a la television cuts.

THE NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

For "philodendron phans," Joel and Lynn Rapp (Mr. and Mrs. Mother Earth) have followed their highly successful "Mother Earth's Hassle-Free Indoor Plant Book" of 1973 with a sequel, "Grow With Your Plants the Mother Earth Hassle-Free Way."

J. P. Tarcher Inc., 9110 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, is the publisher, and Hawthorn Books the distributor.

In their new book the Rapps emphasize the pleasures and personal growth that can come from the plant-growing experience. "This is not just a book about what you can do for your plants," they advise. "This is a book about what your plants will do for you."

But along with the philosophizing, there is also some practical advice on growing plants indoors. The drawings, again, are by Marvin Rubin. And the whole thing is kept at a chatty, breezy level, although you are given to understand that the Rapps are serious about their mission as "missionaries of the green."

The new book sells for $4.95 paperback, $7.95 hardcover.

ALFRED A. KNOPF puts out annually a diary featuring a selection for each week from "The Prophet" and other writings of Kahlil Gibran, and the 1975 diary is out, beautifully bound and designed as in the past. "One May not reach the dawn save by the path of the night," reads the quotation for the week of March 24. And for June 2-8: "They deem me mad because I will not sell my days for gold. And I deem them mad because they think my days have a price." But the diary has a price — $5.

THE BIG NEW thing in gardening is hydroponics or the substitution of water and mineral salts for soil in the growing of plants. James Sholto Douglas has written extensively upon the subject, including "Beginner's Guide to Hydroponics," now published as a $2.95 paperback by Drake Publishers.

"JUNK SCULPTURE" is a new Sterling Little Craft Book Series title, $2.95, by Gregg Lefebre, teacher and sculptor, using projects created by his own sixth grade students from materials picked up in vacant lots and out of trash cans.

PAUL WOOD offers instruction and inspiration for beginners in his craft in "Starting With Stained Glass," published by Sterling at $2.95.

Story Of The Archaelogist Who Discovered Ancient Troy

THE DREAM OF TROY, by Arnold C. Brackman, Mason and Lipscomb, 246 pages, $10.00. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

Who was Heinrich Schliemann? Discoverer of ancient Troy, avid amateur archaeologist, wild wielder of pick and shovel, business genius and multi-millionaire.

Arnold C. Brackman has written an objective account of this brilliant, dedicated and difficult man and has, in a small way, also explored the mania that must motivate all archaeologists.

Schliemann, destined to be the world's best-known digger of ancient civilizations, was for years the bane of professors and scientists. Only recently has he gained their reluctant acceptance.

Yet during his two decades as a practicing archaeologist — 1870 to 1890 — he brought to their dusty science the glamour and publicity that has made life easier, via public interest and ensuing financial grants, ever since.

In the beginning Schliemann was poor. But he made millions, then concentrated on proving that Homer's Troy actually existed. His methods were crude and wasteful. He cut a vast trench straight through a hill, wrecking centuries of ruins. Yet he found hoards of golden treasure and, though he didn't recognize it as such, he located the Troy of "The Iliad."

Writer Brackman throws a bright light on some of the more shadowy aspects of Schliemann's career: his first, unhappy marriage; his second, idyllic mail-order marriage to a Greek girl half his age; his business ventures, which included gun-running and the amassing of a second fortune during the California gold rush.

Brackman is no Richard Halliburton and this biography is more factual than romantic. Nevertheless, his style is crisp and his story recommended to all Trojan, Schliemann, and archaeological buffs.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE GOOD THIEF, By Robert Rosenblum; Doubleday, 208 Pages. $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Craig.

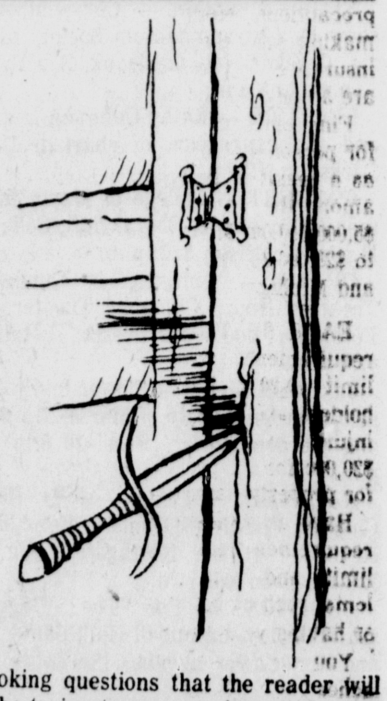
Father Quelloni died over his solitary spaghetti dinner. For an old and corpulent priest this death did not seem remarkable.

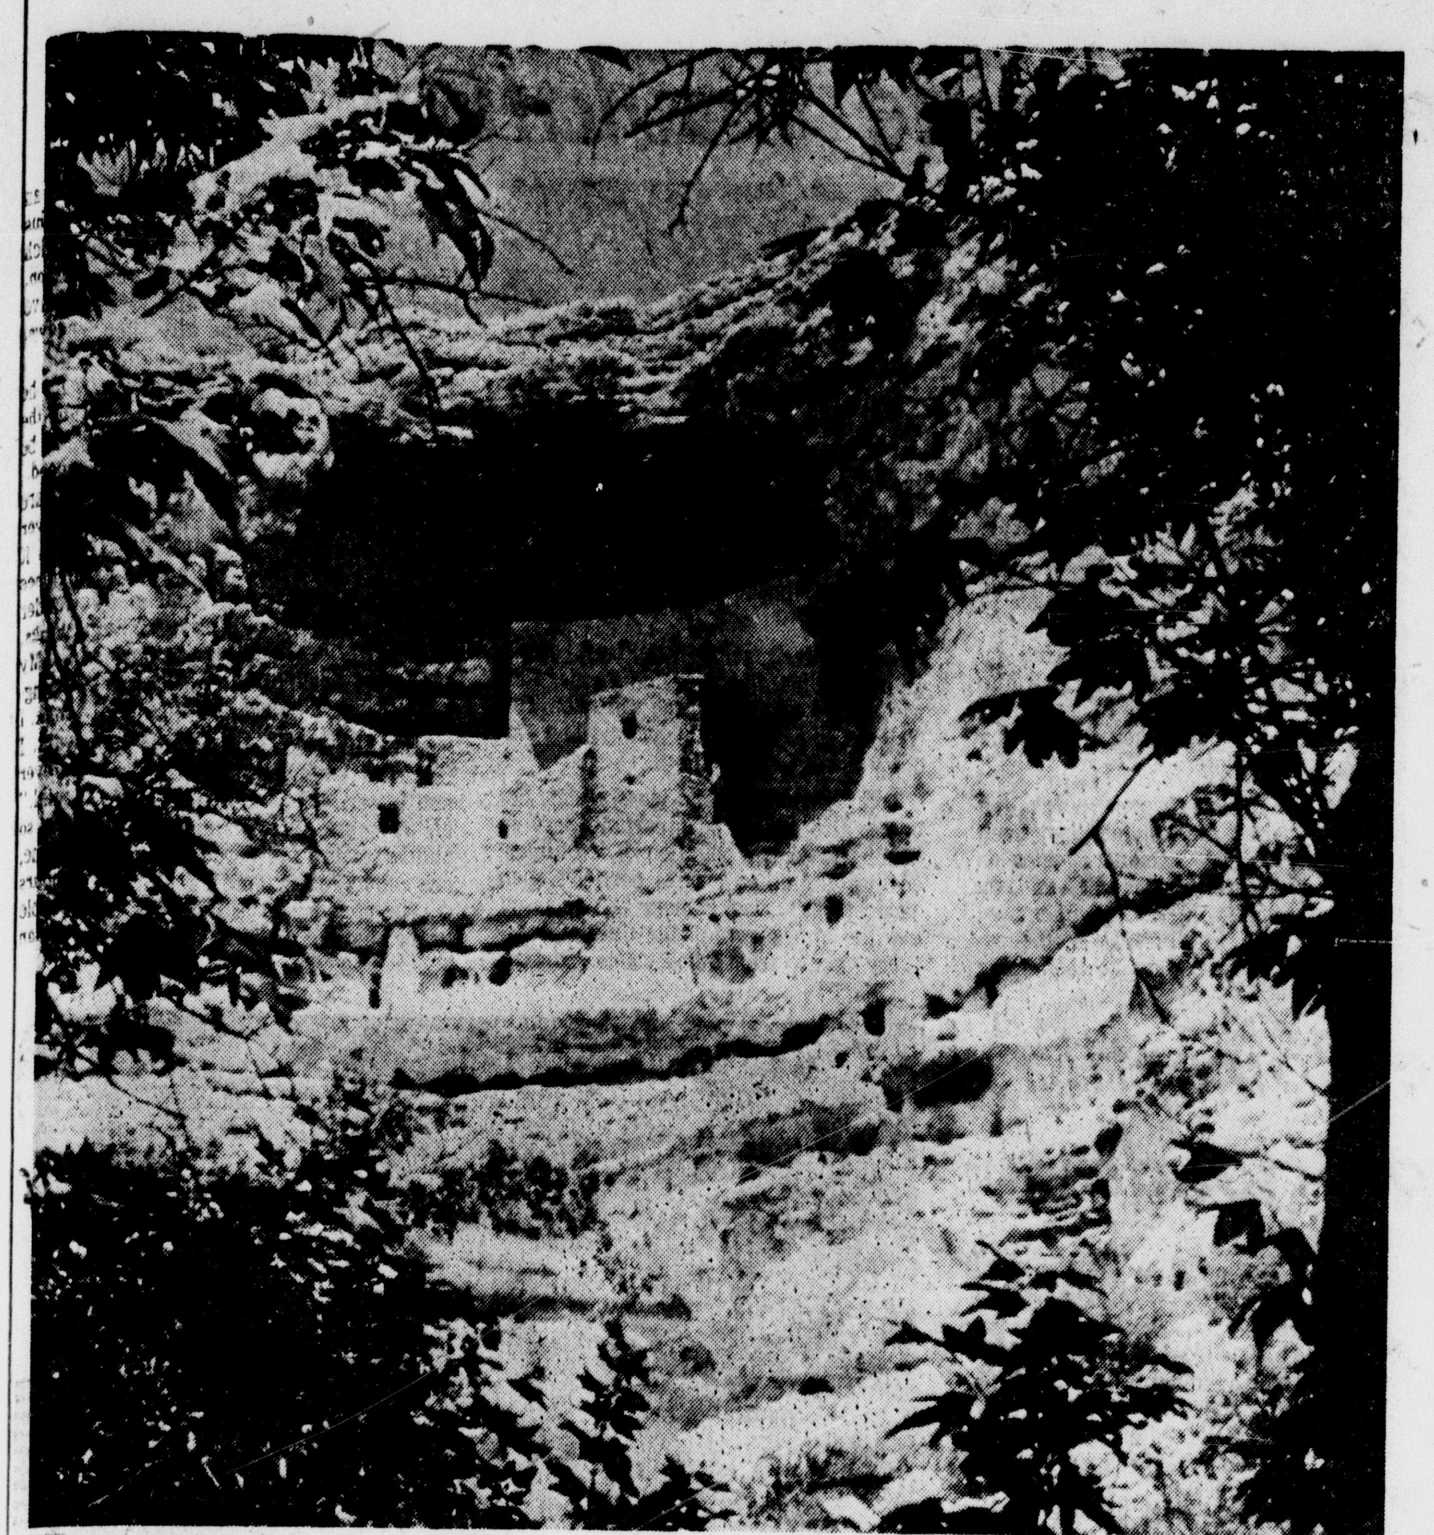
It was remarkable for Pete Reno, an ex-New York Cop with his own security business, to be summoned to Italy to launch a secret probe into Father Quelloni's death and the last years of his life.

His parishioners embraced the simple theory that their priest was needed in heaven. Wasn't he a saint . . . having dispensed to the villagers operations, artificial limbs, tractors, even modern kitchens, to the tune of what Pete Reno ticketed at near a half a million dollars in value?

Reno's increasingly dangerous investigation of this Robin Hood of the church leads him to hoods of less holy mien and more violent means.

This expert tale of the eternal war between avarice and purity asks some provoking questions that the reader will still be trying to answer after all the plot lines are tried.





ONE OF THE BEST preserved Indian dwellings in the Southwest is Montezuma Castle at Montezuma Castle National Monument in Arizona. The pueblo is a five-story structure which could have accommodated 12 to 15 families.

Montezuma Castle Quiet

TRAVEL PAGE

By RONALD H. WALKER
Director, National Park Service

"Think of gettin' clear up there with a jug of water and dropping it!" The youngster standing 100 feet below the lowest rooms of Montezuma Castle shook his head in sympathy.

The 19-room ruin, one of the best preserved Indian dwellings in the Southwest, is the major feature of Arizona's Montezuma Castle National Monument.

The monument also includes Montezuma Well, a nearly limestone sink, and a second set of ruins known as Castle "A." The monument can be easily reached from Interstate 17 between Phoenix and Flagstaff.

NATIONAL PARK rangers at the monument explain to visitors that 250 people probably lived within the castle boundaries somewhere between 110 and 1450 A.D.

The people, called Sinagua (Spanish for "without water"), were farmers. They lived high in cliffs and grew corn, squash, beans and cotton in the fertile Verde Valley below them.

The valley and the cliff dwellings haven't changed much during the intervening centuries. A pleasant modern development at this ancient site is the warm hospitality displayed by the uniformed park service personnel on duty.

They have an enthusiasm for the place that is catching, and respond eagerly to visitors' questions.

Twice a year, Dan Murdock of the park staff leads inspection trips up into the castle to check on the stability of the structure. He says it's quiet up there and the view is great.

DAN GREW up in the valley and remembers playing in the ruins as a child. Visitors could tour Montezuma Castle until 1951 when it was closed to the public for safety reasons, and to protect the fragile state of the ruins.

Even today, falls are a major safety hazard and visitors are cautioned to stay on the marked trails.

Today, Bob Huncilman says that the first question people ask him is how the residents got up to the cliff "apartments." The answer is ladders. Bob is a VIP at Montezuma Castle. VIP stands for Volunteer-In-Parks, as well as Very Important Person. He was an Indianapolis stockbroker for 34 years before moving West to get out-of-doors.

Now he spends several days each week helping visitors imagine what went on in those cool, quiet rooms, when the Sinaguan people lived in them.

DOWN ON the ground, the path leading through the monument is quite level. Montezuma Castle is one of the few Indian ruins that's easy to negotiate in a wheel chair or with a stroller; indeed, the park service keeps a wheel chair handy to lead to handicapped visitors. Guided tours are always available to groups.

Another special touch from those helpful people is an informational brochure that is published in four foreign languages — French, German, Spanish and Japanese. An Italian version will soon be ready.

Not long ago, Barbara Monroe, of the monument staff, had an experience with a different type of communication: interpreting Castle "A" (which is still open to the public) to a group of blind visitors.

The tour she gave to these 90 sightless persons now helps her give more fortunate visitors another dimension in "seeing." They felt the rocks and mortar and even climbed steep staircases so they could crawl into small rooms and feel the cool air inside the 12-inch-thick stone walls.

NO ONE really knows where the Sinaguans came from or where they went. The castle ruin, 90 per cent of which is original, is a clue to their life and stands like a sentinel over the sun-soaked land.

Only seven miles up the road, Montezuma Well is a water-filled limestone sink that looks like a turquoise mirage in the desert. The sink hole is 125 feet deep, measures 470 feet across, and is about half-filled with water.

A million and a half gallons flow into the well each day from underground springs, and the same amount flows out through ancient irrigation ditches. The irrigation system was built by the Hohokam Indians as long as 11 centuries ago, even before the Sinaguans arrived.

Today, the ditches have become cement-lined by the limestone in the water. They are testament to the farming methods and life-styles of the people whose homes lie at the edge.

NEITHER the well nor the castle are associated with the Aztec emperor of the same name. A legend tells that the first people here were Aztecs, escaping from their Spanish conquerors in central Mexico. The tale has been disproved; the name has hung on.

Both areas have rest room facilities and shady picnic grounds. In nearby Camp Verde, six miles away, all services are available. Phoenix is 94 miles to the south and Flagstaff 54 miles north.

There is excellent camping in the Verde Valley and nearby points of interest include Tuzigoot National Monument, a Sinaguan site with a wonderful museum; the ghost town of Jerome, perching on the side of Mingus Mountain; Fort Verde State Park, and Oak Creek Canyon. All are open the year-round.

Motorist Liability Insurance Varies

By MURRAY J. BROWN

It costs more this year, what with higher gasoline and other prices, but the family car is still the most popular means of travel for Americans, whether on vacation, weekend holidays or daily recreational trips.

LOWER SPEED limits imposed to combat fuel shortages have been credited with cutting down highway deaths. But with millions of vehicles on the roads, accidents are bound to happen.

So motorists are well advised to take precautions before starting out, including making sure they carry enough liability insurance to protect them in case they are among the unlucky ones.

Financial responsibility requirements for personal injury and property damage as a result of automobile accidents vary among the states, ranging from a low of $5,000-$10,000-$1,000, or 5-10-1 in Louisiana to $20,000-$40,000-$10,000 20-40-10 in Maine and Michigan.

EACH STATE sets its own minimum requirements with the most common limit 10-20-5. That means most policy holders are covered for up to $10,000 for injuries to an individual but no more than $20,000 for all persons injured and $5,000 for property damage in a single accident.

Have an accident in a state with higher requirement than your current insurance limits and there could be serious problems, such as being forced to post a bond or having your license suspended.

You can help avoid such possible headaches by checking in advance with your insurance agent or broker, said John P. Kennedy, vice president of Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

"It shouldn't take long — they know the requirements in the different states and can tell you if your policy limits are high enough for where you plan to drive," he said.

He added that motorists also should find out whether their policies comply with No Fault insurance laws now in effect in states on the itinerary.

If you plan to rent a car, Kennedy noted that most rental firms include insurance. In addition, he said most motorists are covered by their own auto insurance when driving rented or borrowed cars so it may not be necessary to purchase extra coverage.

"Again," he said, "the traveler planning to drive someone else's car should call his insurance agent and make sure he is properly covered against personal injury and property damage resulting from an accident on the road."

Kennedy said most domestic policies will cover U.S. motorists visiting Canada and agents will provide a card showing proof of such protection when asked.

FOUR provinces in Canada require motorists to carry $50,000 "inclusive" coverage while eight others have a $35,000 limit. The "inclusive" means that up to those sums must be available to settle either bodily injury or property damage claims, or both.

If you are planning to drive south of the border, however, you will have to buy extra insurance. Your U.S. policy will not be recognized in Mexico. Mexican law requires automobile liability insurance policies be written by Mexican companies.

Short-term policies can be purchased at most U.S. border cities if your agent is unable to obtain the necessary coverage in advance.

At any rate, Kennedy said: "Wherever the driving is done, motorists should keep handy the name, address and telephone number of their insurance agent; the name of their insurance company; their policy number, and copies of insurance claims forms."

And don't forget your ownership documents and driving licenses.

Waterfowl Stop At Richardson Bay

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of columns by naturalist Elizabeth Terwilliger of Mill Valley, whose hiking, bicycling and canoeing trips are an adventure and whose conservation work has been honored. Her column will appear twice a month in the I-J's Marin Living.)

By ELIZABETH TERWILLIGER

Buckeye leaves are dropping. Watch for the light brown velvet textured seed pods taking shape on curving, down-bent branch tips. Listen for the grey squirrels chattering in bay and oak trees, and watch for their rapid running movement when the leafy branchlets bend, as if blown by a sudden gust of wind.

Take a canoe or bike trip or walk along Richardson Bay to observe early migrating waterfowl. Pintails are arriving on the marsh at shoreline and have been seen in early flight. Remember migrating waterfowl fly at night and rest during the day.

IN FLIGHT watch for the dark brown head of the pintail as contrasted to its long, thick, white neck. The first coots have arrived. Observe the small white bill, the velvet black head and dark grey sateen-like body. Watch how they stroll so easily, lifting each green lobed foot gracefully from the soft mud. And as they paddle in the water notice the jerky movement of thin heads.

Watch the soft brown colored, long-legged godwit probe the shore with its six-inch, upcurved, black tipped orange bill, and watch how he maneuvers his catch along the bill to his throat.

ELIZABETH TERWILLIGER
Viewing nature

Watch the least sandpipers, so tiny, yet so capable, walking slowly, and at other times, so rapidly, they seem to float over the earth's surface.

Watch their quicklittle jabs, made with their tiny bills, as contrasted to the probing of the larger longer billed clay-colored willets, who, when not in motion, match the shore on which they stand, silently hiccoughing. Listen for their loud la-la-la call when in flight, and the questioning single high bleep when alone, as though wondering if any of his kind are near. Look for Scaup ducks, grey sided and black headed, floating quietly and smoothly on the water.

AN IMMATURE black crowned night heron, dressed in brown and beige stripes may be seen poised in Blackie's Pasture Creek paying no heed to bicyclists or quiet watchers, as he awaits a chance to snatch a passing meal.

Listen for the high cry of the killdeer, a robin sized, white bellied bird, with black chest bands and sand colored back and tail. Watch for the jerky low flight of the tiny spotted sandpiper, and listen for his plaintive repeated single note. See how he teeters up and down, as though all out of breath, after landing.

Some pickleweed is just starting to turn reddish orange. A few branchlets are putting forth minute pale yellow blossoms. Sea lavender, whose long oval dark green leaves form a rosette base for the slender tall stalks which support the lovely lavender blossoms, is growing just higher than salt water level. Feel the soft texture of the leaves and their coolness.

Cord grass is in full head, its long pointed leaves a gorgeous yellow-green, and as the wind and soft waves move against it and through it, remember it grows further into the bay than any other plant. The movement is like the rhythm of a symphony. And when the water is still, the reflection of the cord grass, on the water, resembles a beautiful painting.

Oregon Coastline Spectacular, Practically All Public Shoreline

Many veteran travelers have proclaimed Oregon's magnificent coastline the most beautiful in the world. Others, a bit more cautious, simply say it is one of the most spectacular coastlines anywhere.

But all agree on one thing; it is the most accessible coastline the motorist will find anywhere. The full length of the 400-mile shore is paralleled by U.S. Highway 101, swinging gently along glistening crescent beaches, climbing over forested headlands that plunge abruptly into the sea, pausing to join in the bustle of busy fishing ports and resort communities and curving easily around sheltered coves. And, all but a few miles of the beaches are public shorelines.

THE OREGON coast offers activities to match its views — Salmon fishing on chartered craft offshore, golfing on lush green courses where the ocean is out of bounds, horseback riding or bicycling on forest trails and surfwashed beaches, sunbathing on smooth white sand, camping in forested state parks and beachcombing amid artistically shaped pieces of sun-bleached driftwood.

Some of the nation's finest parks adorn the shoreline like a string of emeralds. There are almost as many reasons for parks as there are parks — huge sand dunes, unique geological formations, a lighthouse, fresh water lakes, picturesque bays, wild flowers and unusual trees.

From the lily and azalea flower center of Brookings on the southern end of the coast northward to Gold Beach, Highway 101 is flanked by colorful mountains and foothills on one side and dramatic seascapes on the other along one of its most scenic stretches.

Between the communities of Gold Beach and Wedderburn, the famed Rogue River empties into the sea. A ride on a jet boat upstream into the heart of the wilderness along this Oregon Scenic Waterway is a popular vacation attraction.

FURTHER NORTH, Cape Blanco lighthouse towers above what is the furthest point west in Oregon. Most intriguing rock formations and forested headlands dominate the setting between here and Coos Bay, the largest lumber shipping port in the world. The Coos Bay-North Bend area also is the site for Myrtlewood factories which convert the hard and rare wood into polished gift items.

The giant sand dunes of the Oregon Dunes National Recreation Area separate Highway 101 and the ocean for the next 21 miles after leaving Coos Bay-North Bend. At Honeyman State Park, children find a dream come true in acres and acres of high dunes dotted by a series of clear blue freshwater lakes.

Only a few miles away, a National Forest visitor's center and camp atop Cape Perpetua offers a spectacular view of miles of undulating shoreline.

Northward, the Sea Lion Caves are a popular gathering spot for both Stellar's Sea Lions and thousands of human visitors. A modern elevator takes guests from the high bluff into the caves where the marine animals take refuge from ocean storms.

AT HISTORIC Newport, fishing craft sail in and out of the bay while visitors watch from Yaquina Bay State Park overlooking the entrance. An undersea aquarium takes one to view sea life at its own level. Across the bay, the Oregon State University Marine Science Center has its own aquarium and display on oceanography.

At Depoe Bay, spectators stand on the highway bridge to watch sport fishing craft sail beneath them through the narrow rock-lined channel to sea.

A few miles north, at Lincoln City, is Devil's Lake, holder of many small boat speed records. Connecting it to the ocean, just a few yards away, is the D River, shortest river in the world.

$ TRAVELSAVER SEMINAR $
Learn How To Save On Your Travel Budget

A panel of travel professionals, with a total accumulation of over ten million miles and a century's worth of travel, will present their full day seminar of lectures and group discussions. You will learn the secrets of stretching your travel dollar to effectively provide more for less. Even the most experienced international traveler is guaranteed to benefit from these eight hours of tips covering all aspects of planning and arranging your travel requirements - via the family car to Disneyland - a business trip to the Midwest - or a deluxe Round-the-World Air/Sea Cruise. The $30 registration fee includes eight hours of lectures, discussions and lunch. Registrants may invite guests to audit the Seminar for $15 each.

THE PROGRAM WILL INCLUDE DOLLAR SAVING TIPS AS RELATED SPECIFICALLY TO:
• PLANNING • RESERVATIONS • ALL FORMS OF TRANSPORTATION • HOTELS AND MOTELS • FOREIGN EXCHANGE • TIPPING • GROUP TRAVEL vs. "DO IT YOURSELF" • AND "MANY OTHER" TOPICS DESIGNED BY THE STAFF OF THE TRAVELSAVER SEMINAR.

Trees, Shrubs Provide Insulation

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

You can actually plant your house insulation and pollution control.

Studies recently released by the American Association of Nurserymen reveal that trees, shrubs, and vines properly planted around the house can reduce fuel consumption up to 40 percent during a single winter.

THIS DRAMATIC result occurred in the Plains states, where the wind sweeps across the open countryside. But the same studies conducted in the more sheltered Eastern states, where cities and houses closer together affect the situation, yet showed a 10 percent saving in fuel.

First consideration is planting a windbreak of trees, especially in more open regions. Most cold winds come from the north or west, so shelter plantings should be located on those sides of the house. The south side should be left open to winter sun.

Experiments have shown that wind reduction is at a distance of from four to six times the height of the windbreak. A windbreak of 20-foot high evergreen trees should therefore, for maximum benefit, be located 80 to 120 feet from the north side of the house.

SHADE TREES properly placed on the south and west sides of the house will keep it cooler on hot summer days, thus reducing the need to run air-conditioners. Tests have shown that a building surface shaded by trees will be about 8 degrees cooler than the same surface unshaded.

Vines used to be a part of every landscape but in more recent years homeowners have rather gotten out of the way of planting them. Now with the focus of conserving energy, vines have achieved an importance in addition to their grace and beauty.

We are told that vines growing on masonry walls, or on trellises at frame walls can serve effectively to save energy — air-conditioning in hot weather and heating fuel in winter.

EVERGREENS on the north side of the house will deflect the wind and help keep the house warmer. Deciduous vines on southern and western sides will help keep the house cooler in hot weather and having dropped their leaves in the autumn will let winter suns do their thing during the cold months.

GARDEN PAGE

If your house is of brick or stone a deciduous vine like Boston Ivy or Virginia Creeper on southern or western walls and an evergreen like English Ivy on northern walls will cling and grow fast. On a frame house clinging vines should not be used.

An effective placing of trellises, however, with a planting of twining vines like wisteria or climbing roses will help. The trellises can be swung away when the house needs to be painted.

Trees, shrubbery, and vines around the home also play an important part in helping to control pollution. It is estimated that 12 million tons of particles such as dust, grit, and cinders are released into the atmosphere of the United States every year — from automobiles, industrial plants, incinerators, jet planes, and home furnaces.

PLANTS AROUND the house serve as traps for this dirt. The hairy texture of leaves on trees, bushes, and vines catch the falling debris in the air. Then, come good rains or a vigorous wielding of the hose, this pollution is washed into the ground where it does no harm.

Many of the shrubs and trees you can buy are balled and burlapped, so can be planted at any time. Bare rooted trees, shrubs, and vines are planted in early spring or late fall.

This is a good time of year also to feed your existing trees. Make a series of holes with a stake or a crowbar in a circle out around the leaf-dip area, the holes about 18 inches deep.

Pour in plant food up to about two-thirds of each hole, fill with good soil, and water. There are food sticks available in some nursery and garden shops, and in several mail-order catalogs. These are called Jobe's Tree Food Spikes. They can be pounded in at intervals below the branch spread dripline.

Create A Color Portrait With Tulips In Garden

Want to plant a color garden? You can plant your landscape like a portrait with tulips. As for color, you can go bold and paint one whole section of your garden in yellows, golds or reds, or go wild and create the All-American quilt effect by planting a mass of different varieties and colors.

The name tulip comes from the Persian word "Toliban," meaning "turban." About four centuries ago they were brought to Europe from Turkey and since that time they have become the best loved of all garden bulbs.

ONE OF the nicest things about tulips is there is such a wide assortment of varieties. There are 15 classes of these bulbs and over 4000 named varieties. This wide selection insures varieties suited to every type of home and garden.

The hardest decision in tulip planting is figuring out where not to plant the Dutch treats. They can be planted as borders, in flower beds, as spot color effects throughout the garden, in containers, window boxes, or, what just might be considered the most elegant type of tulip planting. . .a mass of tulips with other bulbs, annuals and perennials.

It is a spectacular sight indeed to see tulip varieties mixed with hyacinths, daffodils, narcissus, grape hyacinths, forget-me-nots, crocus, alyssum or lobelia.

TULIPS grow best in a rich sandy soil says the California Association of Nurserymen. Plant them four to eight inches apart; depending upon the ultimate size of the varieties and about two and one half times as deep as the width of the bulbs.

In most parts of California, especially if fall weather is still warm, tulip bulbs should be refrigerated at about 40 to 45 degrees for about six to eight weeks. They should be planted in the garden in mid-November or early December.

The reward of planting tulips now will come this spring. You will feel like you are vacationing in Holland. . .and you don't have to go any farther than your own back yard.

Pyracanthas Put On Show, And Are Versatile Shrub

Many trees and shrubs are putting on a color extravaganza this fall . . . the ginkgo's fan-shaped leaves are turning a buttery yellow, the American sweet gum and Chinese pistache are displaying shades of bronze, burnt oranges, and reds. But, perhaps the most spectacular fall color show is being put on by the pyracanthas.

These firethorn shrubs set gardens ablaze with light orange to red berries. They are truly plants for all seasons — displaying firey fruits from late summer and early fall, right through winter. In early spring these glossy green leaved shrubs set a mass of sweet smelling white flower clusters into bloom.

PYRACANTHAS are as versatile as any garden shrub. Varieties range in size from three feet to almost tree sized shrubs growing to about twenty feet high. In the landscape, they may be used as ground covers, informal or formal hedges, espaliered along walls or fences, or as a barrier plantings — their thorns tend to make even the most persistent neighborhood dog change his mind about coming into your yard.

When trained as bonsais, pyracanthas are a spectacular sight and now is the time to select already trained miniatures or shrubs for dwarfing at your local nursery.

ANOTHER big plus point for pyracanthas is that they are low maintenance shrubs says the California Association of Nurserymen. They thrive in full sun and do not like much water.

As for pruning, cut the oldest wood down to the ground after the shrubs have set the last of their winter berries and before new spring growth appears. While the bright fruits are on the shrubs you may "selectively prune" berry-laden branches to decorate your home. This is beneficial to the plant and the clippings add bright, festive color to your home.

Espaliered Plants Right

Espaliered plants — those grown in a flat pattern on trellises, fences or walls, are just the thing to put in cramped garden areas. There is a vast selection of plant material already trained on trellises at your local nursery — just right for fitting into those narrow confines.

For those of you with ample room, espaliered trees and shrubs will really liven up blank walls and fences. Greenery and flowers ambling up a once stark wall or fence will constantly remind you of your good decision to plant an espalier in that area.

IN COOLER coastal climates, the use of espaliers enables gardeners to mature certain fruits, such as citrus, not usually prone to bearing fruits in cool, sea side places. Planted against a warm, sun-reflecting wall, they will receive the right kind of heat.

For an outstanding late winter to spring flower show, try planting an espaliered star magnolia — a magnificent sight when in bloom. For fall and winter color use a pyracantha. It will steal the show with its fiery berries. A spot that receives full sun and little water is just right for this shrub.

An espaliered wax leaf privet, with its dark, glossy green leaves, is a perfect choice for an espaliered evergreen. It will grow well in full sun or part shade and may be espaliered on a small trellis or along a fence.

How To Have Poinsettia Bloom Through Holidays

By EARL ARONSON

Someone gave you a poinsettia last December and you have managed to keep the plant alive in your garden or home. Want it to flower again during the holiday season?

Bring the plant indoors now if you had it in the garden. Spray it thoroughly with an insecticide to get rid of pests that may come indoors with it. Keep the plant in a sunny spot at a temperature of 65-70 degrees, water it and feed it a soluble plant food.

POINSETTIA flowers, the experts say, are photoperiodically induced. This means that flowers begin to form when the days or nights reach a definite length.

The poinsettia flowers about 10 weeks after the length of daylight shortens to 11 hours or less. The plant thus must have complete darkness between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. daily to Dec. 15.

Short-day conditions may be discontinued after Dec. 1, but if the plant is exposed to lights — such as street, flash or bedroom — during the dark hours, flowering will be delayed.

You could keep the plant in a dark closet or opaque box for the dark treatment, which would be continued until the bracts are almost fully expanded.

THEN THE temperature should be 60-62 degrees at night and 70 to 76 in the daytime. Keep the plant near a sunny window during the day. Fertilize until mid-December, but don't overfeed since the growth is slower indoors.

Did you ever hear of allelopathy? It is the ability of certain plants to inhibit the growth of other plants, such as weeds, by releasing into the soil chemicals toxic to other plants.

This would be a new biological control for weeds that would avoid the use of selective herbicides now sprayed on food and fiber crops.

"If this allelopathy is an inherited trait, which is likely, attempts could be made to incorporate weed resistance to commercial crops in the same manner that insect and disease resistance were bred into plants," according to Alan R. Putnam, of Michigan State university and William B. Duke of Cornell University.

THE RESEARCHERS note that successful biological control of weeds has been limited to a few cases where insect predators have been introduced to reduce certain weeds. Plant scientists usually fight weeds by selecting crops for their ability to outgrow weeds.

Crop losses due to weeds far exceed losses attributed to disease or insects, said Duke.

In the experiments, two weedlike plants, mustard and millet, were tested for ability to grow with 41 varieties of cucumber. They found several lines of cucumber restrained weed growth and they suspected that these cucumbers were releasing a chemical that inhibited weed growth.

Testing, they planted seeds from two lines of cucumber that grossly inhibited weed growth, and collected root drippings from their pots. These leachates, when applied to seedlings of mustard weeds, inhibited their growth. But more testing is necessary.

Near harvest time, when birds and other creatures forage in your corn, you can protect the ears by sliding a narrow paper bag over each about a week before picking time. By this time the corn will have pollinated. Birds won't be able to peck at the top of the ears.

Succulents Reputation, Camels Of Plant World

Succulents are the camels of the plant world.

Their ability to store water in stems, roots, and leaves enables them to thrive in dry, hot areas. This fact alone makes it clear to see that succulents make excellent plants for use indoors — where dry heat fills the rooms on winter days.

THE JADE PLANT is a favorite among indoor gardeners. Almost oriential in appearce, it is a striking accent for many spots — both indoors and out. The jade plant (Crassula argentea) is a bold and outstanding succulent with a stout trunk and fleshy, thick dark olive green leaves that are often edged with red.

If given a choice, jade plant likes four or more hours of direct sunlight a day. However, it will do well in filtered or indirect light. As far as care is concerned, this succulent requires very little.

Let the soil dry out in between waterings and then soak it well. It should be fed every 3-4 months. Wait about 5 or 6 months before feeding new plants.

JADE PLANT is easily propagated by leaf cuttings. Pick out a couple of medium-sized leaves and break them off where the leaf joins the stem. Plant the leaves at about a 35 degree angle (so the tender new growth doesn't get too much shade) in rooting soil mixture of one half peat moss and one half sharp sand.

Set your new potted cuttings in bright indirect light until the new leaves are just under one half the size of the parent leaf. Then separate them from the old leaves and transplant into another pot; planting in an all-purpose potting mixture.

For you do-it-yourself soil mixers, The California Association of Nurserymen suggests a mixture of 2 parts good garden loam, 1 part peat moss or leaf mold, and 1 part sand.

The jade plant is a fast grower. If you keep transplanting it into larger containers it will grow to several feet or it an be kept small by confining it to a small pot.

A Hanging Box Is Storage Boon In The Garden

A wall-hung storage box can save thousands of steps in a summer's span, depending on distance from supplies indoors to an intensive care garden spot, such as a cut-flower bed.

A pre-existing solid board fence is the best support, for it lends privacy for the user and keeps the unit unobtrusive.

A box 40 inches square and built of one-by-12-inch western cedar or pine boards will store quite a variety of small items. Its capacity can be expanded by deepening sides and shelves with one-by-fours added beside the one-by-12s.

But it makes the job more complex.

Design the front as a work surface that folds down on hinges across the bottom. It should be about three feet high. To support the weight of pots, sprays and fertilizers, legs should be installed near the corners.

These can fold down on hinges when the unit is closed, or can be made removable by fitting them with dowels that fit into holes in the table top.

TWO YOUNGSTERS enjoy the marigolds, which have been suggested as the national flower for the United States.

Make Your Suggestion For National Flower

By BILL MEACHEM

Perhaps one of the nicest 200th birthday presents our country could have by 1976 would be a national flower. It seems almost impossible to believe that this great country of ours can put men on the moon, but has not yet designated a national flower.

Over the years there has been much talk about our having a national flower. For some time my friend David Burpee worked valiantly with the late Sen. Everett Dirksen to have the marigold named our national flower.

EVEN today, Mr. Burpee would like to see his favorite flower as our national flower. His claim is that the marigold can be grown in all sections of the country and is known to all.

On the other hand, it has been reported in trade publications that there are several bills pending in Congress that are aimed at establishing the rose as our national flower.

But the rose is already the national flower of two countries, England and Iran. Our neighbor to the north, Canada, has the maple leaf, and Mexico to the south the cactus. The cattleya orchid is the national flower of Brazil and Costa Rica. Russia and Peru chose the sunflower. In Egypt and India the national flower is the lotus.

HERE ARE a few more: kapoc, Argentina; golden wattle, Australia; poppy, Belgium; Chilean bellflower, Chile; narcissus, China; forget-me-not, Denmark; yucca, El Salvador; fleur-de-lis, France; cornflower, Germany; violet, Greece; and twinflower, Sweden.

There are some flowers that we seem to associate with particular countries that have also been adopted as their national flower. For instance, shamrock, Ireland; chrysanthemum, Japan; tulip, Netherlands; and thistle, Scotland.

Edibles get involved, too. Consider the leek, of Wales, and the pomegranate, of Spain.

Even though we select a national flower that is the same as another nation's we will not be setting a precedent. Also, if we select something that is edible, this, too, has happened before.

What should our national flower be? Some additional suggestions from polls of a local nature include the violet, geranium, petunia, chrysanthemum, phlox, corn tassle, hollyhock, zinnia and azalea.

I AM personally surprised that there are no trees and shrubs mentioned among the possibilities. White oak, flowering dogwood, magnolia, white pine, birch and the giant redwoods are trees that come to my mind. Among the shrubs there are the holly, rhododendron, camelia, mountain laurel and hydrangea. And there are wildflowers like goldenrod and buttercup.

What would you like to see as our national flower? I feel that the choice should reflect all the people and not just a few. Why not jot down your selection for a national flower on a postcard and send it to me, Bill Meachem, c/o Johnson Wax, P.O. Box 3788, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

YOUR selection doesn't have to reflect any symbolic meaning; if you simply like the flower, tree or vegetable, that's reason enough. Don't be persuaded by anything that has been done in the past; our Yard 'N Garden poll will stand on its own.

When the results are tabulated I will let you know in a future column which flower, tree, shrub or vegetable is the favorite. But that's not all. I will also personally see that all of your selections are made known to those in Congress who are deliberating the question at this time.

If you care to make any comments on your card as to the reason you made a particular selection, I will also be glad to hear about it. These comments, too, will be sent to the proper authorities.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓Many cool season vegetables are available as seedling transplants in nurseries. Onions may be sown for next summer's crop.

✓Green-up your lawn with a feeding of complete lawn food. Your nurseryman will recommend a fertilizer for the type turf you have.

✓When selecting bulbs for spring color, get top quality ones — sturdier specimens and more blooms will be the reward.

Plumbing Out Of Mind

By DOROTHEA BROOKS

Competing for homeowner's interest, plumbing is a poor second to just about anything in the house — except when it doesn't work.

Actually, in many societies through the ages, reliable plumbing has been a luxury rather than an accepted way of life.

BACK IN the days of the early Egyptians, for example, private baths were reserved only for royalty — and the Pharoah's female favorites. In Greece, bathing privileges were accorded mainly to star athletes or gladiators.

It took the Romans to introduce public baths — but the masses still couldn't afford such facilities in their own homes. And it wasn't too long ago in American history that bathing was an awkward, once a week ritual.

Today, howevr, we take for granted instant hot and cold water in all parts of the home. The one bath household is becoming the exception; many homes have two or more and additional facilities in powder rooms and mud rooms.

Automatic dishwashing, clothes washing and drying, sophisticated heating and cooling systems, swimming pools, even automatic lawn watering and snow melting systems involve plumbing.

MOST OF us don't think about any of it except when something goes wrong and we have to call the plumber. If he can't respond immediately, many of us are lost.

Frank McGrath, vice president for American Standard, plumbing products manufacturer, offers some emergency tips — things to do until the plumber comes — for the homeowner and part-time handyman:

The first step in every case of plumbing failure is to shut off the water supply. This requires knowing in advance the location of key valves — especially the main supply valve. It is a good idea to tag them.

Keep elementary tools on hand for minor repairs. These include a hammer, a rachet type screwdriver with replaceable bits, slip joint pliers, adjustable wrenches, a plunger and a snake.

Leaky faucets are the most common plumbing problem. Look for worn out washers as a likely cause. Replacing them is simple, or the difficulty can be eliminated by using faucets with ceramic discs.

SCALDING WATER, chemical cleaners, a suction cup plunger and a plumber's snake are recommended methods for opening clogged drains. If you have to clean out the trap or U shaped pipe be sure to protect eyes and hands from chemical cleaners. Never use a plunger after chemical cleaners have been used.

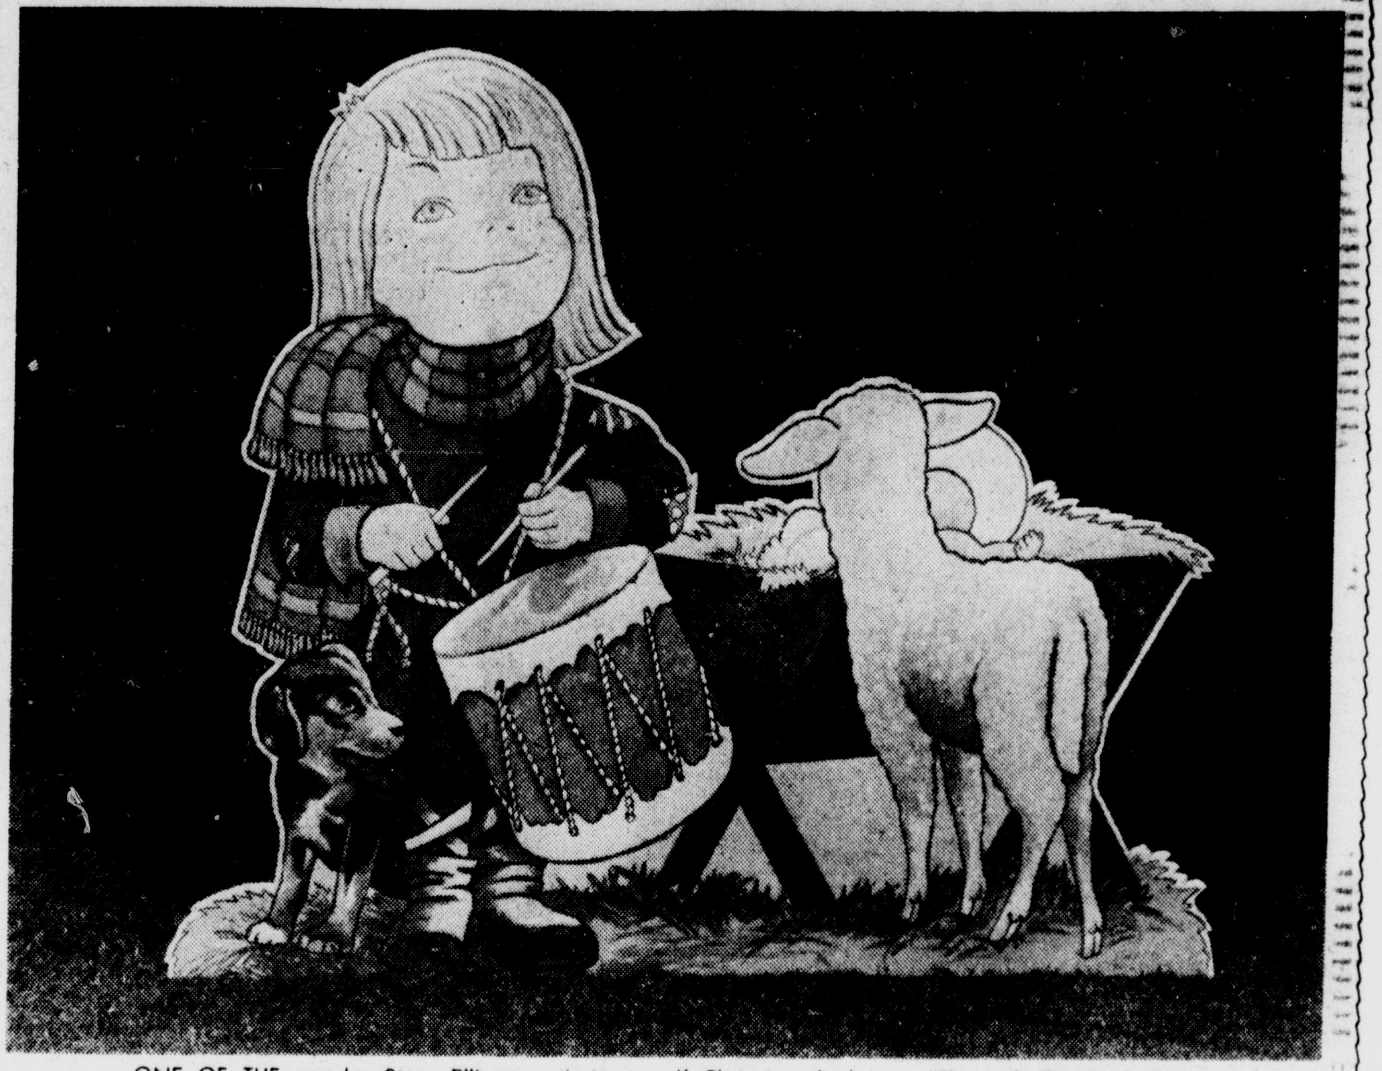
If tub or sink won't hold water, inspect the stopper mechanism to be sure the drain lever engages the plunger.

For toilets that won't flush properly, a simple adjustment of the handle trip arm, the replacement of a water logged float ball or a reseating a misaligned stopper ball may be all that's needed.

THERE ARE, McGrath said, other simple operations the handy homeowner can do himself. A good book and a freindly plumber will help. If you're not handy, a friendly plumber is even more important.

Plumbing contractors helped to write a book that tells how to keep plumbing efficient, what small jobs can be done by the handy homeowner and what should be left to experienced contractors and their journeymen. It is available from the Plumbing Heating Cooling Information Bureau, 35 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60601. Include 35 cents plus 10 cent stamp.

POPULAR DRUMMER BOY



ONE OF THE popular Steve Ellingson, do-it-yourself Christmas displays is "The Little Drummer Boy," which he believes is an easy project to undertake. The full color poster, 42 inches by 59 inches, is glued on plywood and then sawed out and propped up with a wooden stake. It can be dramatized with a spotlight and is suitable for churches, office buildings and store windows and is waterproof. The pattern can be obtained by sending $3.50 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409 and asking for Decoration No. 509.

Home Improvement Spending Up, Building Supply Business Booming

By ANDY LANG

A recent nationwide survey of more than one thousand representative home-owning families forecasts record spending of $35.4 billion on home improvements this year, up 14 per cent from last year's $22.3 billion.

By outdistancing the 12 per cent annual rate of inflation, this spending represents real growth in a booming market for building supply dealers.

How are people spending this money? More than $3.4 billion will go for kitchen remodeling, $2.7 billion for add-a-room projects and $1.6 for new roofing, with the rest divided among a wide variety of home improvements, the major one the remodeling of bathrooms.

Paralleling the growth in home modernization is a surge in the number of do-it-yourself projects. Of the most frequent remodeling projects, the survey found that nearly three out of four respondents who finished their basements did the work themselves.

Almost two-thirds modernized their bathrooms by themselves and slightly more than one half made kitchen remodeling a do-it-yourself project.

WHAT LIES behind the "bull market" in home remodeling? "Making the home a more enjoyable place to live," according to Harold Sugarman, publisher of Building Supply News, is listed as the prime motivation for modernization by 81 per cent of the respondents.

This probably is a reflection of the growing tendency among homeowners to spend more of their time at home due to uncertainty generated by the energy crunch.

Double-digit inflation also is forcing many prospective homebuyers to shelve their moving plans. Experts estimate the cost of moving, all things considered, at about 10 per cent of the price of a new home. According to the Wall Street Journal, the median price for a new single-family home has jumped a phenomenal 50 per cent since 1970, to $35,000.

That means a consumer who purchases a home at that price faces an extra bill of $3,550, which includes a lot of things besides the physical movement of household goods.

Remodeling could be cheaper. The most expensive home improvement, according to the survey, is adding a room. Its average cost is $3,221. Expanding an attic into a living area costs an average of $2,354. Putting a room in the basement averages $837.

Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

Amateurs Should Stick To Enamel

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

So you have decided that paint is the right finish for the piece of furniture you are restoring?

Your next decision, then, must be what kind of paint. You have a number of choices, but my suggestion is that unless you are a pro you stick to enamel.

ENAMEL has many advantages. It comes flat, semi-gloss and high gloss — in a wide range of colors. It provides a very durable finish that is resistant to staining, wear, chipping and general abuse.

Basically, enamel is a pigmented varnish. The techniques for applying it are very much the same as for varnish. The first step in enameling, as in all furniture finishing, is to sand smooth all surfaces to be painted.

If you are working with wood that has sappy spots or knots or has been stained, a sealer is indicated to prevent subsequent bleeding through the enamel.

YOUR next step is to apply an enamel undercoat. This should be a flat primer. When working with enamel it is well to pour small amounts of the paint into another well-cleaned can for immediate use.

This keeps the main supply free of dust. Paint a relatively small area at a time, brushing in all directions. Smooth out the undercoat to remove excess enamel.

Let the undercoat dry about 24 hours and sand lightly with extra-fine paper. Dark surfaces may call for a second undercoat. If so, follow the same procedure. After the second coat has dried about 24 hours you are ready for the finish coat.

IF YOU have chosen a gloss or semi-gloss enamel, don't stir it too vigorously — you may cause bubbles in the finished surface. Apply the finish coats the same as the undercoats, but don't overbrush, as the enamel tends to flow itself even.

The chances are that your job will call for a second finish coat. After drying, the first finish coat should be lightly sanded and then repainted in the manner described for the first finish coat. The final coat must be very thoroughly dried. This may take several days.

The final step in producing a good enamel surface requires some rubbing if your goal is a finish with low luster, sometimes known as a satin finish.

The dried enamel should be rubbed with pumice. A clean felt pad is ideal for the rubbing. Keep working in the same direction until you get the degree of satin finish you want. You may have to do it several times to meet your own specifications.

Building A Bird Feeder Can Help Clear Insects

By VIVIAN BROWN

Whittling bird feeders under a shady tree might be a good act for the family while the weather is still nice.

Some of the work can be done in the tool shop, but scooping out the little feeding holes and the placement of the little dowels and the gluing might be outdoor enterprises.

MOST BIRDS pay for the ownership of the little feeders and houses you might provide, not only with their songs, but by ridding your surroundings of insects.

For example, the U.S. Department of Interior reports that 98 per cent of a little house wren's diet consists of harmful insects, beetles, caterpillars, bugs and spiders.

In fact, all your little backyard birds — robin, bluebird, catbird, chickadee, titmouse, sparrows, towhee, phoebe, brown thrasher and even the pesky blue jay — manage to clear out a large portion of the insect population.

BIGGER birds like the bob-white busily rid farms of those agricultural pests — potato and cucumber beetles, bean leaf beetle, squash ladybug, corn billbugs, weevil, wireworms, cutworms and cotton boll weevil. The nighthawk's diet is 100 per cent insects and other destructive crawling things.

In his book "How to Attract, House and Feed Birds," Walter E. Schutz covers the whole bit. He tells how to start your own bird club and how to find and identify the birds, what to feed them and what kind of houses they like. There are directions for making a wide variety of feeders and houses and even one for a concrete bird bath.

A very useful chart gives the dimensions of bird houses for individual birds, and there are recipes for concocting one's own bird feed and suet cakes.

Some feeders are easy-does-it. A suet log feeder 19½ inches long and four inches wide might have a number of one-and-one quarter inch holes drilled in it. A dowel is put under each feeding hole as a perch. An eye bolt is put at the top so that the feeder can hang from a tree. A long wire can discourage squirrels.

A HANDSOME platform feeder can be made with twin suet logs. One feeder holds suet cakes and the other contains loose seed. A number of feeders are made from pantry items — cider bottles, mason jars, gourds and other things that might be on hand.

A mason jar is inverted and the seeds spill out on a triangular board. Large holes are put in the jar's lid so that the seeds can come through. The screw end of a two-inch bolt is then put in the center of the jar's lid and attached to the feeder floor by a nut underneath to support the jar and provide enough room for the speeds to spill out. The floor is made of three-quarter-inch stock and is suspended by three chains to a single hanger at the top.

Certain trees and shrubs attract birds, making them easier to spot. In fall and winter when the mountain ash has its red and orange berries you can find robins, waxwings, woodpeckers and orioles among the branches.

And bushes such as bayberry, dogwood, elderberry, winterberry and the like attract many species of birds. Of the vines, Virginia creeper and wild grape are very popular in the bird world.

MANY people grow sunflowers for a supply of seed for the birds in winter and some use the seed in suet cakes.

Schultz's recipe for suet cakes goes like this: Grind up the suet before cooking. After it hardens, cook it again to make it even harder. On the second melting pour the suet over one or more of these: millet, sunflower seeds, raisins, corn meal, oatmeal, rice, cracked corn, chopped peanuts, cooked noodles, cooked spaghetti. Using little flat forms made out of heavy aluminum put a quantity of the mixture in and then pour the suet. These could probably be frozen and thawed out before offering to the birds in winter when they are needed.

Suet can be placed in open mesh — onion or potato sacks — and nailed to trees if one does not have a feeder. But suet feeders are much better, Schutz advises, and they look attractive.

A comfortable warm retreat for birds in winter can be made by nailing a box to a tree. Schutz uses apple boxes. The box is complete closed with an overhang at the top and an extending perch at the bottom. An opening is also at the bottom at the perch. Make it large enough for the bird to get in. Before nailing the box closed, Schutz suggests equipping its interior with a number of dowels one-quarter inch for perches, and filling the bottom of the box with straw, excelsior or wood.

AN APPLE box with one long side open nailed to a tree makes a very good feeder, he points out. One end might have a wire mesh for the suet, and there should be a strap across its front to keep the seeds from falling out. Winter feeders should always be put where they are protected from north winds, he advises.

If you begin to feed birds, you must continue to do so. To deny them food after they get in the habit of visiting your feeder could result in their deaths, especially in freezing weather.

To find out what your particular birds like to eat, you might start out with a window feeder that can be served from indoors. Using one-half-inch stock or a piece of plywood, put two support brackets on it so that several compartmentalized frozen food trays may be put on it. Into each compartment could be a different food. From your window you can then observe the preference.

OFFICE SPACE

A MINI HOME OFFICE can be created from four or five feet of wall space in a bedroom, family room or entryway, such as the one above which is placed right inside the back door, an area which previously had been cluttered with boots and extra shoes. There is storage space in the drawers, shelves and cabinets and the home office blends in with the adjacent kitchen through the use of paneling installed right over the old walls.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. I am getting ready to buy some kind of stationary saw, but I can't make up my mind whether to get a bench saw or a radial arm saw. Which is better?

A. — Woodworkers have conflicting opinions about this.

Each saw handles the same kind of work in a slightly different way. With a bench saw, the lumber is pushed into the blade, which cuts the wood from below. With a radial arm saw, the saw is moved across the lumber, which is held in place while the blade cuts from above the wood. The radial arm saw usually costs a bit more than a bench saw of comparable size and quality, but it is preferred by those who don't like the idea of pushing lumber across a table. Isn't it possible for you to try out both types of saws, either in the homes of friends or in one of those woodworking shops which permit tools to be used for a certain period of time for a fee?

Q. — I'm planning on building an extra room that will be used for rehearsals for a group of teen-age musicians. I intend to use soundproof ceiling tiles. The walls will be of gypsum board. Would it add soundproofing to the room to use a double wall of such material?

A. — Yes. But you would accomplish the same result with a single wall plus floor-to-ceiling drapes of an absorbent material. And it would be a lot less work.

Q. — We're getting new window screens soon. How do I keep the mesh from getting rusty?

A. — These days, most new screens come in rust-proof materials. For a slight extra cost, such screens will prevent headaches about future rusting.

Location Shooting Empties Hollywood

EDITOR'S NOTE — Studio back lots just aren't believable as bangkok or darkest Africa. That's why 10 television series are being filmed on location far from Hollywood. It may cost more, but directors agree the realism is worth it.

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Where is everybody?

Never in the history of television have so many series and movies been filmed in so many different places.

Ten series this season are being filmed entirely on locations far removed from Hollywood.

"Born Free" is shooting in Kenya. "Movin' On" is moving all over the West and the Pacific northwest. "Harry O" is anchored in San Diego.

"Petrocelli" practices law in Tucson, Ariz. "Paper Moon" connives in Hays, Kan. "Nakia" is in Albuquerque N.M. "Hawaii Five-O" is in Honolulu. "Sierra," the first of the season's new series to be scratched, was shot in Yosemite.

"Streets of San Francisco" was filmed in — you guessed it. And "Kodiak," though not filmed in Alaska as called for in the script, was produced in Bend, Ore. — far from a TV studio.

Nearly every dramatic series this year has filmed some scenes on location, even if it's only around the corner from the studio. "Kojak" filmed six shows in New York. "Gunsmoke" went to Tucson for four shows and to Kanab, Utah, for three more. "The Manhunter" went to Colorado. "The New Land" also visited Bend, Ore.

The late Cecil B. De Mille is reputed to have once said, "A rock is a rock, a tree is a tree. Let's shoot it in Griffith Park."

Those days are gone. It's difficult now to shoot on a studio back lot and made audiences believe it's exotic Bangkok — or even Cleveland. For one thing, people travel more. They're not so easily fooled or satisfied with back lot wizardry.

For another thing, a number of studio back lots have been bulldozed into shopping centers and high-rise complexes.

"It's good for us to be out there," said Barry Weitz, executive producer of "Movin' On." "You can pick up the reality and the sense of the moment. You can't get that in a studio. The actors and directors respond to that reality. It's stimulating."

Aaron Spelling, producer of "The Rookies," said his crew spends three days on location for everyshow. He said, "We just shot a scene in a gunshop. This place must have been 200 feet long and was lined with rifles. You can't duplicate that on a stage. When you're doing a police show you can't just talk about the street. You have to see it."

Spelling said he keeps a camera in his car, as does every member of his production crew. Any time they spot an interesting house, church, or other building, they take a picture and note the address.

Quinn Martin prefers to shoot on location for his four series, "Streets of San Francisco," "The Manhunter," "Barnaby Jones" and "Cannon."

"I can make a show look five times better on location," Martin said. "I do more location shooting than ever before because we've got better equiopment. It's more portable and the film is faster."

"Born Free," which debuted this year, is the first American TV series filmed in Africa. "I don't think NBC would have bought the show if we'd done it here," said David Gerber, the executive producer.

He said he believes "Born Free" is the most expensive one-hour series ever made because of the tremendous cost of going to Africa. "We're in all kinds of businesses — catering, hotels, transportation, politics. We couldn't even rent cars," he said, "We had to buy them."

Gerber said he could write the story of his series in red ink. He sells the show to NBC for $215,000 an episode, but some of the early shows cost $300,000 each. Average cost is now about $250,000 per show. The only way to make that money back, he added, is when the show goes into syndication in three or four years.

Other producers say the costs of location shootings are either "expensive" or about the same as studio shooting.

One reason costs go up on location is that the regular studio day of 10 hours is extended to 14 hours. That's to compensate for the time it takes to move the equipment out and back each day.

"You also have to pay for lunch," Benson said. "You've got eight to 10 pieces of equipment and that's drivers, more grips, more electricians."

Quinn Martin, who also had crews filming movies in Chicago and the Caribbean, said producers should not depend on locations to make a show successful.

"It's just one sign of quality," Martin said. "A show is successful because of the stars and the scripts. I think location shooting adds about 20 per cent to the intrinsic value of a show."

Gary Collins Really Acts In Lions' Den

By ARTHUR UNGER

Opening night is like walking into a cage of lions for some actors. For Gary Collins, every day is opening night. And the lions aren't even caged. He's the co-star, with Diana Muldaur, of the new series "Born Free" (Mondays, NBC, 8-9 p.m.) based on the true adventures of George and Joy Adamson of "Born Free," "Living Free," and "Forever Free" fame.

Kenya calling! On the telephone from Nairobi (it's 1 p.m. here; 9 p.m. there), Collins is talking about working with lions.

"I really look forward to it. I get up for it — like opening night. There's an air of expectancy, danger. You never know exactly what might happen. You just can't completely control the lions' reactions.

"I've learned you can't lie to them either — like children, they know what you are feeling, when you love them and when you're scared of them. Fright comes zooming out of you at 300 miles an hour and they pick it up right away."

Is Gary Collins scared of them? "Well, let's say wary," he chuckles over the amazingly clear connection. "We all came here to Kenya a month or so early so we could work with the lions, get used to them — and have them get used to us. Let's face it, I don't go around playing with them unless I am paid to do it. I'm not about to spend my time off with them. I figure the less exposure, the better my chances are of nothing happening.

"Their trainers are the first to tell you that the cats cannot be trusted 100 per cent. If you play around with them and think you're going to become real palsy-walsy with them — that's a mistake. I did a scene with one of them for the trailers which set up the show each week (we go back to Elsa in all her growing stages).

"A 200-pounder — a little one — and I were roughhousing while we did the filming and the little cat nearly bit my arm off. She was having a marvel-

Just Another TV Star

Unless they watched "Happy Days" on Tuesday nights.

In that event they would see Tom Bosley playing the rumpled father, Howard Cunningham, in the ABC-TV situation family comedy.

But his means of earning a living is really the only thing that sets Bosley apart from the professional people and businessmen who tenant the partment house. He's not colorful. He's not really famous.

When Bosley and his wife Jean — they were married in 1962 — came to Southern California eight years ago they moved into the spacious apartments as if they weren't sure they'd stay. Neither has a desire to own a home.

The Bosleys brought four or five pieces of furniture west and have since bought early American fittings, along with colorful red and green couches, easy chairs and all the rest.

Bosley spends a great deal of time in his den, a retreat he defines as an ego booster.

Gary Collins Really Acts In Lions' Den

ous time and it was all a game for her. For me, it was a close shave."

Aren't the lions fixed in some way so as not to harm the stars? "No, most of them are not declawed or defanged or fixed in any way. They're just, well, disciplined. . .I hope."

"Born Free," produced for NBC by Columbia Pictures television (formerly Screen Gems) is one of the most costly TV series ever made. Everything is shot on location in Kenya in East Africa — mostly in the area called Naivasha, an hour and a half outside of Nairobi on Lake Naivasha, part of an extinct volcano.

Collins and his wife, former Miss America Mary Ann Mobley and their five-year-old daughter Mary Clancy, live in a marina close by.

There's a 300-acre compound for the animals — with a little island which is used for most of the lion shots. "So we can cut off their exit in case something goes wrong," says Mr. Collins.

"Have things ever gone wrong," says Mr. Collins.

Have things ever gone wrong? "Well, not often. There have been loads of visiting firemen and tourists. Jacqueline Onassis, for instance, and her two Kennedy children.

"The lions are easily distracted. They think people are game — that's one thing we haven't been able to breed out of them. Children, especially, are interesting to them.

"One day when Diana and I were shooting with one of the eight lions who plays Elsa at various stages in her life, an African teen-ager and two tots came up to the 8½-foot-high fence. The boy had a snake which he wanted to sell to one of our trainers. The lion was completely docile and we were rubbing and scratching her when suddenly she turned around and saw the children.

"Immediately her eyes glazed over and she started to stalk them. The trainers started hollering for the kids to get out of there. When I protested that the fence would protect them, the trainer told me that the lion would go over it in two seconds. So the kids took off screaming and the trainer managed to catch up with the stalking lion. He put a little ammonia in her nose to slow her down — that's the quickest way to regain a lion's attention."

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. SAM J. ERVIN, JR.

Is it true you represented a paying client before the Supreme Court while in the Senate?—Tom Hart, Drake, Colo.

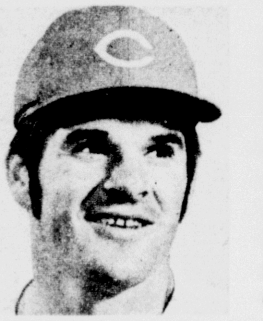
● Yes—the Darlington Manufacturing Co. in 1964. I argued only one point and that was under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the National Labor Relations Act to the effect that any commercial enterprise can go out of business completely at any time for any reason satisfactory to itself. The Supreme Court held unanimously that the argument I made was in complete harmony with the intent of Congress. Contrary to some charges, the U.S. did not have any interest, either legal or pecuniary, in this case, which was an argument between the stockholders and a union.

FOR SANDY DUNCAN

Do you ever get fed up with being pert and cute?—R. S., Beverly Hills, Calif.

● At one point I was bored with my image. But I got over that when I realized how many people I know aren't working—marvelous stars who, through no fault of their own, can't find roles, be they boring or otherwise. I sure would like to do a juicy dramatic part, just as dramatic performers want to try comedy.

FOR PETE ROSE of the Cincinnati Reds



I hear you hold your bat with the label facing the ball. Why?—Lori Bockweg, Waldwick, N. J.

● I hold my bat with the label facing the pitcher. This is because of the way my body and hips pivot when I swing. By turning the label toward the pitcher, I can pivot into the ball and hit the pitch with the part of the grain that gives me the best contact. However, since each man pivots differently, every hitter has to adjust his grip to his own swing.

FOR ERNEST BORGNINE

What was the most difficult role you ever had to do?—J. Berns, Fayetteville, N.C.

● After I mentioned on Johnny Carson's show that I'd never performed at a circus, I was inundated with offers. I accepted one to be a clown. That was my hardest onstage job. Kids can see through any mask and clowns can't let their emotions show. My hardest offstage job was at a hospital for handicapped children. It was heartbreaking. I had to hold my tears at bay and make the kids laugh.

FOR FARRAH FAWCETT (Mrs. Lee Majors)

You've made commercials with two sexy guys – Michael Haynes and Joe Namath. Do they live up to their reputations—and who's your favorite actor to work with?–Mrs. Nita Rael, La Verne, Calif.

● Yes, Mike and Joe do have all that sexiness in person but, more important, they're very professional and extremely nice. My favorite actor and the one I like to work with most is—Lee Majors.

FOR CLORIS LEACHMAN

Looking back, did winning the Academy Award as best supporting actress in "The Last Picture Show" have any effect on your career?—C. P., Hutchinson, Kan.

● Not really. Except maybe because of all the talk shows I did as a result, people got to know me better as a private person. I think I probably became more of a personality in my own right.

FOR PAUL "BEAR" BRYANT,

head football coach, University of Alabama

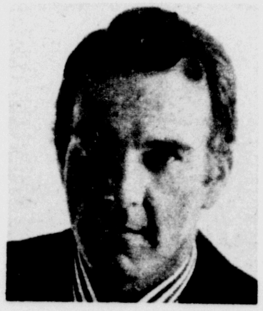
Why do some of your backs cut off the bottom half of their football jerseys?—Wendy Kutlow, Englewood Cliffs, N. J.

● Because they feel it gives a potential tackler one less chance to grab hold. Alabama backs wear tearaway jerseys —but a runner can still be held up a half-step if an opponent grabs his shirt.

FOR TIM HOLLAND,

backgammon champion of the world

Why do so many women like backgammon?—R. B., Salem, Ore.



● Women like it because they're accepted around a backgammon table, unlike poker. And if a man loses to a woman, it's no slur on his talent—it's the luck of the dice! Celebrities like the game. Polly Bergen is an excellent player. So are Hugh Hefner, Diana Ross, Henry Fonda, Sean Connery and Roger Moore.

FOR RON GALLELA,

photographer and author of "Jacqueline"

How do you manage to find out where Mrs. Onassis is going to be?—P. L., Nyack, N.Y.

● After four years of photographing her, I know Jackie so well that I can tell where she's going by the direction her limousine takes. I also took the precaution of becoming friendly with the doormen of the places she frequents. I even went as far as to date Mrs. Onassis' maid—but that was a combination of business and pleasure.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I always hear the name Conrad Hilton, but I never hear much about the man. Could you please tell me something about him?—L. P., Rome, Ga.

● Conrad Hilton, who is 86, shuns publicity but is still extremely active in the hotel chain he founded. Chairman of the Board of Hilton Hotels Corp., and Chairman of the Board of Hilton International Company, he lives in Belair, Calif., and puts in a full working day. Mr. Hilton had three sons by his first wife. The eldest, Conrad N. Hilton, Jr., died February 5, 1969. Barron Hilton is president of Hilton Hotels Corp. and Eric Hilton is vice president. Conrad Hilton's second marriage, to Zsa Zsa Gabor, produced one daughter, Francesca. He is not married at the present time.

Our Parents, Ourselves, Our Kids: Mating Habits, How You've Changed!

Today's teenagers seem to like each other. Did we like each other, or were we merely "in love"?

Rona Jaffe, whose new book is an epic novel called "Family Secrets" (Simon & Schuster, $9.95).

Sixty-odd years ago, when my mother was a little girl, my grandfather used to sit at the head of the table and carve the turkey. One day he gave her the wing, and she said: "Please, I'd prefer another piece." He reached over and slapped her across the face. Her comment today on this incident is: "My father always wanted all of us children to be perfect."

That's how it was in my grandparents' generation; duty was all, rage was suppressed, usually even repressed, and the key words were obedience, respect and morality. Arranged marriages were not uncommon, for the stranger your parents picked was bound to be better for you than the stranger you picked because you happened to love him. In any case, the young man had to get the girl's father's approval or there was no wedding. Families clung together for stability and companionship. Sibling rivalry was unheard of, but it was rampant nonetheless as children vied for the approval of Papa-God and Mama-Goddess. When one got married it was for sensible reasons: to have a family, to have companionship, to fulfill your destiny. A man needed a homemaker and a woman needed a provider. They didn't think about sex, or tried not to, which wasn't difficult since they didn't know much about it anyway.

My parents brought me up with what was considered enormous freedom. I was expected to go to college and was "allowed" to go to one five hours by train from my home–a sleep-away school–while my mother had had to fight for that same privilege. Of course, when I got to college the dean of women told us that we were not there to be prepared for careers. We were there to be prepared to be better wives and mothers, preferably to marry our male classmates.

We, those schoolgirls of the late 1940's and early 1950's, were the most romantic generation that ever was. No Victorian girl reading poetry in a hammock could have been more romantic, for we didn't even have the excuse of being totally innocent. Each generation tries to be the opposite of its parents, and we married for sex. Not that we were quite sure what it would be like, but we were sure it would be marvelous. If the first date was a success, we not only imagined marrying the boy, we already started naming our children. The boy would phone on Monday and ask us out for Saturday night, and after a few months of these Saturday nights (and then later of course there was the midweek night as well) many of us actually married this stranger. What did we ever talk about? We made plans. But we didn't talk about ourselves because we didn't really know ourselves yet, and besides, dating was a con, a game. For a girl it was a way to trap a husband before she was an old maid; for a boy it was a way to impress a girl so he could go back and tell lies to his friends.

Those of us who did not find a husband at college played at careers afterward, while the romantic 1950's rolled on and some married men chased some single girls and some single girls got disillusioned. Those of us who did marry and have children and move to that dream house in the suburbs found a lot of our friends getting divorced and a lot of others keeping up a marriage that was a pretense "for the children's sake," and we wondered why everything was so different from our parents' day, why the world seemed to be falling apart. And what had happened to our perfect children?

When we were teenagers we had argued with our parents about almost everything it seemed: how late we could stay out, how often we could see our latest crush, if we could have the car, if we could put a little liquor in the punch for the graduation party. We had argued all the time, but at least we had communicated. Our children, grown into teenagers, didn't communicate at all. They did what they pleased, dressed as they pleased, and not only smoked cigarettes, but we knew many of them–or at least their contemporaries – also used dope. All kids want to do what their friends do, but what gave this generation their new courage to do what they pleased as a power bloc?

The 1960's saw computer dating for young singles, but 1970 seemed to have turned the kids themselves into computers–where were their feelings as they drifted from romance to romance without even a pretense of feeling, of "love"? No one pretended to be in love any more. Could sex without love be fun? Were they really carrying on the way they said they did, and weren't they going to become jaded? Some of us worried and some of us felt jealous, deprived forever of the mysteries of variety.

The kids said they didn't want to make our mistakes. Every generation says that, thinking it is the one to have discovered the real truth about love. But the kids today have found something we never had when we were their age, and surely our parents found only after they had been married for a long time: they have found friendship. Whether in a co-ed dorm or a more conventional life-style where kids go steady, boys and girls are friends with each other. For our generation, sex was the monster, always present, breathing down our necks, revered, avoided, tantalizing, frightening. Today's teenagers have gotten sex out of the way and are free to concentrate on the human being. They like each other. Did we like each other, or were we merely "in love"?

Some things haven't changed. Single life isn't all fun. After graduation from college many girls who once were popular find themselves forced to choose between boys they don't like or being alone. They complain, as we did 20 years ago, that "all the good ones have been taken." Although a surprising number of young women prefer not to marry, and a surprising number of young couples decide never to have children, there is a vast number of young marriages every year. These kids don't all save up for a big, formal wedding, and they don't all wait for a secure future; they may choose a country spot, write their own ceremony and have a picnic afterward. They may have no honeymoon–not because they can't afford it, but because they've already been on trips together and now they want to settle down.

"The boy would phone on Monday and ask us out for Saturday night and after a few months of these Saturday nights . . . many of us actually married this stranger."

There is a generation gap in every generation, but I think if my grandfather were alive today he would understand the young people because many of them have a spirit of adventure similar to that which the American pioneers and the immigrants had. We are in the midst of a vast wave of nostalgia for the "natural" things: natural foods, the good old days when we had to make everything ourselves, from our clothes to our fun. Nostalgia is always easy because you can omit the threatening parts. If our "natural" food doesn't grow we can buy it at the supermarket. The reason parents had absolute authority in the good old days is that they reared a generation conditioned to accept it; outside the family circle lurked the threatening unknown.

Communications – the press, magazines, television – have made all of us aware that there are various alternatives available to every life-style. We see people on every part of our planet and we see our astronauts on the moon. We may still be afraid of the fellow down the street but it is not likely that he will be a mystery to us. A young person today can want to be a hippie or a congressperson, a member of an exotic religious cult or the PTA, a stockbroker, a film maker, a farmer. But one thing is certain: He or she won't make the choice because their parents or their contemporaries forced it on them. My parents' generation chose their careers so their children could have security; my generation chose our careers so we could have security; today's generation is totally diverse. They have the freedom to make their own choices and they know more about life than we did, although not as much as we know now. I suspect they will do pretty well. I think those who choose a family life will make a very good job of it. It is not difficult to stay with your best friend for the rest of your life.

People Quiz

Does Your World Differ From the "Other Fellow's" World?

By John E. Gibson

True or False: The person with a satisfying philosophy of life lives in an entirely different world from the person who has none. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Everyone lives in a different world.

2. The reason each person sees life differently —and thus lives in a different world than his fellows—is because he is different; no two personalities are alike.

3. The way alcohol affects you depends on the world you live in.

4. The person with a satisfying philosophy of life lives in an entirely different world from the person who has none.

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychological studies show that the world another person lives in is often so different from yours or mine that we simply can't understand how he can possibly feel, act and think the way he does. It's pointed out that most of us do not think of our friends, relatives and associates as living in separate worlds at all. We tend to project, to assume that our world—the world as it seems to us, personally—is the way the world actually is, and that it seems that way to everyone. Nothing could be further from the fact.

2. True. Two people may come from the same family, have the same cultural and educational backgrounds, and yet live in utterly different worlds. Studies show that the way a person sees the world is colored, shaped and shaded by his own personality, and is to a marked extent a projection of his own character. That is why a dishonest person sees most people as untrustworthy whereas to honest people most people are honest. To one person the world may be filled with wonder; another person may live in a world tinged with pessimism and paranoia. This, as one authority points out, explains why some people—who seemingly have everything—may find the world boring and depressing, while others, who have to struggle against odds to survive, feel that it's a great world and have a zestful enthusiasm for living.

3. True. Oxford University psychologist Dr. Jeffrey Gray cites studies showing that the individual world in which each person lives has a marked effect on how he reacts to liquor. Alcohol was found to "have a perplexing variety of effects, making some people aggressive, others amorous, some tearful, others talkative, and so on."

4. True. The person who lacks a satisfying philosophy of life looks out upon a world that appears chaotic and utterly lacking in rhyme or reason. This promotes a feeling of vague and unsettling apprehension, which psychologists term "free-floating anxiety." Columbia University studies have shown that such an anxious person lives in a world where he feels threatened even by his friends.

If there's anything about it you don't like, you can take it back.

Now, that's a guarantee.

We're not kidding. This is a Black & Decker single-speed jig saw. It's guaranteed from the tip of its shoe to the end of its plug. For one whole year. It's one of the best jig saws you can buy—at one of the lowest price tags anywhere. It'll cut straight, curved or scroll lines in a wide variety of materials, and it's double insulated, for your safety.

But one of the best things about it is that it comes with a guarantee so good that if there's anything about it you don't like—you can return it to a participating retailer or Black & Decker Service Center. You can get a replacement saw or another type of power tool of equivalent value.

Kind of makes sense, doesn't it? That Black & Decker would offer a guarantee every bit as good as its products. (Proof of purchase required. Guarantee does not include tools used commercially or in rental service.)

¼ tsp. dill weed
2 tbsp. flour
1 (8-oz.) can stewed tomatoes
3 c. milk
1 (6½ or 7-oz.) can tuna, drained
2 tbsp. minced parsley
1 c. grated monterey jack cheese

Combine 2 tbsp. butter, celery, onion and potato. Cook over medium heat for 15 min., stirring often until potato is tender. Stir in salt, pepper, thyme, dill and flour. Add tomatoes, milk, tuna and parsley. Heat, stirring, until soup is thickened and boils. Stir in cheese and remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Makes 5 cups (4 dinner servings).

Menu suggestion: Serve with spinach salad, French bread, cake and milk.

Quiche Monterey

Pastry for single 9-inch crust (mix or homemade)
3 eggs
1 pt. half & half
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
⅛ tsp. pepper
3 tsp. freeze dried chopped chives
8 oz. monterey jack cheese, shredded or finely chopped.

Fit pastry into 9-inch pie plate. Bake at 450° 10-12 minutes until lightly browned. Beat eggs lightly. Stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into pastry shell and distribute cheese evenly with fork. Return to oven and bake 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 300° and bake 30-40 minutes longer or until custard is set in center. Makes 6 servings.

Menu suggestion: Serve with pickled beet salad, icy fruit cup and milk.

Milk has something for every budget.

Star Chat

By Peer J. Oppenheimer

Country Star Roy Clark: "Somehow I Slept Better When I Was Poor"

Peter C. Borsari

Roy Clark and his wife Barbara, who "chauffered" him his first year on the road.

"I get carried away with gadgets. I see something and I think I just have to have it. . . . I'm like a child. I use a thing once and then there's never time to use it again."

Big Roy Clark plopped his 5-11, 235-pound frame into the over-stuffed chair in the living room of his suite at Harrah's in Reno, Nev., where he had been playing to capacity crowds. Chunks of silver and turquoise Indian jewelry flashed on his belt, at his throat and on his wrists. From time to time he'd cross and uncross his legs and study the toes of his patent-leather boots as he pondered how to answer my questions.

FAMILY WEEKLY: I just watched your show, and I can't recall many performers who work so hard. How many shows like this did you do last year?

ROY: I traveled 300 days and covered 200,000 miles to perform at fairs, rodeos, livestock expositions, cut records, tape "Hee Haw" in Nashville and do nightclub acts in Las Vegas and here in Reno.

FW: Do you think your success is worth it?

ROY: Not if I lose my health.

FW: Didn't you suffer a heart attack four years ago?

ROY: They're beginning to wonder if I did have one. The doctors think it was a coronary insufficiency. That means my heart wasn't pumping enough blood. I was plain exhausted. I'd been running too hard and suffered from hyperventilation. My wife's always hollering "Slow down!" I think a woman spots trouble before a man does. I knew I was tired all the time, but I blamed it on other things. I'd say, "Oh, I'm tired because I got up early today. I'll correct that with a good night's sleep." But it kept taking longer to come back.

FW: Do you sleep well?

ROY: Seems like I've never been able to sleep. I don't know when it started. Maybe five, six years ago. I'm on the go about 20 hours and sleep maybe four or five hours. Even then I can't relax. I keep waking up. I'm on tranquilizers now, and that's helping, but I'm always tired. I guess it's inner tension.

FW: I understand you pilot your own plane. Doesn't that Country Star Roy Clark

Continued

add to your tension?

ROY: No, because I can relax when I'm flying.

FW: Didn't your wife chauffeur you around at one time?

ROY: That was the first year I went out on my own. I worked 345 days that year. We put everything we had in storage and got in the car and drove. I'd sleep in the back, and she'd drive to wherever I was to perform. While I was working, she'd sleep. Then we'd pile the stuff back into the car. Some days we covered 900 miles. I'll tell you one thing–I slept lots better then.

FW: How long have you been married?

ROY: Seventeen years. Barbara's my second wife.

FW: Any children?

ROY: Four, by my first wife. They're 22, 20, 19 and 18. I've a married daughter and a son in medical school. My 19-year-old son is still searching and the 18-year-old, well, he has the ability but not the desire to be in show business. He plays the guitar and he's good.

FW: Where do you call home?

ROY: I've got a house in Maryland near Annapolis, on two and a half acres. It's not really what we wanted, but I was raised in the Washington, D.C., area and it was all we could afford at the time. What I'd really like is an older place, like Tara in "Gone With the Wind." I wouldn't allow anything modern within a certain distance of the house. You'd have to come to it by horse and carriage. I think I'm living in the wrong century.

FW: Did you know from the beginning that you wanted to turn to music and performing?

ROY: Oh, I went through all those boyhood dreams. I was a real baseball nut for a while. I even had a chance to try out with the old St. Louis Browns once; but the pay was low and I had to pay my way there and all my expenses, and I couldn't manage that.

FW: Since you're the only country and western performer to win all three top country awards in one year, there seems no limit to your earning ability. What do you do with all your money?

ROY: I buy things. Radio stations, racehorses, duplex houses, apartment complexes. I have two boats–a 51-foot houseboat and a runabout for water-skiing –and two motorcycles. I also have two planes, two cars and a jeep. I just bought a classy old Rolls. I get carried away with gadgets. I see something and I think I just have to have it. For instance, I have this walkie-talkie. It's probably rotted by now, and I haven't used it once. Then there's the Sony recorder set and all the electrical stuff. I'm like a child. I use a thing once and then there's never time to use it again.

"My wife's always hollering 'Slow down!' I think a woman spots trouble before a man does. I knew I was tired all the time, but I blamed it on other things."

FW: How well do you get along with people?

ROY: I think I'm too easy. I go along with everything. It has to be really bad before I say anything. I don't lose my temper often now because when I do, I can't breathe. I went through a stage of hitting things like doors and walls. Not any more.

FW: Do your fans ever upset you?

ROY: No, because the thing you are after is recognition. At the same time, I like to melt into a crowd and go unnoticed. That's asking for two worlds, I know–instant recognition and still wanting to be alone.

FW: Why do you think country music has become so popular?

ROY: Because of its exposure. TV helped the most. Lots of so-called pop artists have recorded it and brought their fans in, making them aware of it.

FW: "Hee Haw" is now syndicated to more stations than played it when it was on CBS. Do you feel you owe a lot of your success to this show?

ROY: It was the crowning of my career. People became aware of me overnight. Oh, they had known my face and my name, but it wasn't until "Hee Haw" that they put the name and face together. Before that I was just "that heavy-set guy who plays guitar." fw

The Doctor Lets You In

America's Terrible Lice Explosion

Americans may be approaching zero population growth—but our lice are not. Lice, which used to be associated with skid-row inhabitants, have increased by an astounding 800 percent in the last ten years. So many children now suffer from head lice that some schools have been forced to close. The first symptom of lice is itching. This is because lice lay their eggs, called nits, at hair follicles. Nits can be found anywhere, but are most prevalent in hairy portions of the body, including eyelashes. The first proof of lice is minute red bite marks, or actually finding the lice in hair, or seams of clothing. (It's hard to find the nits, because that requires a magnifying glass.) Lice are spread through body contact, clothing, towels, bed linen, combs, etc. The big danger: typhus. How to remedy? Dry clean your clothing, or else keep it in dry heat for 30 minutes at 200°F.—or discard. Get your doctor to prescribe Kwell (gamma benzene hexachloride), massage it into the affected areas of the body and wash off 24 hours later. In the past, mercury ointment (blue ointment), DDT or kerosene were used. Don't you use them—they're much too toxic.

Jobmanship

Land a New Job—Without Want Ads or Employment Agencies

When most people seek a better job, they depend solely on employment agencies and help-wanted ads. Yet the right kind of personal letter sent to selected company officials —who have not advertised any job— can be your best tool for obtaining a new position. In his book "The Professional Job Changing System," job-hunting expert Robert J. Jameson says, "If you can generate an interview and impress an important executive with your ability, he'll find a way to take you aboard even if he has to create a job." The most effective first letters, he reveals, don't mention salary. Instead, in two pages of single-space copy, present your previous accomplishments together with what you can do and how this will produce results for the company. Address letters to specific executives by name, not simply by title. Standard & Poor's or Dun & Bradstreet's directories of corporations provide the names. Also look for job leads in your newspaper's business pages, which feature newly promoted executives. Newly promoted people commonly seek personnel from outside their company—so write to them. Also very productive are letters to successful people who graduated from your school, especially if mailed to their home addresses. If you think your age is a job-hunting problem—that you are either too young or too old for the position you want—direct your campaign toward executives in your own age bracket or older. (Your library's "D & B Reference Book of Corporate Management" provides the birth dates of company officials.) If a firm you're particularly drawn to doesn't reply, follow up after three weeks with another letter restating your interest in the company and the contribution you could make. This frequently produces good results.

Here's My Recipe To Stop Inflation

John Neubauer

"How did we get into a situation where the rate of inflation, now almost 11 percent, is forecast to continue at that pace through the end of 1974? Where the rate of growth for the economy in the second half of this year is expected to be zero? Where a consensus tells us that the unemployment rate will be nearly six percent by the end of 1974? How did we get here—and, more important, how do we get out?"

During the first half of 1974, prices in the U.S. rose at an annual rate of nearly 11 percent. The cost of buying the bare essentials of life has become so great that a family of four with an annual income of $12,500 has almost no discretionary income left. There is certainly nothing left for savings after they make the rent or mortgage payment, pay the utilities bills, buy groceries for the month, put gasoline into the car, clothe the children for school and pay for medical care. A $12,500 family has little left for recreation and other "nonessential" purchases. As for that proverbial rainy day—it has already arrived.

Why? How did we get into a situation where the rate of inflation, now almost 11 percent, is forecast to continue at that pace through the end of 1974? Where the rate of growth for the economy in the second half of this year is expected to be zero? Where a consensus tells us that the unemployment rate will be nearly six percent by the end of 1974? How did we get here—and, more important, how do we get out?

The worldwide food shortage and the pricing policies of the oil-producing countries have increased the cost of oil and disrupted the world financial markets. In addition, the worldwide industrial boom during the first half of 1973 put a severe drain on many U.S. resources. Why? Because the price of our resources became extremely attractive on the world market after the post-1970 dollar devaluations. Goods now flow to foreign buyers at lower prices—and so they have become more costly on the domestic market. Meanwhile, the price we paid for imports also increased as the dollar depreciated.

Many of the President's advisers are continuing to recommend "that ole time religion" of stringent monetary and fiscal policy. I believe we need to look for other alternatives. That is not to say that I think the federal government should increase spending and pursue a liberal monetary policy. On the contrary: As the Interim Study of Inflation of the Joint Economic Committee, of which I am the Ranking Member, suggests, there is a grave need to pursue a prudent fiscal policy. The government must not feed inflation by creating deficit spending at a time when the rate of inflation has already risen to unacceptable heights.

But there are things we can do to alter the rising cost of food, the spiraling costs of utilities and the shortage of funds available for housing.

First, the outlook for food prices is not good. The Department of Agriculture estimates that food prices will be rising at a rate of 18 to 19 percent during the second half of this year. This is mainly attributable to the severe drought in the Midwest. Because we lacked a national food policy in the past, we now have virtually no reserves left. Efforts must be made to reduce the constraints on farm output, which are the result of three shortages: 1) fuel, 2) fertilizer, 3) farm machinery and equipment:

- Congress should set up an export-licensing system for agricultural commodities in short supply.
- Low-income persons must not be allowed to suffer even more as food prices rise; adjustments in the coverage and payment scales of the Food Stamp program must be put into effect to compensate for the upsurge in prices.
- The government must make a major effort to reach voluntary agreements with our major trading partners to reduce the exports of feed grains substantially below the levels of the past two years. Another Russian wheat deal must not be allowed to happen.

We must attack the fuel-cost problem. Utility and other energy prices have accounted for up to one-quarter of the total rise in the price level this year. The current price ceilings on domestic crude oil should be continued. We have forgotten too easily the gasoline lines of last winter, and have practically abandoned our efforts at conservation.

The need to conserve energy remains basic, and the federal government should take additional measures to encourage the American people to this end. Any consideration to assist electric utilities in financing their capital-expansion programs must be accompanied by a revision in their rate structure, to reverse the present policy of making unit costs cheaper as usage increases. I am working on a proposal for legislation that would carry out this aim.

A slight easing in monetary policy should be adopted—as proposed in the Joint Economic Committee's report. Given a prudent fiscal policy, a small easing should not have much impact on the inflation rate. However, we must assure that sectors such as housing, agriculture, public utilities, small business, and state and local governments can borrow needed funds. So a system for channeling credit should be created and implemented now!

And what about people who have no incomes at all? With forecasters projecting abominably high rates of unemployment right into 1975, I believe we must have a public-service jobs program in the works, ready to be triggered when the unemployment rate reaches 5.5 percent. I had introduced such legislation early in the Congress, and the JEC report advocates this plan. It would create approximately 500,000 jobs by the time the unemployment rate reaches six percent. But the federal budget would have to be trimmed in other areas to fit this program into the prudent spending ceiling of $300 billion that has been recommended.

If all these proposals are followed, we will have a good chance of reducing inflation and its undesirable impacts over the next 12 to 16 months. But if we don't start taking action now, if we go into 1975 without a program for affirmative action, we can expect to come out of 1975 with the same frustrating problems of unemployment, recession and inflation that we confront today.

Smart Cooking For Special Occasions

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen features a buffet that can be prepared after work. But it does take planning. The night before, make the pie and Ratatouille; chill Cold Duck.

Working Girl's Buffet

Elizabeth Gee

Arranged on a gleaming table, Chicken Livers Scottsdale, Ratatouille and fluffy white rice.

MARILYN'S MENU

Salted Almonds
Chicken Livers Scottsdale*
Ratatouille* Fluffy White Rice
Salad Hot Rôlls
Butter or Margarine
Chilled Cold Duck
Deep-Dish Plum Pie
Coffee Tea

*Recipe given

CHICKEN LIVERS SCOTTSDALE

6 tablespoons butter or margarine
1½ lbs. chicken livers
2 teaspoons dark molasses
4 teaspoons prepared mustard, preferably Dijon-type
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
¼ cup brandy
3 tablespoons light or dark rum
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Hot, cooked, buttered white rice

1. Heat butter in large skillet or top of chafing dish until hot but not browned. Toss in chicken livers and sauté, stirring, until browned but still slightly pink inside.

2. Stir in molasses, mustard, salt and pepper. Combine brandy and rum. Add half to liver mixture; heat to boiling, stirring. Sprinkle with parsley, keep warm.

3. Just before serving warm remaining brandy and rum, ignite with match and pour quickly over liver mixture.

4. Serve with rice.

Makes 3-4 servings

RATATOUILLE
(Vegetable Stew)

3 cloves garlic
1 lb. (6 medium) zucchini
1 lb. (4 large) green peppers
1 lb. (3 large) yellow onions
1 lb. (1 medium) eggplant
2 lbs. (4 large) tomatoes
¾ cup vegetable oil or olive oil
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. Prepare vegetables for sautéing: Slice garlic thinly, cut zucchini into ¼-inch-thick slices, green pepper into ½-inch-wide strips, slice onions thinly, cut unpeeled eggplant into 1 inch cubes and quarter tomatoes.

2. In large skillet, heat ¼ cup oil. Add garlic, zucchini and green pepper. Sauté five minutes, stirring. Remove to a bowl.

3. In additional ¼ cup oil, sauté onion and eggplant for 5 minutes, stirring. Add to zucchini-green pepper mixture.

4. In ¼ cup oil, sauté tomato quarters for 2 minutes, stirring.

5. Turn all vegetables into skillet with tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper; stir gently to mix. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer covered 10 minutes. Uncover and simmer 5-10 minutes, stirring once or twice, until liquid is practically all absorbed. Vegetables should be soft and tender, but retain their individual identity. Serve hot or cold. Makes 8 servings

WHERE DO FAT DOCTORS GO TO LOSE WEIGHT?

TO THESE TWO FAMOUS DOCTORS THAT'S WHERE!

You can be fat free forever

They say: "You must lose 14 lbs. the first two weeks OR PAY NOTHING."

How about instructors at Weight Loss Clinics? Airline stewardesses, heads of corporations? Where do they go to lose weight? To these very specialists.

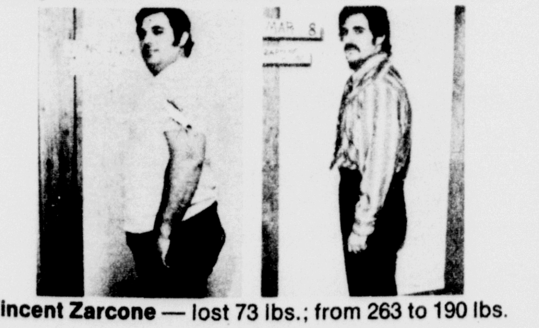
When a new reducing method is so successful that employees of other systems use it, you know it must be terribly effective.

Such is the case with the remarkable system developed by Dr. L. Melvin Elting and Dr. Seymour Isenberg. Dr. Elting is a Board Certified surgeon and one of America's best-known obesity specialists. Once 202 lbs., he lost 50 lbs. in 6 months himself with the plan and has remained at the same weight for over nine years. And Dr. Isenberg, his partner, also a prominent obesity specialist, went from 198 to 158 with it. Even more impressive: they've tested the plan on thousands of their patients. And they've proven that it works.

Among the thousands of others who've lost weight for good with this radically different approach:

Bruce Funt — lost 145 lbs.; from $389\frac{1}{4}$ to 243 lbs.

Mary Toriello — lost 125 lbs.; from 272 to 147 lbs.



Vincent Zarcone — lost 73 lbs.; from 263 to 190 lbs.

Kenneth Lasini — lost 98 lbs.; from $281\frac{1}{2}$ to $183\frac{1}{2}$ lbs.
John Falcone — lost 52 lbs.; from $203\frac{1}{2}$ to $151\frac{1}{4}$ lbs.
Robert Harralla — lost 78 lbs.; from 240 to $162\frac{1}{4}$ lbs.
Anthony Toriello — lost 67 lbs.; from 227 to 160 lbs.
Robert Haeussler — lost $88\frac{1}{4}$ lbs.; from $261\frac{1}{2}$ to $173\frac{1}{4}$ lbs.

Among those patients have been Weight Watcher instructors who had to lose weight to hold their jobs, airline stewardesses and heads of major corporations, and a number of embarrassingly overweight doctors who had—like most doctors—treated obesity in the traditional way to see it fail time and time again.

Dr. Elting's 5 promises to you

His promise to you is that you will lose 14 lbs. the first two weeks. That you'll continue to lose as all his other patients did. That you'll reach a healthy normal weight—without constant scale-watching and calorie-counting, exercising, dietetic foods, dangerous pills, boring diets, or other hardships and discomforts. That you won't be courting ketosis—which could in the immediate future be even more dangerous than obesity! And that you'll never go hungry. (His plan will let you have more to eat than you can possibly want.)

Thousands have gladly paid hundreds of dollars for treatments. You can now obtain his entire program, complete, by mail—for no more than you'd pay for a single fattening restaurant meal. Let us explain why this plan accomplishes such seeming miracles.

Obesity is a disease.
And certain foods are the medicine.

Dr. Elting acknowledges obesity for what it is—a disease. A disease for which the medicine is certain foods. These foods—which you can enjoy along with a groaning table of other truly irresistible foods—share this trait: They are "fatabolizing." That is, they satisfy like fattening foods, but help you lose weight instead of gaining it.

With this plan, you soon reach the point where it takes less to satisfy your hunger. Meanwhile, you can eat whenever you want. And eat virtually anything. Fats, fried foods. Six hamburgers in a row, if you like. Foods you've been denied in previous weight-loss programs.

And in a little while longer you reach the Fat Free Level that is just right for you. (The program explains how to tell.) Then a marvelous thing happens.

You can eat anything and not gain weight ever again. Sure you'll want to keep a check on your weight, now that you're slim and youthful looking again. But now you're in such great shape, it'll be a pleasure to look at the scales each day again. And that's it! You're home free. Fat free. Forever!

Now here are some of those other advantages Dr. Elting promises:

Check all these other advantages.

1. Name any restaurant. You can order a meal there and enjoy it even while you're losing weight. Any nationality! And you needn't even worry about the salt they season it with.
2. The lady of the house needn't bother cooking special foods for the man of the house. Never!
3. Your weight not only goes down—it's redistributed in a much more appealing way.
4. You lose that weight very, very much faster than you gained it.
5. You'll have softer, younger looking skin.
6. You'll avoid the bad breath, constipation, fatigue, nervousness, and irritation you get with so many diets.
7. You'll feel more vigorous, be much more attractive, and look better in your clothes.
8. You'll probably have fewer colds.
9. You'll learn some fascinating tricks that will help those "fatisfying" foods perform their miracles. Such as:
   - How your camera can help you lose.
   - A new, much more sensuous, more enjoyable way to eat. (It's why gourmets are rarely fat.)
   - Why you should never eat standing up—especially at buffet dinners.
   - A 100-yard walk with two 50-lb. sacks of flour that you'll never forget. (This trick alone could be worth far more than the small price of the plan. What it teaches you about your fat could help steer you away from a heart attack.)

Why spend another day worrying about a disease when the treatment is so simple?

THE "FATABOLIZING" FACTOR

Imagine! Certain foods that satisfy like fattening foods, but make you lose weight instead of gaining it!

Discover the plan that has worked for 6500 overweight men and women, including instructors of Weight Watchers and doctors afflicted with the same frustrating disease you've been fighting so unsuccessfully. Or else you wouldn't have read this far, right?

TRY IT 30 DAYS ON THIS NO-RISK BASIS

Order Dr. Elting's plan now on this completely risk-free basis. If you don't lose 14 lbs. the first two weeks with this plan . . . or if after 30 days you're not overjoyed with the results . . . just return it and we'll refund every penny.

Mail the coupon now. Don't let another good resolution go down the drain along with those shining promises you've made to yourself before.

These two reducing wizards have treated over 6,000 obese people without a single failure! In their hunger-free plan, certain fatabolizing foods can bring you to your own fat free level and keep you there for life!

How your Horoscope can bring you wealth, love, success and happiness.

by Norman P. Kennedy

Astrology Today

PRESENTED BY THE AMERICAN ASTROLOGICAL ASSOCIATION
"The Nation's Largest Astrological Society"
© 1973 American Astrological Assn.

Did you know your horoscope could mean the difference between happiness or sorrow; between success or failure?

Picture a long room with doors at each end. In this room there are money, attractive persons of the opposite sex, books that tell you the secret of happiness and many other valuable articles. But, also in this room are bottomless pits, traps, hostile persons and dangerous beasts chained in various places around the room. You must walk through this room, but you may take out of it anything you can.

Now if you had a choice, would you choose to 1) go through the room blindfolded or 2) go through the room with your eyes open and with written instructions on which places and people to visit or avoid.

Of course, all of us would pick the second choice in a case such as this. Isn't it ridiculous, then, that we would choose to go through life, the same situation, blindfolded! Even when there is a means to go through life with a map and our eyes wide open! The means provided is Astrology. The map is our astrological horoscope.

How does it work? Nature's cosmos imprints each of us at the time of birth – when the umbilical cord is cut. We then become ourselves. Until the cord is cut, we are part of our mother. Why or how we presently do not know. The movement of the large solar bodies then times potentials for events in our lives. Astrology does not cause events but is timing of events. But, it's not fortune telling. It's a prediction of potentials which free will can override.

A natal horoscope analysis contains the best psychological analysis of yourself that you can get today. In addition, a natal horoscope analysis includes discussions on the following: financial outlook; taxes and inheritances; early home environment; relationships with family, relatives and parents; lovelife and marriage; children; career and occupation; hopes; wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes.

Many people think that astrology only appeals to "way out" unscientific people. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, studies show that astrology appeals most to intelligent and logical people. Famous scientists Galileo, Carl Jung, Johannes Kepler, Roger Bacon, Tycho Bache and Albert Einstein all believed in astrology.

Anyone familiar with Jackie Onassis' horoscope will be amazed with the uncanny way that it has predicted her love life. For example, Jackie's Cancer lies on the cusp of her eighth house. This indicates that she will marry a man connected with water. Her first husband, the late President Kennedy, was a P. T. boat Captain in World War II and also enjoyed sailing. And, of course, her current husband, Aristotle Onassis, is a super-wealthy shipping magnate. Her Sagittarian rising sign shows that she prefers foreign countries and people. Her husband, Aristotle, is Greek and Jackie is known for her jet-setting image. Finally, the planets Jupiter and Venus symbolize money. The fact that these two planets fall in her seventh house, the House of Partners, indicates that she will have a very wealthy husband.

Your horoscope can help you be in the right place at the right time. Your horoscope can help you avoid disasters, while guiding you to your beneficial opportunities.

Did you know that astrology helped the Allies win World War II? The Allies employed astrologers. The Axis powers started out employing astrologers. But, this was ceased early when the famous astrologer, Karl Ernst Krafft, predicted the exact time and place of an attempt on Hitler's life in 1939. Hitler thought the astrologers were conspiring against him, so they were imprisoned.

Hitler turned back to astrology – too late. He read his horoscope in the last moments of the war as Berlin burned around him.

On the other hand, astrologers aided the Allies in forecasting the Axis' moves. The most famous astrologer, Louis de Wohl, employed by the British Government, predicted the exact events leading to the downfall of Mussolini. He gained the faith of the American military, when he predicted Pearl Harbor a year before it happened.

More on avoiding disaster, came these stories from a recent article in the Miami Herald newspaper. The article tells the story of Mary Kelly, a Miami computer programmer, who heeded the advice of her horoscope which warned her of a wrong medical diagnosis. She avoided an unnecessary operation that would have left her a cripple.

Your horoscope can bring you wealth. Famous business tycoon, J. P. Morgan, used astrology to acquire his fortune. Morgan did not make a financial move without checking his natal horoscope forecast.

From an article in the Miami Herald came this story: "Stockbrokers on Wall Street are as likely to call an astrologer in this decade as Hollywood film stars would call a psychiatrist in the last. David Williams, a 75 year-old retired financial expert who lives in Clearwater, has made $150,000 from the stock market in 13 years by using astrology as an investment guide."

Your horoscope can show you the way to success and happiness in love and marriage. Horoscopes of Grace Kelly and Jackie Kennedy predicted their current successful marriages. Grace Kelly to Prince Rainier and Jackie Kennedy to Aristotle Onassis. As with these famous people, your horoscope can help you find and keep a lasting and meaningful love relationship.

Now and through the ages, a good natal horoscope analysis has meant the difference between success and failure. Will you miss your success opportunities? Will you stumble into pitfalls you could have avoided?

Today, right this moment, you can have your natal horoscope cast and analyzed. You can get it for only the cost to make your duplicate copy. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process – FREE. The article below will tell you how. The means are available, but the choice is yours.

HOW TO GET YOUR NATAL HOROSCOPE FOR NEARLY THE COST OF MAKING COPIES.

by John F. Ford

Send me your exact time and place of birth. I'll cast and analyze your natal horoscope for research purposes. You may have a duplicate copy of your horoscope for only $3.00 - which includes the cost to make your copy plus 50¢ postage and handling. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process - FREE, because of the fact that we must produce your horoscope for research anyhow.

Your natal horoscope will consist of nine pages and over 3,000 words. Your natal horoscope will contain your psychological analysis plus a discussion of the following: your lovelife; financial outlook; marriage, family and children relationships; career and occupations; hopes, wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes. A horoscope of this type would cost up to $250 if done by an astrologer.

I will cast your horoscope with the help of our 360 - 65 I.B.M. computer, which contains over 24 million bits of information. Your horoscope will not be the worthless type found in paperbacks. Your natal horoscope will be cast from your exact time and place of birth for you and you alone.

THERE'S ABSOLUTELY NO CATCH. I need this information for my astrological research. I am looking for certain planet configurations. If you are chosen as a research subject, I will mail to you a research questionnaire. If you fill out and return this questionnaire, you will be entitled to extra bonuses.

There is no need to worry about finding out about an unavoidable coming disaster thru your chart. As mentioned, astrology deals in potentials. Your free will can override potentials if you know about them. In any case, the policy of qualified astrologers is positive astrology. If there is something negative in your chart, you are told what you can do to make it positive.

To get your horoscope thru this special opportunity, simply fill out the research computer form and mail to the address given on the form. Include the $3.00 copy cost plus 50¢ postage and handling for each horoscope or charge your credit card. There is a limit of two per family. If you don't know your exact time of birth, fill in 12:00 PM.

If you have any questions, call me, John F. Ford, president, The American Astrological Association. Telephone me at (216) 478-2171. Thank you!

COMPUTER DATA ENTRY FORM · PLEASE PRINT

I submit my birth data for research. I am now eligible to promptly receive my 3,000 word natal horoscope for only a $3 cost for my duplicate copy plus 50¢ postage and handling. One or two names from my household may be submitted. (Limit of 2–no exceptions)

It seems women hardly dress up any more—except for weddings and confirmations. But for those of you who do enjoy a touch of festivity in your dress, here's a flattering silhouette that's easy to make and lovely to wear. Long, slim sleeves end in a deep ruffle, as does the skirt, slender through the hipline. Closure is via a back zipper.

Fabric suggestions: crepe, silk or a blend. Size 12 takes 3½ yards of 44-inch material. Standard body measurements for size 12 are: Bust 34, Waist 25½, Hips 36.

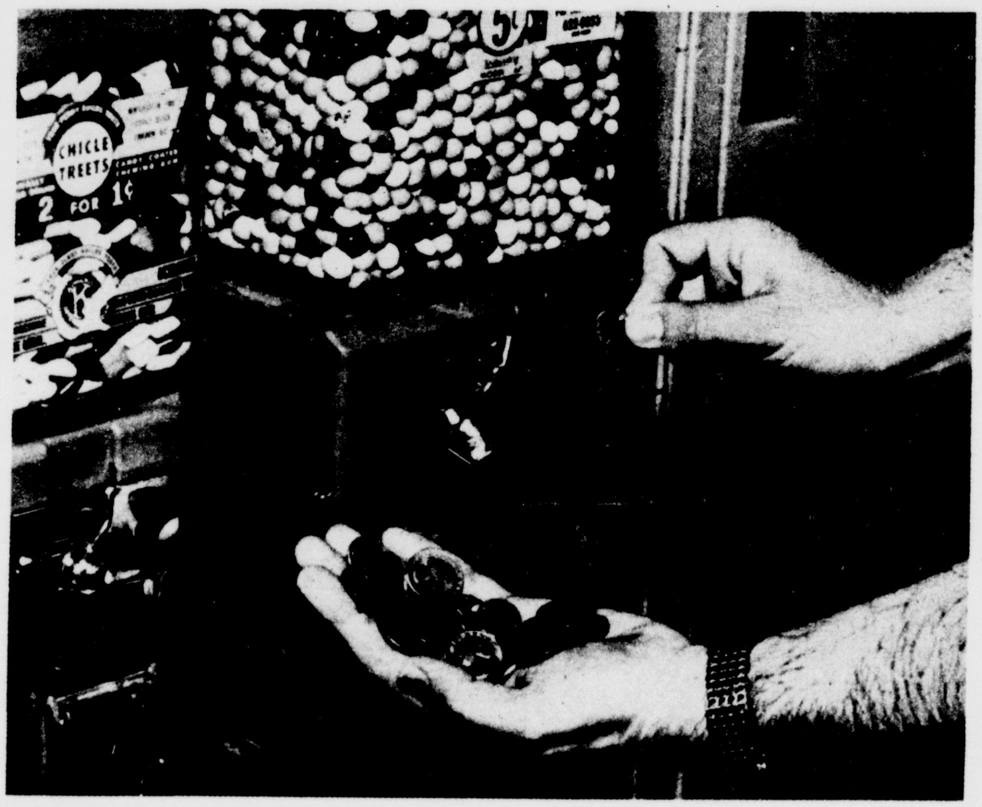
How You Can Make a Killing in Coins...

That May Be Slipping Through Your Fingers Every Day!

"Too fantastic to be true," my wife and I were told. But we discovered coins to be the safest way to make money. Just a few minutes a day is all it takes for you to start cashing in on this bonanza.



Have you spent a coin today worth more than its face value? By training yourself to watch for valuable coins you can easily double or triple your money.

Stop giving away valuable pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters!

Do you know what the coins in your pocket or purse are really worth?

Is it worth a few minutes of your time each day to find out, if it can mean earning enough extra cash to buy a few of the luxuries in life before you are too old to enjoy them? Then continue to read and find out how profitable your coins can be.

In case you missed the news. Collecting is the craze now in the U.S.

More than at any other time people are collecting everything. From oil paintings to old magazines. From records to plates. With coins heading the list as the most popular and profitable item. Yes. The very coins you spend and receive every day are being turned into fortunes.

Now you can discover how to cash in on this bonanza by taking advantage of the collector's demand for your find.

Hit the jackpot big and you can make more money than you would be able to earn in a week's time at your present job.

Don't think for one minute it can't happen to you. It can happen to anyone.

For example, a taxi driver who knew nothing about coins turned a penny into $55 profit by accident. Now he examines carefully every coin he receives in fares.

Or, for just a minute imagine yourself as one of the lucky owners of a 1973 dime worth an incredible $35 (a slight error actually made the dime increase in value almost overnight).

It's so easy to make extra money this way, anyone can do it. There are literally thousands of collectors with plenty of cash waiting to buy your find... at a big profit to you.

People just like you are making a killing in coins every day — with one important exception... they know what to look for.

It's hard to believe but it's true. And so ridiculously simple.

To start making money in coins you don't have to do anything different than you are doing right now. There is no investment to make. You can train yourself to be a coin expert... and learn to recognize valuable coins. When you know what to look for — you profit. When you don't — you will spend the coin and someone else will make the killing.

Just think of the money that may be slipping through your fingers each year because you are not in the habit of watching your coins. There is nothing to lose... and the money you can make is unlimited.

If you happen to discover one of the rarest of coins (17,000 were originally distributed) you would make $28,000.

Or, you could make almost $1,000 profit if you discovered one of the 7 million coins worth 100 to 1000 times their face value.

Even if you don't discover one of these extremely valuable coins, it is possible for you to add a coin of value to your pot-of-gold almost every day. A penny worth $2... a dime worth $7... or a quarter worth $16 change hands constantly just waiting to be discovered. Not a bad reward for doing nothing more than going through your coins daily.

The trick is to know what you are looking for. A slight difference — like a special marking — can make two identical coins vary considerably in value... as much as $1,000 in fact.

You could easily have a coin worth a lot of money only to pass it on to someone else for no more than face value.

I guarantee this will never happen to you if you have a copy of the book that tells you how to make money in coins.

The book is entitled "How to Make a Killing in Coins." Everything you need to know to make a killing is included in this book. It is written so anyone can understand. And profit.

Every U.S. coin and its present value is included — along with the names and addresses of several hundred collectors who will buy your coins at the current market value. The tips, advice and guidance you will receive make this book a gold mine.

Even though it may mean thousands of dollars to you, the book is priced at only $4.95. It will really open your eyes to this incredibly simple way of making money. For example.

- You will discover how to avoid wasting your time. Go after the coins that guarantee you the greatest return.
- You will discover what coins are valuable and what profits you can expect.
- You will discover which coins you should save for future sale... to earn the most profit.
- You will learn how to avoid the one mistake almost everyone makes that will cause valuable coins to be almost worthless.

You will be amazed at how fast your new found knowledge will start making money for you. Soon you will be the envy of your relatives and friends. They will be coming to you for advice on which coins you think are valuable enough to keep.

One word of caution. When you start saving and selling coins your friends may ask why you bother "that penny is only worth 10¢...or that dime just 25¢" they might say. Pay no attention to them. In one year's time if you managed to acquire $500 face value in valuable coins just think of the profits you would have.

But make no mistake — without a book like this you don't stand a chance.

You Can't Lose

You can make a killing in coins with absolutely no risk. The coins you discover will never be worth less than their actual face value. The same is true of the book, "How to Make a Killing in Coins." There is absolutely no risk. If you don't like the book when it arrives, return it for an immediate refund. Or, keep it and use it for a full year. If you are not convinced you have discovered the easiest, safest way to make money, return the book. You still get your $4.95 back.

Three Reports — FREE

The value of coins can go up overnight (remember the 1973 dime). To guarantee you will make the most money on each coin, a special monthly report entitled the "How to News" has been prepared to keep you current and up to date. If you order the book right now, you will receive free, a three month trial subscription.

Make a Killing Now

The boom in coins is on. More and more people are discovering the fantastic profits to be made. The time to start is now. Don't wait another minute. Every coin you spend before your copy of the book arrives could be the one that will make filling out the coupon well worth your time and effort. To order your copy mail the coupon along with $4.95 cash, check or money order to: LINCOLN PRESS — 4444 South Sheridan — Tulsa, Oklahoma 74145.

Please rush me my guaranteed copy of "How to Make a Killing in Coins." Here's my $4.95 as payment in full. Also send me the "How to News" reports for three months — free — so I will get the most out of my coins. If I'm not satisfied I may return the book anytime within the next year for a full refund.

ANGELITA
First Lady of the bullring

Angela Hernandez has killed eight bulls. And now she can kill them in her native Spain. Her previous victims fell in South America because in Spain it has been against the law for a woman to fight bulls on foot. Now, after a three-year, one-woman battle Angela has caused the laws to be changed by a decree of the Spanish Supreme Court. In Spain, where women are probably less liberated than elsewhere, this was quite a feat for Ms. Hernandez. A delicate blonde, she wields the 15-pound cape as though it were a silk hankie.

Jerry Cammarata

What makes a person do all those nutty things that get recorded each year in the famous "Guinness Book of World Records"? Jerry Cammarata, who holds a world record for singing 75 hours in a bathtub, explains it this way: "I break records because they represent ambition, excitement — and, most of all, fun. Nobody pays me to do these things. In fact, it cost me $1,580 to chalk up that singing record: $50 for an old bathtub, $20 to decorate it with psychedelic flowers, $150 for a U-haul truck, $200 for musicians to accompany me, $100 for a driver, $1,000 for public relations, $35 for gas and oil—and, to my dismay, $25 for double-parking my bathtub in front of a public toilet."

QUOTE: Is there a crisis in fish prices? Some fishermen say so: "While two-thirds of all seafood eaten in the U.S. is imported, U.S. fishermen can't sell many of their fresh-caught fish. They're told, 'The market can't handle your catch.' This is not true. What is true is that most imported fish is frozen —and so is a lot of so-called fresh fish. While the Florida fisherman has been getting 8-15 cents a pound for bluefish, wholesale markets have been selling them at 35-75 cents a pound. Until they went on strike recently, New Jersey whiting fishermen were making two cents a pound. The wholesale prices for whiting have been running 30-40 cents a pound. If the public knew the half of it about these bargains they don't get, a hue and cry would go up!" From Mike Weiner, President of the Florida Fishermen's Marketing Association. UNQUOTE.

JOHNNIE RAY
Walkin' his baby back home

Is Johnnie Ray still singing? The answer is yes. In the '50's—back even before Elvis—Ray sent teenagers swooning with such songs as "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," "Cry," "The Little White Cloud That Cried" and "Just Walkin' in the Rain." Now, some 20 years later, he is still singing the same songs and packing 'em in. Ray recently finished a seven-week tour in England, where he stopped in London's Hyde Park to talk with nine-year-old Simone Loreng. From the look of things, they got along famously.

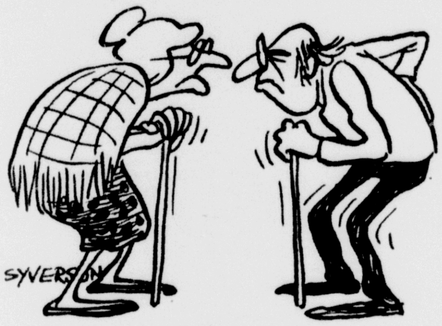
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



NECK AND NECK

"You're a pain in the neck,"
My wife often would say
When I caused her annoyance
In some silly way.
With passage of years,
That old pain is still there,
In the back of her neck
And just under her hair.
As a matter of fact
I've grown more of a wreck
And also admit
I've a pain in my neck.
But I don't cause my wife's
And she doesn't cause mine:
We both have arthritis
In joints of the spine.

NEW FROM MUTUAL OF OMAHA... MONEY BACK DISABILITY INCOME INSURANCE

Sure, we have a plan that can provide up to $1,200.00 a month...as much as $40.00 a day both IN and OUT of the hospital...

but suppose you never get sick or hurt? In that case, we'll return all your premiums when your policy matures at age 65.

New MONEY BACK plans offer first-class protection for working men and women. There's a Homemaker's plan for housewives, too.

With most disability income plans, you buy security, and that's all. With this new Mutual of Omaha Money Back plan, you buy security plus the guarantee that if you keep your policy in force to age 65 you must get back at least as much as you pay in premiums.

Meanwhile, you're covered for up to $1,200.00 a month... as much as $40.00 a day disability income benefits when a covered sickness or injury keeps you from working. These benefits are payable both IN and OUT of the hospital. They are yours to spend as you please for any purpose you choose.

Moreover, they are payable in addition to any hospital-surgical-medical benefits you may receive. They are payable both during and after hospitalization. They are payable even if you never go to the hospital.

As a breadwinner, man or woman, married or single, you can select the monthly disability income benefit you qualify for. From $100.00 to $1,200.00 a month can be yours when you're laid up... all yours to use as you see fit.

If the benefits you receive total less than the premiums you've paid in at age 65, you will receive the difference in a lump-sum payment. If you have never been sick—never collected disability income benefits, you receive a 100% refund... all the premiums you've paid in are returned to you.

THERE ARE SEVEN REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD CONSIDER THIS MUTUAL OF OMAHA PLAN

1. You may qualify for a plan that can provide up to $1,200.00 monthly income benefits (up to $40.00 a day) to spend as you see fit if you're sick or hurt and can't work, or refund all your premiums when your policy matures at age 65 if you stay well.

2. These disability benefits are provided both IN and OUT of the hospital.

3. Your coverage becomes effective immediately for new sickness contracted or injury received after your policy is in force. Pre-existing conditions (old health problems) will not be covered for 12 months. This applies to such conditions shown on your application and not excluded from coverage.

4. Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness.

5. Your policy protects you as a passenger in any kind of aircraft—even a private plane.

6. Benefits are provided for disabilities incurred both on and off the job. They are available in addition to any Workmen's Compensation and Employer's Liability coverage.

7. You have this renewal agreement: no matter how often you may receive benefits, Mutual of Omaha guarantees to renew your policy as long as premiums are paid on time. Your premium can be changed only when changed for all policies of the same form and class in your state.

Please note that the amount of the benefit, the premium, and the deductible period vary with the plan you qualify for. And that these disability income benefits are not payable for losses caused by war or military service; narcotics, unless prescribed by a physician; childbirth, pregnancy, or resulting complications. Coverage terminates at retirement or age 65, whichever comes first.

Find out about this fine protection that can cover you both in and out of the hospital. For full facts without obligation, talk to a Mutual of Omaha professional.
